Tire Inflation Important In Fall Driving

Autumn is a time of year when motorists could increase the chances of an accident and waste gasoline if they fail to maintain proper tire inflation, the Tire Industry Safety council cautions.

"Cold weather reduces tire inflation pressure," said Council Chairman Malcolm R. Lovell, Jr. "To be on the safe side, it's a good idea during this season to check tire pressure frequently to be sure it's at the level recommended by the vehicle manufacturer."

Underinflation, he said, is a tire's worst enemy. "Underinflation may eventually result in tire failure due to excessive flexing and-or tire heat build-up. If that happens an accident could result."

Lovell said underinflated tires also waste gasoline. "Underinflated, soft tires make the engine work harder to overcome increased rolling resistance. The more work your engine does, the more gas it uses," he said.

"Motorists can recover up to three per cent of their gasoline mileage that would otherwise be wasted simply by correcting underinflation in their tires," he declared.

A tire is considered seriously underinflated when it is four or more pounds below the recommended air pressure.

Motorists should refer to the placard on the vehicle or the owner's manual for the inflation pressures recommended by the vehicle manufacturer.

Many of the newer 1980 and 1981 passenger car models carry recommended inflation pressures somewhat higher than earlier models for improved fuel efficiency. These higher inflation pressures apply only to those models specifically identified, however.

"Check your tires when they are cold, that is when they have been standing still at outside temperature for several hours or have been driven less than a mile at moderate speed," he advised.

"When you do check the air pressure," Lovell said, "it's wise to use your own hand pressure gauge because service station air pressure regulators are often inaccurate."

The Tire Industry Safety Council offers these other safety and maintenance tips for fall driving:

—Now is a good time to have your front wheel alignment checked, following the traditionally busy summer driving season.

—Watch for autumn leaves. Even when its not raining, leaves have a tendency to retain moisture and create a slippery surface for tires.

Take it easy on wet roads. Stopping on a wet road can take up to four times the normal distance on a dry road. As water accumulates on the road, tires with shallow tread tend to hydroplane as speed increases, particulary over 40 miles per hour.

—Check the tread and sidewall. Inspect your tires for tread and sidewall cuts and cracks or snags that might expose tire cords.

—A tire is considered worn out and could allow dangerous skids if it has less than one-sixteenth inch tread depth in any two or more tread grooves. Treadwear indicator bars, commonly called "wear bars" built into the tire tread grooves, become visible when the tread is worn down to one-sixteenth inch. When this happens tires should be replaced.

2-Week Refund Period For 'U' Daily Fee Ends

Two-week refund period for the Minnesota Daily's $2 student services fee ended recently after about 1.7 per cent of the estimated 47,000 students on the Twin Cities campus received refunds.

"We are not sure if the fact that 737 students wanted refunds is a victory for us or for anyone else," said Jeff Goldberg, Daily editor in chief. "We don't know if the number is less or more than we expected. The regents will have to face the question of what the numbers mean."

The regents established no criteria to judge the effectiveness of the refund, so whether the policy will continue next year is unclear, said Jim Clark, chairman of the board of student publications, which publishes the Daily.

Board of regents will meet in April to take action on 1981-82 student fees after the fees committee of student government makes its recommendations, Clark said. "The committee will probably recommend discontinuing the refund because it is discriminatory against one student organization," he said.

The Daily lost about $1,400 this quarter, enough to pay two reporters $70 a week each for one quarter. Goldberg said he won't know how cutbacks will be made until the Daily budget is approved later this week.

The Daily's $2 portion of the $68.40 quarterly student services fee was changed from mandatory to refundable for the 1980-81 academic year after a vote by the board of regents last May. The Daily has been a center of controversy since it published a humor issue in June 1979 that some criticized as obscene, antireligious and racist.

Some Lie Detector Tests Not Truthful

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' News Service

The slender needle crawls across the paper, recording subtle changes in breathing, perspiration and blood pressure as a subject answers questions. The machine is trying to detect a lie.

More than one million Americans will take a lie detector test this year. A few will be accused criminals or witnesses in a trial. Some will be women who, in certain parts of the country, must pass the test before authorities will prosecute for a rape.

But most of those who face the polygraph test will do so at work, or in applying for a new job. The use of the polygraph in the work place is growing steadily, but the accuracy of the test is doubtful, according to a University of Minnesota researcher.

"Unfortunately, this truth technology is accurate only 60 to 75 per cent of the time, depending on the test. And some variants of the lie detector test have never been tested at all," said David Lykken, professor of psychiatry at the University of Minnesota medical school.

Lykken's new book, "A Tremor in The Blood: Uses and Abuses of the Lie Detector," disputes the claim that the machines are 95 to 99 per cent accurate. Further, it explains why the tests often fail, who has the most to fear from them, how a lie detector test can be "beat," where the tests fall short, which type shows some promise, and how the spread of polygraph use can be checked.

Lie detector tests are unreliable because they can confuse fear, anger and other kinds of emotion with guilt, Lykken said. All of these feelings can change heart rate, breathing and perspiration, he said.

People also vary too much in their physiological responses, Lykken said. In laboratory tests, when some subjects are asked to lie, it is virtually impossible to tell from the polygraph who is lying. Some psychopathic liars show such low responses on the lie detector that they would probably be judged honest, he said.

"It's like voodoo," Lykken said. People believe in lie detectors because they look and sound like scientific technology, and because they are simple, convenient short-cuts to hard, complicated decisions.

Lie detectors are especially unreliable for truthful people, Lykken said. Many more innocent people test as "deceptive" than guilty people test as "innocent." Those who run a special risk include people who get upset if someone accuses them of something they didn't do, people with short tempers and people who tend to feel guilty anyway, he said. Their heightened feelings are easily confused with guilt.

Pre-employment screening has provided a growing market for lie detectors. All applicants for work at McDonald's and Burger Chef restaurants must take the test, as must applicants for some high-level executive jobs in other industries, Lykken said. About 50 per cent of all retail companies, about 20 per cent of major corporations and all banks, police departments and guard agencies now use the tests.

In some cases, periodic mass screenings also are conducted among current employees. Those labeled "deceptive" often lose their jobs, even if there is no actual evidence against them. Yet this kind of lie detector test never has been validated, Lykken said.

Fortunately, most criminal courts are wary of lie detector evidence, Lykken said. About 20 per cent of the states, however, do allow the tests as evidence if both sides agree.

It is possible to "beat" a lie detector test, Lykken said. Most are scored by comparing the subject's response to "control" questions (such as "before the age of 18, did you ever try to hurt anyone?") with responses to the main questions ("Did you steal the money?"). You will be labeled "deceptive" if your measured responses to the main questions are more pronounced.

Further, some control questions may make a person appear guilty. Such questions may force a subject into a minor lie, or ask about an invented crime that nonetheless makes the subject nervous.

So the goal in trying to beat the test is to raise responses to the control questions (uch easier than trying to reduce responses to the threatening questions). For each of them, subtly do something like biting your tongue, gouging yourself with a fingernail or breathing a bit faster through your nose.

But do not try sighing, coughing or clenching your fist or arm, Lykken said. Polygraphers usually are suspicious of those techniques and may label you "deceptive" for that reason alone.

And do not be pressed into confession unnecessarily, Lykken added. Polygraphers often pretend a test has gone badly, or leave a subject alone to squirm (while they watch from behind a one-way mirror) and add their subjective intuitions to the "objective" test.

Most variants of the lie detector test are based on faulty assumptions, have been found unreliable in laboratory tests or both, Lykken said. For instance, they tend to assume that the subject has faith in the test. If the subject is not convinced, however, he may be equally aroused for the entire session and invalidate the results.

The only kind of lie detector test that shows promise is the "guilty knowledge test" for suspected criminals, Lykken said. A suspect is given several series of pictures and words. If the facts of the case can be kept reasonably quiet until the test is administered, and if the examiner is also ignorant of these key facts, only the criminal should register much higher on the items connected with the crime. Lykken is looking for police departments willing to test this version with him. Scotland Yard seems interested, he said.

But with all the unreliable lie detector tests in use, federal legislation is needed for control, Lykken said. State statutes largely have been ignored, and both the lie detector industry and their business clients are against federal regulation, hoping to hang onto their "big Oulja boards," Lykken said.

'55 Alive' Plan Available To Older Drivers

Nearly a quarter of Minnesota's registered drivers are over the age of 55. Although many are not aware of it, each faces a variety of physical changes — as part of the normal aging process — that may affect their driving ability.

Eyes that are more sensitive to light and glare and less responsive to depth perception and peripheral vision, hearing that loses highly pitched tones, and muscles that fail to react quickly can be dangerous in a driving situation.

Until recently, however, little effort was made either to alert the state's older motorists to these potential problems or to help them solve them.

Now an innovative driver education program designed specifically to help older drivers improve their driving skills is being offered in Minnesota.

Developed by the American association of retired persons and the national retired teachers association, "55 Alive — Mature Driving" is the only course of its kind geared to the particular needs of older motorists.

Effects of aging and medication on driving, basic driving rules, local driving hazards, accident prevention measures and re-licensing requirements are among the topics covered in the two three-hour sessions of the "55 Alive" course. Program is taught on a peer basis by volunteers trained by the associations.

For the past decade, AARP and NRTA have been the nation's largest trainer of civilian drivers in the National safety council's defensive driving course, a program for drivers of all ages. Based on this experience, the associations saw the need for a program that focuses on the specific problems of older drivers.

"Older drivers do not commit traffic violations such as speeding, drunk driving or reckless driving, to any significant degree," Mike Seaton, coordinator of the "55 Alive" program explains. "They do have problems when involved in driving situations requiring quick response, full vision and interaction with other drivers."

Taking into account their reduced mileage, the number of accidents per person for older drivers is significantly higher than for middle-aged motorists (young drivers remain the most accident prone).

Piolots of the "55 Alive" program given by the associations in four states last year have shown that older drivers can improve their driving abilities but that they learn best in a program geared to their specific needs, Seaton says.

"55 Alive" was developed with data collected from state motor vehicle departments throughout the country, and from a number of professional groups, including the American medical association, the American optometric association, and the American automobile association.

The U.S. department of transportation is currently evaluating the results of the pilot projects. It is hoped that "55 Alive", expected to be available nationwide by 1982, will become a prototype for traffic safety officers throughout the country, Seaton says.

If you are 55 years of age or older and a licensed driver, you are eligible to participate in the program. To find out when it is being offered in your area, send your name, address and phone number to Rushford Krouse, State Coordinator, 5104 Penn Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55419.

Sportsmen Aid FWS Programs

high quality habitat. Noxious weeds are controlled. Parking lots are provided for public users. Winter food supplies are provided for resident wildlife species. Former native species are being restored such as giant Canada geese, wild turkeys and prairie chickens. Non-game wildlife are considered and benefit by many of the land management practices; raptors benefit from ruffed grouse and waterfowl management, etc.

Endangered species also get help from federal aid funds. The timber wolf is being studied in relation to the population density of deer, the wolf's primary food source. Also being studied is secondary lead poisoning in bald eagles caused by consumption of duck carcasses containing lead.

Federal aid program was established back in 1937 with passage of the federal aid to wildlife restoration act (Pittman-Robertson act), and was expanded in 1950 with passage of the federal aid to sport fish restoration act (Dingell-Johnson act). These two measures placed the excise tax on fishing, hunting and shooting equipment.

It's a highly significant way that sportsmen finance management programs to insure the future of fish and wildlife resources in Minnesota and throughout the nation.

Airline Notes Loss Despite Record Revenue

Republic airlines reported record September revenues of $66.5 million, an increase of 25 per cent over the $53.1 million for September 1979.

Operating expenses reached $67.2 million from $51.9 million, resulting in a net loss of $3.8 million, compared to a loss of $252,000 a year ago.

For the nine-month period, the airline's revenues rose to $579.9 million from $453.3 million last year. Operating expenses increased to $582.3 million from $421.1 million. Net loss of $24.8 million compares to a profit of $15.8 million for the 1979 period.

"This finaicial performance reflects recession-depressed traffic and rising costs, particularly fuel and interest expense, which were only partially offset by the record revenues," said Daniel F. May, president.

"During the quarter," May said, "Republic prepared for future growth. The airline added nonstop flights from Atlanta to Chicago, New York and Tallahasee. Detroit-Montreal nonstops were inaugurated. The December 1 schedule will offer more winter flights from northern cities to sun belt destinations."

Republic serves over 200 cities in 34 states, Canada, Mexico and the Cayman Islands in the Carribbean on its 94,000-mile route system.

Bombardier & Textron Halt Polaris Sale

Textron, Inc. and Bombardier, Inc. have announced that they have agreed not to go forward with the proposed acquisition by Bombardier of the Polaris unit of Textron's Polaris E-Z-Go division.

A preliminary acquisition agreement, announced in August, had stated that the transaction was subject to approval by the government. When it became apparent that this approval would not be forthcoming in the near future, both parties chose not to contest the opposition.

In a statement by Textron president Beverly F. Dolan, it was affirmed that the division will remain a part of Textron. "The offer from Bombardier was unique, and one which, in the interests of our stockholders, we had to consider. However, we are pleased to retain this strong Polaris E-Z-Go division."

Dolan, one of the founders of E-Z-Go, was president of Polaris E-Z-Go from 1973-1976.

Polaris snowmobiles are manufactured in Roseau. Manufacturing facilities for E-Z-Go golf cars are located in Augusta, Ga.

Mavie Leader Illustrates 4-H Is A 'Family Affair'

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Louise Breznay has helped to mold many genuine 4-H families in her 25 years as 4-H leader.

Her accumulation of pins received as leader, the awards the Mavie 4-H club has received, and her inability to develop dislikes connected with her job as leader illustrate her dedication to a service she feels rewarding.

Breznay, who has been auditor at Northern state bank in Thief River Falls for 20 years, has lived in Thief River Falls with her husband, George, for six of those years. Before moving to Thief River Falls, the couple lived for 29 years in Mavie, the tiny yet significant settlement where Breznay's position as 4-H leader began.

It was the Breznay's son, Ernest who had an influence upon his mother becoming involved in 4-H, Breznay recalled.

"The 4-H leader there (Mavie) at the time had a handful of 4-H'ers. Ernest came home one day all fired up about 4-H. 4-H'ers are given points if their parents attend meetings, so being the good mother I tried to be, I attended the meeting and was elected a leader."

Shortly after that, Marie, the Breznay's second child, joined 4-H.

"There were so few other things to do in those days in a rural community," she stated." George had just gotten a job, and we had our two children. I spent a lot of time with 4-H'ers, enjoyed it and stayed with it."

During that time, the club had an interest in livestock, and although Ernest held major interest in the farm and home shop division of 4-H" he abandoned the idea of farming after keeping a cow for a year," she smiled. He participated in the National 4-H Congress during his 4-H years, went on to earn his Bachelor of Arts degree at a state college following his 4-H years, and earned his Masters degree in industrial arts at the University of North Dakota. Presently, he is superintendent of industrial arts at Bismarck.

Marie began 4-H in the sewing and foods division, Breznay said, although she "really liked junior leadership." She also attended national contests in the food division while in 4-H, later attended Bemidji state university, majoring in recreation and business, and received her Masters degree in counseling. She is presently counselor at St. Michael's school near Minneapolis.

"I stayed with 4-H after our children were out of it," Louise said. "I enjoyed working with kids."

Breznay had seven 4-H'ers during her initial years as leader of the Mavie 4-H club, with 4-H'ers involved mainly in sewing projects, foods, gardening and junior leadership.

However, she witnessed top enrollment figures of 74,

LOUISE BREZNAY recently received her 25-year emerald pin as 4-H leader of Mavie 4-H club. "I'm going to miss working with kids, organizations and other leaders," she said in an interview. "But I know I can always attend a 4-H meeting if I want to."

LATE NIGHT CHECKING was taking place in the Pennington county auditor's office when this Times photo was taken about midnight last night. Three precincts remained to report their results at that time and the time was being used to double-check phoned-in results and to arrange materials in a more orderly fashion. Left to right in the photo are Trudy Dahl, deputy auditor; C.W. Rodekuhr, county auditor; Mrs. Rodekuhr; and Dan Skogen, KTRF radio.

Stangeland, Hanson And Stumpf Election Winners

Northwestern Minnesota voters played hopscotch on their ballots in the general election Tuesday, indicating support for the Reagan-Bush ticket over the Carter-Mondale team but skipping from party to party in other races.

Ronald Reagan and George Bush won state after state in the national election to oust Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale from the President and Vice President posts they have held for the past four years. Although the popular vote spread was not great, Reagan-Bush captured nearly a 10 to 1 margin in electoral votes by winning most of the states. Minnesota, Mondale's home state, was a notable exception to the Reagan blitz.

In Pennington county — a traditional DFL stronghold — Reagan-Bush won handily with 3,715 votes to 3,101 for the incumbent President and his Minnesota-born Vice President. Reagan also carried Polk county 9,036 to 7,151, Marshall county 3,638 to 2,636 and Roseau county as well. Red Lake county stayed in the Carter camp 1,318 to 1,223 and thereby was in tune with Minnesota as a whole which was alone among midwestern states supporting the Carter reelection bid.

LeRoy Stumpf

Marv Hanson

Arlan Stangeland

The DFL chalked up legislative victories in District 1 and District 1B by reelecting Sen. Marv Hanson of Hallock and electing first-time candidate LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer. In District 1A, Rep. Myron Nysether of Ross won handily over Art Braun of Greenbush who was attempting a come-back after a narrow loss of his House seat to Nysether two years ago.

Hanson polled 17,229 votes (four small precincts in Lake of the Woods county yet to report) in his eight-county district while Independent-Republican challenger Mark Skogerboe of Thief River Falls collected 10,860 in his first political effort.

Hanson carried every county including Beltrami, 150-44; Kittson, 2,569-1,001; Lake of the Woods, 505-205; Marshall, 4,095-2,553; Pennington, 4,150-3,015; Polk, 560-314; Red Lake, 1,727-915; and Roseau 3,473-2,753.

LeRoy Stumpf, who withstood a tough battle to win the DFL endorsement for the District 1B House seat and later a primary election run-off, had an easier time in the general election. He carried three of the four counties in the district to win by a margin of 1,358 votes — 8,133 to 6,775 for Independent-Republican candidate Clyde Christensen of Thief River Falls.

Stumpf won Pennington

Graham-Davidson Vows Exchanged At Newfolden

Bethlehem Lutheran church, Newfolden, was the scene of the recent wedding of Deborah Ann Graham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Graham of Newfolden, and Jeffrey Lynn Davidson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Davidson, also of rural Newfolden.

For the seven o'clock ceremony, candelabra with foliage and white satin bows flanked the altar. Candelabra with satin bows marked the pews and arrangements of white daisies and pink carnations graced the altar.

Rev. Hans Floan officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Vernon Nelson, a friend of the couple was the organist. She played "Colour My World," and "The Wedding March," for the processional. Vocalists were Wendy Swenson and Mark Halvorson. Serving as acolytes were Jim Salzieder, Pawnee, Ill., and Scott Peterson, Middle River, cousins of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was attired in a gown of white organza styled with silk embroidered Venice lace accenting the molded bodice, sheer yoke, mandrin collar and fitted waistline. A band of lace headed the ruffle on her long fitted sleeves and complemented the scalloped flounce on the A-line skirt that extended into a chapel-length train. Her veil of bridal illusion, also edged with silk floss Venice lace, fell from a coordinating headpiece. She carried a cascade of deep red roses, miniature pink carnations, white button mums and babies' breath.

Rhonda Kezar, Middle River, a friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Denise Ness, Middle River, and Diane Graham, Newfolden, sisters of the bride; and Marcy Reierson and Leah Anderson of Newfolden, friends of the couple. Their gowns of dusty-rose, silk-finished knit were designed with scooped necklines and split butterfly sleeves with ties on the shoulders. Their A-line skirts were accented at the fitted waistlines by a peplum ruffle. They carried nosegays of red roses, pink miniature carnations, white daisies and button mums tinted to match their gowns.

Best man was Joel Olson of Viking, a friend of the groom. Groomsmen were Elwin Ness, Middle River, a brother-in-law of the bride; Dean Davidson, Thief River Falls, a cousin of the groom; Jeff Anderson, Viking, a friend of the couple and Greg Graham, Newfolden, a brother of the bride. Ushers were Ronnie Davidson, Newfolden, brother of the groom, and John Salzieder, Pawnee, Ill., a cousin of the bride.

Serving as the bride's personal attendant was Diane Panek, a friend of the bride.

The mother of the bride was attired in a natural color floor-length gown topped by a floral cape in dusty-rose and blue with gray accents. The groom's mother wore a dusty-rose floor-length gown with a matching lace jacket. Their corsages were of white cymbidium orchids and deep red sweetheart roses.

Honor guests were Mrs. Jack Siver and Marvin Moe of Waukegan, Ill., grandparents of the bride, and Mrs. Anna Davidson, Newfolden, grandmother of the groom.

At the reception that followed, the groom's cousins Jack and Janet Davidson, served as host and hostess. Kristie Sorum, another cousin of the groom, served the punch as Dale and Sherry Warne, friends of the couple, presided at the guest book table centered with a dusty-rose candle surrounded by white daisies and pink carnations.

Centering the serving table was a four-tiered wedding cake featuring a flowing fountain with dusty-rose water. Topping the cake was a heart with cupids, that accented the miniature cupids and bells that graced the pillared tiers beneath. On either side of the cake were round cakes inscribed with the names of the bride and groom. Surrounding the base were white daisies and miniature carnations. Marilyn Salzieder, aunt of the bride, and Sharon Davidson, sister-in-law of the groom, cut and served the cake. Pouring coffee were Sharon Holmstrom and Shelvie Davidson, sisters of the groom.

The gifts were arranged by Dawn Olson and Kara Anderson, friends of the couple. Waitresses were Jane Erickson, Ann Haukebo, Jennifer Davidson and Fonda Wendlandt.

The couple is now at home in rural Newfolden. The bride is employed by Northwestern hospital, and the groom by Arctic Enterprises. Photo, Lund Photography, Roseau

Newfolden Senior Citizens Hold Annual Meet

Several items of business were resolved at the annual meeting of the Senior Citizens, Inc., of Newfolden held October 29 at the meal site. The current officers, who have served since the group was organized a year ago, were retained for another year, and the amendments to the constitution were unanimously approved. Current officers are Nellie Olson, president; Ruth Martin, secretary; Lucille Skadsem, treasurer; and Mrs. Helmer Lind, reporter.

Following a discussion on the need for a desk at the site for meal supervisor Bertha Tunheim, the group voted to purchase a desk. The group also voted to donate $50 to the meal site for purchasing groceries for November and December due to a cut in funding. The possibility of obtaining fluff from Oklee was also discussed.

President Nellie Olson presided at the meeting. She informed the group that the exemption number has not as yet been received. She also read a letter from director LaVerne Swanson of Badger giving information on the Telacare program and the benefits derived from membership. In explaining the program, she stated that part of it would entail making telephone calls daily by volunteers to the shut-ins and the elderly, checking on their welfare. The issue was tabled for further discussion at the next meeting.

Plans were made for the birthday party, scheduled for December 10. It was decided to combine the event with an arts, craft and bake sale.

During the social hour that followed, the group participated in a sing-along. Special music was provided by Vi and Kenneth Moen and Elsie Berggren. Lunch, featuring bars and coffee, was served by Bertha Tunheim and Vi Moen.

An error was made in the brochure for the workshop for day care providers called 'What Can I Do To Prevent Harm To Children' scheduled for Roseau, Thief River Falls, and Crookston.

Fee should have read $2 instead of $12. "We hope persons interested will pass this information on to others who may wish to attend," stated Terry Lemer, adult vocational director at the AVTI.

Prevention Of Shoplifting Is DECA Project

Beginning November 9 and continuing through November 15, shoplifting prevention week will be observed in Thief River Falls.

DECA, a student organization of the sales, marketing and management department at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute (AVTI), will sponsor several activities during the week, along with the retail business association of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce, Federated Women's clubs of Thief River Falls, Thief River Falls police department, Pennington county sheriff's department and the National Coalition to prevent shoplifting division in Atlanta, GA.

Activities will include a coloring contest for students from kindergarten through second grade with pictures to be judged by senior citizens. Grades three, four and five will participate in a poster contest with posters to be judged by the Federated women's club. For sixth, seventh and eighth graders there will be an essay contest with essays to be judged by the Business and Professional Women's club.

Also, there will be surveys of attitudes concerning shoplifting taken from grades six through 12, and lyceum presentations will be presented to grades eight and nine. Accompanying the lyceum presentations will be slide and cassette presentations made by DECA members at the AVTI, which will be accompanied by a discussion by James Haugen, juvenile officer at the Thief River Falls police department.

There will also be four showings of adult seminars November 11 and 12 for store owners, managers and employees. A movie, connected with the theme of shoplifting prevention and entitled "Sticky Fingers", will be shown as Thief River Falls police officers speak about the apprehension of shoplifters.

Accompanying these activities will be various public service announcements on radio stations to make people aware of the problems connected with shoplifting and how to prevent it and DECA officers will be interviewed on KTRF radio November 11.

DECA students coordinated and implemented a similar shoplifting prevention project in Thief River Falls in December 1979 under the direction of Marilyn Gustafson and Dorothy Dodds, instructors in the program.

Peggy Larson, a DECA member who participated in the project, compiled the findings of the surveys and activities in a manual and entered it in the Minnesota DECA competition. The manual placed first in state competition, making it eligible to be entered in national competition, and received fifth place in the national competition at Orlando, FL in May. Peggy and her adviser, Dorothy Dodds, attended the national convention.

DECA members are again compiling tabulations of survey findings and the record of local activities in preparation to enter the manual into state DECA competition in February. Advisers are Dorothy Dodds and David Lysaker.

November 10, Dorothy Dodds has been invited to the state capitol reception room in St. Paul where she will witness the signing of the proclamation by Gov. Al Quie designating December 7 to 13 as Minnesota shoplifting prevention week.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:
AH-AH-AH

Our American language must be a very difficult one judging by the way it's spoken.

For example: "We are - AH - happy to - AH - be here today to - AH - again meet with so many friends. AH - it's been years since we've seen some of you and AH-AH - it's so hard to find words - AH-AH - to adequately express - AH - my feelings."

Lately the AH is being replaced by "UM-UM-UM". Some of us are beginning to yawn - HO-HUM! - "Silence is golden" is a slogan that could well be applied in this connection. If you must pause to gather your thoughts, couldn't you simply be silent for a second or two instead of mouthing those meaningless sounds? This concerns not only public speakers and college professors, but the rank and file of our English speaking public. A word to the wise - AH - is silence.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Emma Westby

Nov. 16-22 Is American Education Week

Gov. Albert H. Quie has proclaimed November 16-22 as American education week (AEW) in Minnesota, saying, "The maintenance of our high level of education in Minnesota is everyone's responsibility."

"Education for the 80s. . . Preparation for the Future" is the national theme for the 60th annual observance of American education week. National AEW sponsors are the National education association (NEA), the American Legion, the National Congress of parents and teachers (the PTA) and the U.S. department of education.

AEW sponsors in Minnesota are the parallel state organizations: Minnesota education association (MEA), Minnesota department of the American Legion, Minnesota Congress of parents, teachers and students and the state department of education.

"Public involvement in the affairs and planning of schools is wanted — and needed — by educators," Quie says. "Now is the time for educators and community to join in preparing for the continuing success of public education for all time."

Pamida Board Okays Terms Of Transaction

Pamida, Inc., Omaha-based operator of over 190 discount centers in 13 midwestern and Rocky mountain states, announced recently that its board of directors had approved the company's previously announced plan for the sale of substantially all of the company's assets and operations and that the sale agreement with the purchaser had been signed.

Board of directors acted after it had received a favorable report on the transaction from a special committee of "outside" directors which had been appointed to review and evaluate the proposed transaction.

After the asset sale is completed, the company will make a tender offer to its shareholders for any or all of their shares of the company's stock at a cash price of $6 per share.

Consummation of the proposed sale transaction remains subject, among other things, to shareholder approval, completion of financing arrangements, completion and distribution of definitive proxy materials, and certain regulatory and other approvals and consents.

A special meeting of the company's shareholders presently is planned for late December or early January, at which time the shareholders will vote on the proposed transaction which would be completed as promptly as possible after shareholder approval.

Vets Benefits To Increase With New Law

Bigger checks for veterans training under the GI Bill is a major provision of a law to increase veterans benefits signed recently by the president, Veterans administration chief Max Cleland announced.

A 10 per cent increase in educational allowances was made possible by the "Veterans Rehabilitation and Education Amendments of 1980."

Cleland said that education checks due November 1 for an estimated 600,000 veteran-students and dependents in training will include a five per cent boost. Balance of the 10 per cent hike will be reflected in checks due February 1. Payment for training taken after January 1 will include the full 10 per cent increase.

Legislation also calls for major improvements in VA's vocational rehabilitation program for service-connected disabled veterans which include a 17 per cent increase in monthly allowance in the November checks of approximately 11,000 trainees and increased job counseling and placement procedures.

Cleland said the new law also increased VA tutorial assistance payments by 10 per cent and changed the amount VA can pay under correspondence or flight training for students who enroll in these programs after September 1, 1980. For them, VA can pay 70 per cent of the total charges for correspondence training or 60 per cent of those for flight training. These changes in rate of payment are effective October 1. Students who enrolled September 1 or earlier will continue to get 90 per cent of the total charges throughout the course.

For the first time, however, flight training students will be eligible for education loans based on need of up to $2,500.

Also in the legislation was a change in the way VA will pay veteran-students training while in jail. Veterans imprisoned on a felony conviction will no longer receive monthly educational allowances but will be reimbursed for training expenses.

Last year's chairman, Gordon Peterson, will call the meeting to order and a presentation will be made by Redinger. Election of district parent advisory committee is scheduled for 8 p.m.

Distribution of information pertaining to Title I is planned and special education director Dr. Ruberto will be introduced.

Eight committee members will be elected for one-year or two-year terms (member's choice) from among the following candidates: Robert Anderson, Mrs. Art Anderson, Mrs. Ila Anderson, Mrs. Arnold Geske, Myles Koop, Clayton Mack, Rev. James Hagemeister, Mrs. Lee Helgenset, Gordon Peterson and Mrs. Elinor Wiskow.

Human Services Approves Plan Of Operations

U.S. department of health and human services has approved Minnesota's plan of operations for the 1980-1981 low income energy assistance program (LIEAP), Rolf Middleton, commissioner of the Minnesota department of economic security, announced recently.

Program operations will begin as soon as funds arrive in the state, probably by November 30, Middleton said.

More than $70 million from the windfall profits tax will be used to provide assistance to low income households to offset the rising costs of home energy that are excessive in relation to household income. Approximately 150,000 Minnesota households will be served. Those seeking help must apply. No automatic payments will be made, Middleton said.

LIEAP will be delivered in Minnesota by 25 community action agencies, seventeen county social service departments, Sioux and Chippewa reservations and the Minnesota migrant council. Office of economic opportunity of the department of economic security administers the funds.

Delivery agency phone numbers will be publicized when agencies are ready to begin taking application.

Clover Seed Production Is Below 1979

Minnesota's 1980 red clover seed production is expected to total 2.8 million pounds, slightly less than last year. This year's 28,000 acres for harvest is seven per cent below 1979. Average yield is forecast at 100 pounds per acre, compared to 95 pounds in 1979.

As a result of the spring drought, many growers did not harvest acreages they had intended for seed this year. Due to local shortages of forage, some stands were cut for hay while others developed poorly and were plowed under. Reduction of Red clover seed acreage was greater in the northern counties, where the drought was most severe. Late August and September rains helped the crop in many localities. Although red clover seed matured in good time this year, wet weather delayed combining.

Production nationally is forecast at 24.3 million pounds, down 11 per cent from the 1979 output. Acreage for harvest fell 13 per cent to 215,000 acres as farmers diverted many fields to hay or other crops. The average yield nationwide is forecast at 113 pounds per acre, up three pounds from last year.

Growers in Oregon, the nation's leading producing state, look for a six per cent decline in production. Volcanic "fallout" from Mount St. Helens smothered some of Washington's Yakima valley red clover fields. The state's acreage for seed was cut nearly in half. Weather during harvest in the northwest has been nearly ideal. Rain in northern and lakes states is making harvest difficult. Summer drought hurt yields in Kansas.

Total supply of red clover seed for the 1980-81 marketing season is indicated at 40 million pounds, down eight per cent from last year. The 1980 carryover stocks of 15.8 million pounds were down three per cent from a year earlier. Farmer owned carryover of old crop seed on June 30, 1980 dropped 29 per cent, while dealer stocks gained 12 per cent. Imports of red clover seed during the year ending June 30, 1980 declined one-third to 2.93 million pounds. This compares with 4.37 million pounds the year before. Exports for the same period were 1.60 million pounds compared with 1.32 million pounds in 1978-79, an increase of 21 per cent.

CROWNED QUEEN of the Thief River Falls Sno-Drifters snowmobile club Monday evening at a meeting held in the Elks club rooms was Karla Nelson (left), who received a crown and Arcticwear jacket for winning the event. She will represent the club in regional competition. Other candidates who received sweaters as prizes for participating were (left to right) Beth Nichols, Gretchen Fredeen and Theresa Ness.

DR. JAMES AUNE, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnt Aune of Thief River Falls, and a recent graduate of Northwestern university, Evanston, IL, has been awarded a top prize by the National Speech Association for his doctoral dissertation entitled, "Dialectical Dilemmas." Aune, who is presently a member of the communications faculty at Tulane University, New Orleans, LA, will receive his award at the national convention of communications in New York City, November 14.

U Of M Change In Tuition Rate Is Announced

The 10 per cent tuition increase for winter and spring classes at the University of Minnesota will affect part-time and evening students as well as day students, and university officials are scrambling to find ways to let them know.

About 30,000 people throughout the state will take evening courses or attend conferences through the university this winter and spring. Most are adults who attend school only part-time and spend most of their time away from campus, said Donald Z. Woods, associate dean of continuing education and extension (CEE).

University communicates with this group of students through printed material — bulletins, brochures and notices — and most of it was printed well before the tuition surcharge was approved by the board of regents earlier this month, Woods said.

As a result, the bulletins and brochures fail to reflect the new rates, and CEE officials fear people will mail in their registration forms with checks for the lower tuition. Registration already has begun at Duluth, Morris and Rochester, and will begin November 24 for Twin Cities campus classes.

"The surcharge carries the possibility of keeping some adults out of our classes and programs, because their family budgets are already very tight," Woods said. "At the same time, adults have always shown a lot of determination toward improving their careers and their lives through education, and we believe they will try very hard to adjust to the surcharge."

CEE offers both credit and noncredit courses. Costs for credit courses will be 10 per cent higher for winter and spring than for fall; costs for noncredit courses will be set on a case-by-case basis.

Surcharge will not apply to students age 62 or older, Woods said.

CEE officials are encouraging people with questions to call before mailing their registration checks. Numbers in the Twin Cities are 373-3197 for extension classes and 373-3256 for independent study. Numbers for other locations are: Morris, 589-2211; Rochester, 288-4584; and Duluth, 726-8113.

MMCDC's primary function is to provide financial assistance, in the form of loans, loan guarantees and equity investments to local small businesses. Over the last 18 months more than $714,000 has been invested in area companies and 58 jobs for local residents have been created or preserved.

Scots Host State Playoff Game

Area sports fans who might be interested in attending one last football game have a chance to catch an interesting match-up Friday at McIntosh when a 7:30 p.m. Minnesota State High School League nine-man state football semifinal playoff game will pit No. 1 rated Toivola-Meadowlands against No. 2 rated McIntosh-Winger.

It'll be a rematch of the 1979 MSHSL playoffs when Toivola-Meadowlands eliminated McIntosh-Winger 12-0.

The North Tri County Conference champion Scots have been eagerly awaiting the rematch. "This is the goal the kids set at the beginning of the year," reported McIntosh-Winger coach Mike Lhotka, a Thief River Falls resident. "We've been hoping we'd have the chance to play them again."

Last year's semifinal encounter with the Rockets was played at a neutral site — Walker. This year the Scots have the home field advantage, an edge not lost upon Lhotka, who says, "We've got them right where we want them — at home. The home field has been awfully good to us," he added, noting that the Scots haven't lost a home game in seven years.

McIntosh-Winger played well in beating Mount St. Benedict 20-8 last Friday. That same day Toivola-Meadowlands ripped Rothsay 50-0, a score that Lhotka readily admits scares him. "We (coaches) heard the (50-0) score right before we went on the field last week, and we just hoped nobody would tell the kids," he said, fearing an emotional letdown by the Scots.

Lhotka doesn't want to get into an offensive shoot-out with the Rockets. He expects a "very physical game — lots of hitting."

Other area playoff semifinalists will be on the road this week. Pine-to-Prairie Conference champion Mahnomen will take on Holdingford in a Class B game Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Detroit Lakes while Northwest Athletic Conference champion Crookston will tackle defending state champion Rochester Lourdes in a Class A game that has been set for a 1 p.m. start Saturday at Rochester instead of the previously announced 7:30 Friday kickoff.

Like McIntosh-Winger, both Mahnomen and Crookston are familiar with their semifinal opponents. The Indians beat Holdingford 24-12 in the 1979 state semifinals before losing to Gaylord 15-6 in the championship game. The Pirates lost to Rochester Lourdes 14-9 in last year's semifinals, with the Eagles then beating Apple Valley 22-6 for the title.

The 1980 state playoff championship games will be played Friday, Nov. 14. The McIntosh-Winger vs. Toivola-Meadowlands winner will meet the Hoffman-Kensington vs. Chandler-Lake Wilson winner for the nine-man title; the Mahnomen vs. Holdingford winner will face the Olivia vs. Austin Pacelli winner for the Class B crown; and the Crookston vs. Rochester Lourdes winner will tackle the Montevideo vs. Pipestone winner for Class A honors.

Cuppett, UND Eye Region Title

University of North Dakota women's field hockey team will take part in the Region VI association for intercollegiate athletics for women (AIAW) tournament at Cedar Falls, Ia. this week, and Sioux goalie Marchell Cuppett, a junior from Thief River Falls, will be a key figure as UND tries to land one of three available berths in the 1980 AIAW national tournament Nov. 19-21 at Edwardsville, Ill.

Cuppett, a basketball and track performer for the Prowlers, is 23-3 for the year in goal for the Sioux with a 0:74 goals-against-average. She has won 18 of her last 21 starts.

"Marchell is the best goalie I've seen play in this area," says UND coach Margaret Peterson. "She's really a good goalie. She has the natural athletic ability and a perfect mental attitude for the position — she doesn't get down on herself if she gives up a goal."

Cuppett has given up just 19 goals in 26 games this fall.

"There's not as many shots on goal in field goal as ice hockey because the field is much bigger," noted Peterson. "But that just makes it that much tougher because one goal is pretty important."

And with a 12-foot wide goal mouth to cover, the goalie's job is no piece of cake.

"Her biggest asset is her flexibility," says Peterson of Cuppett. "She covers a lot of ground. She uses her pads well and does a good job clearing the ball with her stick. And she's taken control of her defense. She does a lot more than just stop the ball; she really directs traffic."

UND will be joined at the Region VI event by Southwest Missouri State, Northern Iowa, Southeast Missouri State, Bemidji State and Central Missouri State. Games will be played in Northern Iowa's UNI-Dome Thursday through Saturday. Defending champion Southwest Missouri State is seeded No. 1 for the tournament and North Dakota is seeded No. 2.

"Hopefully we'll finish in the top three, but we have a lot of work to do," noted Peterson, who said a few shutouts by Cuppett certainly wouldn't hurt. "And I think she's capable of it," she said.

Swimmers To Face Moorhead On Thursday

A match-up of two highly regarded Section 3 rivals will be featured Thursday when Thief River Falls hosts Moorhead in a 5 p.m. girls high school swimming meet in the Franklin middle school pool.

The Spuds, considered by many as the team-to-beat when the 1980 Section 3 swimming and diving championships are held Nov. 25-26 at Bemidji State University, blitzed the Prowlers 96-73 back on Sept. 30. Thief River Falls coaches John Hustad and Dan Vrudny called it the poorest performance of the season for the Prowlers, who hope to reverse the results tomorrow.

Thief River Falls gained a weekend split on the road for an 8-3 dual meet season record as the Prowlers pulled out a final-race 90-81 victory over Section 3 rival Brainerd Friday night, then dropped a close 88-84 decision at Blake Saturday afternoon.

The loss to Blake snapped a four-meet winning streak for the Prowlers, who hadn't lost a dual meet decision since the Moorhead outing. Thief River Falls' Brenda Lund set a new Brainerd pool record in winning the diving competition Friday with 229.90 points.

TRF 4-1 In Nonconference Play; 1-3 In NWAC . . .

Prowlers Have Disappointing Finish

Even though Thief River Falls finished above .500 for the first time since 1974, Lincoln high school head football coach John Schmitz was far from satisfied with a 5-4 record in 1980.

"I'm disappointed. I had hoped for better. We were at 4-1 and then lost three of our last four ball games," pointed out Schmitz, a long-time Thief River Falls assistant who was appointed head coach just prior to the start of preseason practice this fall to replace Gene Jurgens, who left to accept a job opportunity in Fergus Falls.

Thief River Falls opened impressively, winning four of five nonconference starts. The Prowlers beat Grand Forks Red River in their opener 12-7 and handled Detroit Lakes 33-21 before losing to Class AA power Grand Rapids 30-6. They rebounded with a 29-7 victory over Staples and then stunned long-time oppressor Moorhead 33-21 to enter Northwest Athletic Conference with high hopes.

But those NWAC title dreams were shattered by Bemidji 26-12. Thief River Falls bounced back to beat Fergus Falls 21-6, but lost season-ending starts against East Grand Forks 7-6 and Crookston 46-0.

"We kept on improving in the nonconference games," recalled Schmitz. "But when we got to the conference games our improvement stopped. Whether the weather had something to do with it or what, I don't know."

Most of the final month of the season was played in wet, windy, cold weather and the Prowlers' option offense just did not function well under those conditions. Additionally, the NWAC had one of its strongest and most balanced fields in history.

"No question, I thought the conference was strong this year," confirmed Schmitz. "And with the exception of Crookston (which breezed through its season unbeaten and relatively untested), any of the teams could have played each other again and the score would have been reversed."

While the offense was having its problems with the weather, the Thief River Falls defense also struggled at times. "I had hoped we could perform better defensively," noted Schmitz. "There were times when we played well defensively, but we weren't consistent. Offensively our running game was strong enough — we got enough yardage; we had people who picked up decent yards."

Senior Scott Wiebolt, a quarterback-defensive back, led the Prowlers both offensively and defensively. He rushed for a team-leading 496 yards; completed 26 of 67 passes for 348 yards; scored a team-high 54 points; and topped the Prowlers' defensive point charts — which includes points scored, blocked punts or passes, pass interceptions, passes broken up, fumble recoveries, tackles, assisted tackles and quarterback sacks — with 158 points. He led the team with three pass interceptions and four fumble recoveries while also ranking among the leaders with 10 unassisted tackles and 41 assisted stops.

Thief River Falls' balanced offensive backfield also featured fullback Scott Kezar with 481 yards, halfback Tom Ose 443 yards and halfback Dan Odegaard with 303 yards, on fewer carries than the other three.

Linebacker Mark Harder ranked second in the defensive point figures with 141, including a team-leading 11 unassisted tackles and a team-high 47 assisted stops.

The win over Moorhead, said Schmitz, was "definitely" the highlight of the 1980 Thief River Falls football season. "Not so much because it was a win over Moorhead, but because of the football that was played. They did an excellent job of playing football that night. They put everything together. It was an outstanding performance."

But Thief River Falls never came close to duplicating that effort in NWAC play.

"I think we were capable of coming close to matching that again," explained Schmitz, "but we didn't have the consistency. We made mistakes that we didn't make in that game. The conference defended up well; we did not score well in the conference, and it's hard to say why."

The NWAC record was disappointing, and most disappointing was the 7-6 defeat at the hands of East Grand Forks that eliminated Thief River Falls from the conference pennant picture before the Prowlers had a chance to challenge Crookston.

"We had the opportunity to win that (EGF) ball game and we didn't do it," remembered Schmitz. "We were never really in the Bemidji ball game."

Still, Schmitz said, "I've enjoyed being the head coach. I would have enjoyed having a little more time to prepare for it, though."

Schedule

Sat., Nov. 8 — Northland at Golden Valley Lutheran, Itasca at Crookston, Fergus Falls vs. Mesabi at Virginia, Hibbing vs. Vermilion at Ely, Brainerd vs. Gustavus Adolphus JV at St. Peter.

A major challenge awaits the Northland community college football team Saturday when the 1-6-1 Northmen close out their 1980 season by playing 6-0-1 Golden Valley Lutheran. Game time is 1:30 p.m. in Golden Valley.

The Royals, the only unbeaten team in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) can wrap up a Northern Division title and a post-season state playoff game berth against the Southern Division champion Nov. 15 with a win over the Northmen, who haven't tasted victory since a 21-12 win over Mesabi back on Sept. 20.

Despite the poor record, first-year Northland head coach John Helley says the team is in good spirits.

"I think the fellows are enjoying the season," mentioned Helley. "These kids are not down. Morale is good. They don't have the poor record blues. I'm very impressed with their spirit."

Northland's chances of upsetting Golden Valley Lutheran are slim, but Helley hasn't thrown in the towel yet.

"These kids have played hard this year. I really feel these guys can put it together at any time, it's just a matter of execution. If we can execute, we can beat them," said Helley. "We could be a spoiler."

However, with a divisional title and a state playoff game at stake, it's not likely the Royals will take the Northmen too lightly. Fergus Falls, beaten by Golden Valley Lutheran 16-7 two weeks ago, could still take the Northern Division title with a win at Mesabi Saturday should the Royals lose to the Northmen. But Golden Valley Lutheran has had little trouble with Northland in the past, 62-0 in 1976, 28-0 in 1977, 47-0 in 1978 and 34-3 a year ago.

Elsewhere in the Northern Division the final week of the season will find Itasca at Crookston, Hibbing at Vermilion and Brainerd playing the Gustavus Adolphus junior varsity in St. Peter. Last week Golden Valley Lutheran beat Itasca 23-10, Fergus Falls shut out Crookston 19-0, Hibbing edged Mesabi 13-7 and Northland dropped a 31-17 nonconference game to Bismarck.

LEADING SCORER on the 1980 Northland community college football team is sophomore place kicker Jeff Gobell of Thief River Falls, shown here connecting on a 29-yard field goal against Bismarck junior college Saturday. Holder on the play is Jim McCue. Gobell has kicked five field goals and is 7-for-7 in the extra point department this fall. The 1-6-1 Northmen, who lost to Bismarck 31-17, will close out their season Saturday on the road against MJCAA Northern Division leader Golden Valley Lutheran.

U.S. Fish, Wildlife Service Publishes Management Plan

A comprehensive management plan to assure effective conservation of the nation's fish and wildlife resources in the 1980s has been developed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"Rapidly changing social and economic forces have made fish, wildlife, and their habitat increasingly vulnerable to losses, as an expanding human population continues to put pressure on diminishing resources," said service director Lynn A. Greenwalt. "The service's challenge is clear: if we expect to conserve our nation's fish and wildlife resources for future generations, we must anticipate change and respond with efficient management strategies."

The new service management plan is a broad-based document that sets the service's general course of action for the next decade, laying the foundation for planning and managing all agency activities. It serves as the basis for more specific management plans and ensuing budgets for the various service programs through which the agency accomplishes its work.

"Guided by this plan, we can foresee changing needs of fish and wildlife resources, and take positive action to deal with major problems affecting these resources. Also, ongoing programs will benefit from clear direction toward achieving national goals," said Greenwalt.

Noting that increased competition for both renewable and non-renewable resources dictates more intensive management of fish and wildlife, Greenwalt emphasized that the service management plan — the agency's first planning document to encompass all its programs — will facilitate responsive management tactics by providing initial guidance.

The document, intended for fish and wildlife managers and the public, serves as a blueprint to the workings of the service. It defines the service's mission and lists program goals. Policies are described for fish and wildlife management, operations, planning and decision-making processes. Strategies are outlined for ongoing activities, as well as identifying major resource problems and setting priorities to efficiently deal with them.

Outstanding features of the plan include indentification of socio-economic factors that may influence the service's overall planning process; the plan's focus on the most critical problems affecting fish and wildlife; and recognition of a broader public involvement in fish and wildlife issues.

Service officials recognize that not only has the amount of public concern for fish and wildlife increased in recent years, but also that the scope of those concerns has broadened. The plan informs the public about the direction of the service, and calls for increased public information and education to stimulate citizen involvement in conservation issues.

Potential threats to the nation's fish and wildlife resources are forecast by socio-economic trends discussed in the plan. For instance, development — particularly in the west where many of the nation's energy resources are located — will significantly increase demand for water. Yet adequate water must be assured to maintain essential habitat for fish and wildlife.

FWS has developed an innovative process for promoting a better understanding of important resource issues and identifying where they are most acute. This list of 78 "important resource problems" (IRPs) ranges from depleted stocks of steelhead trout and salmon in the northwest's Columbia river basin to endangered species in the Florida wetlands.

IRPs are clearly defined problems associated with specific species within geographic areas. For example, the populations of several endangered species which find refuge in the south Florida wetlands and Keys are imperiled. The Florida manatee, Florida panther, American crocodile and bald eagle are among those threatened by development. The service's goal is the eventual recovery of the listed species.

Vital concerns of the service that are broader in scope, such as lead poisoning of migratory waterfowl, may also be included on the list of priorities, which will be brought up-to-date periodically.

One of the most common themes which runs through the list is loss or pollution of essential habitat for declining species populations, attributed to a wide range of human activities. In planning that involves IRPs, priority will be given to highly ranked problems in which there is imminent threat to a species.

Service officials emphasize that, while the list will enhance the effectiveness of the agency's programs by focusing on species and habitat-related concerns, work will continue on activities (such as predator control and law enforcement) for which the service is responsible under its mandate to manage and protect U.S. fish and wildlife resources.

Program management documents reflect the general guidance of the service management plan. However, these documents set forth more specific policies and strategies by which programs

Agassiz Refuge Is Open For Deer Hunting

The 1980 deer hunting season at the Agassiz national wildlife refuge will be held in accordance with Minnesota department of natural resources regulations.

Agassiz-NWR, as well as the Elm Lake, Eckvoll and Mud Lake wildlife management areas are in Zone 4, in which a three-day bucks only season will be held on November 8, 9 and 10. Same area is included in antlerless permit area 11 in which antlerless deer may be taken by permit only on November 15 and 16. Hunters may only hunt during one of these two periods. Antlerless permits have already been mailed to successful applicants, thus anyone unsuccessful in obtaining an antlerless permit must hunt bucks only on November 15 and 16.

During the late season only, Agassiz headquarters will be a check station for deer taken in permit area 11. All deer taken in permit area 11 must be registered at the check station. Check station hours will be 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. on November 15 and 16.

Entire refuge will be open to deer hunting except two closed areas which will be posted with closed area signs. These closed areas surround the refuge headquarters and a newly constructed maintenance center located approximately five miles east of head quarters. Both areas are also clearly marked on the refuge hunting leaflets available at headquarters.

Hunters may enter the refuge at 6 a.m. and must leave the refuge by dark each day. Main road system on the refuge will be open to vehicles, but dikes and trails will be only open to foot traffic. Snowmobiles, trail bikes and all other off-road vehicles are prohibited. Non-motorized boats may be used on ditches and pools.

Refuge auto tour route will be closed for the duration of the hunting season.

Deer License Deadline Is Fri., Nov. 7

Department of Natural Resources issued a final reminder to deer hunters today that hunting licenses must be purchased no later than Nov. 7 this year.

Minnesota's firearms deer season opens Saturday, Nov. 8, and the law requires that all deer licenses, including muzzleloader and bow and arrow, must be bought piror to the first day of the firearms deer season.

Until the law was changed two years ago, deer hunting licenses could be purchased as late as the opening day of the season.

SUCCESSFUL HUNTER during the Minnesota bow season for deer was Stanley Cameron, age 70, of Thief River Falls. He collected his deer late last week west of St. Hilaire — the third deer he has bagged with bow and arrow. He retrieved his aluminum arrow which went completely through the animal. "This beats rifle hunting," Cameron said. "I even got my bullet back!"

State Football Playoffs Enter Semifinal Stage

When the ninth annual Minnesota State High School League state football playoffs began last week, 15 of the 40 teams that had qualified in the five classes — AA, A, B, C and nine-man — had never previously played in the state playoffs. This week as semifinal action begins on Friday night, six of those teams are still alive, reports Larry Larson, MSHSL director of information and publications.

Last week's Friday and Saturday 20 quarterfinal contests resulted in the usual number of surprises and exciting games. One game was decided in the waning moments when a field goal was made and another outing resulted in a 50-point differential.

This week's prep action is again expected to be full of the same kind of excitement and unexpected action.

The following is a capsule report on each of the five divisions:

Class AA

Top rated St. Thomas Academy (8-0), the last of the undefeated teams in the 83-school Class AA division, lost its bid for its first ever state crown last Friday when blanked 7-0 by upstart Cambridge (9-1) in St. Paul in one of four quarterfinal contests. The win moves Cambridge into semifinal play Friday night against Grand Rapids (9-1), a 31-0 victor over Henry Sibley in a game played at West St. Paul last Friday. The Cambridge-Grand Rapids tiff will take place in Grand Rapids at 7:30 p.m. Grand Rapids is making its first ever appearance in state playoffs, while Cambridge appeared last year and in 1977, but had not won a playoff game until last week.

In the other semifinal battle on Friday night, Rochester Mayo (10-1), making its first state playoff appearance, will oppose Burnsville (9-1), in playoffs previously in 1972 and 1973, at Parade Stadium in Minneapolis. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Rochester Mayo advanced to the semi's via a 26-13 triumph over Columbia Heights, the defending champion, last Friday in Columbia Heights. Burnsville, meanwhile, outpointed Armstrong of Plymouth 9-7 in Richfield last Friday evening to advance to semi-final play.

Class AA championship game will be played on Friday, Nov. 14, 7:30 p.m. at Parade Stadium in Minneapolis.

Class A

It took a 30-yard field goal with six seconds left to give defending champion Rochester Lourdes (9-2) a 31-29 victory over previously unbeaten Sauk Rapids in a Class A quarterfinal game last Saturday night in St. Cloud. Rochester Lourdes will now meet strong Crookston (11-0) in Rochester Saturday afternoon at 1 p.m. in semifinal play. Crookston advanced via a 19-8 win over visiting Park Rapids last Saturday afternoon. Ironically, Rochester Lourdes and Crookston are paired again in semifinal play. Last year the two met in the same round and Lourdes won by a 14-9 margin. This year's confrontation is again expected to be a close encounter.

In the other Class A bracket, semifinal play this Friday night will find Montevideo (9-1) playing at unbeaten Pipestone (9-0) in a 7:30 p.m. game. Montevideo earned the right to play this week after an impressive 35-6 victory over Albany last Friday in Montevideo. Pipestone, meanwhile, shut out St. James, 21-0, in Pipestone last Friday.

The Montevideo-Pipestone game this week has an unusual twist. The two schools played one another back on September 5 in a non-conference game and Pipestone won by a 13-0 margin.

All four of this year's semifinalists in Class A have appeared in previous state playoff games in other years. Only Rochester Lourdes, however, has won a state title. None of the others have reached a championship game.

Class B

Mahnomen (11-0), a northwestern Minnesota school which is entered in its fifth state playoff and looking for its first state title, is one of four semifinalists in Class B. Others include Holdingford (10-1), Olivia (10-1) and Austin Pacelli (10-1). Holdingford is in its fourth state playoff, while Olivia and Austin Pacelli are in their first playoff appearances.

This Friday night in Detroit Lakes at 7:30 p.m. Mahnomen, last year's Class B runner-up to Gaylord, will take on Holdingford. Last week Mahnomen beat Ely, 27-20, in Ely in quarterfinal play, while Holdingford won a 14-6 decision from Breckenridge in a game played at Sartell. Both Mahnomen and Holdingford were in the 1979 semi's and met one another with Mahnomen beating Holdingford, 24-12, in a game played at Little Falls.

In the other semifinal contest Friday evening, Austin Pacelli will meet Olivia at 7:30 p.m. at Wescott Field in Austin. Austin Pacelli earned the right to meet Olivia by virtue of a 30-0 triumph over New Richland-Hartland last Saturday in Austin. Olivia, meanwhile, advanced with a 40-22 triumph over host Jordan.

Class C

Defending champion Bird Island-Lake Lillian (10-0) and undefeated Harmony (11-0) are headed for a second consecutive title match-up should they record semifinal wins this Friday night. Bird Island-Lake Lillian will meet unbeaten Sandstone (11-0) at Forest Lake in a 7:30 p.m. game, while Harmony must get past Mountain Lake (10-1) in Mountain Lake. That game, too, is scheduled to get underway at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Mountain Lake is the only newcomer to the state playoffs among the semifinalists. Sandstone was in last year's playdowns and also qualified in 1978. Bird Island-Lake Lillian has appeared three times previous to last year, and Harmony made its first state playoff appearance last fall.

All four semifinalists recorded impressive victories last week. Bird Island-Lake Lillian lambasted Mayer Lutheran 36-6 in Mayer, Sandstone toppled Bertha-Hewitt 28-6 in Pine City, Mountain Lake whitewashed Tyler 9-0 and Harmony eliminated Henderson 28-14.

Nine-Man

Three of the four teams that have reached the semifinals are undefeated, and one school — Chandler-Lake Wilson — is appearing in its first nine-man state playoffs.

This week's two semifinal games should be interesting ones. Last year's runner-up, Toivola-Meadowlands (9-0) will once again be involved in a semifinal clash with McIntosh-Winger (11-0). This year the two will meet Friday evening in McIntosh beginning at 7:30 p.m. Last year Toivola-Meadowlands beat McIntosh-Winger 12-0 in Walker. In the other semifinal encounter, Hoffman-Kensington (10-1) will travel to Chandler to meet Chandler-Lake Wilson (11-0) in a 7:30 p.m. game on Friday.

Last week Chandler-Lake Wilson upended defending champion Russell 34-8, Hoffman-Kensington toppled always tough Lake Benton, 19-7, McIntosh-Winger recorded a 20-8 triumph over Mount St. Benedict of Crookston and Toivola-Meadowlands stomped Rothsay, 50-0.

Playoff Notes

All championship games are scheduled for Friday night, Nov. 14. Sites of Class A, B, C and nine-man tilts will be announced later this week. Bird Island-Lake Lillian has the state's longest winning streak — 23 games. Undefeated teams in addition to Bird Island-Lake Lillian are Pipestone, Crookston, Mahnomen, Sandstone, Harmony, McIntosh-Winger, Toivola-Meadowlands and Chandler-Lake Wilson. The 10 semi-final games Friday night are expected to attract a paid attendance figure in excess of 15,000. Last year's paid crowd total for semifinal games was 16,910.

Bear Hunting Closed During Deer Season

Minnesota big game hunters were reminded by the Department of Natural Resources that the bear season closed on Oct. 28 and that no bear hunting will be allowed this year during the November deer hunt.

In past years, hunters with a deer license were allowed to take a bear if they encountered one during the November deer season.

AHA Hockey Seminars Are Being Offered

Lou Vairo, special advisor to Herb Brooks and the 1980 Gold Medal U.S.A. Olympic hockey team will conduct two hockey coaching seminars this coming weekend in Minnesota. The topic of each seminar is contemporary U.S.A. hockey concepts and tactics. Seminar sites include Cottage Grove high school, Saturday, Nov. 8, at 8:15 a.m. for Twin Cities area coaches and Brainerd high school, Sunday, Nov. 9, at 11:15 a.m. for Northern Minnesota coaches.

Vairo, the U.S.A. Junior National team head coach and national director of the AHAUS coaches achievement program, is one of the leading authorities in the U.S. on international hockey styles. Ted Brill, assistant coach at Grand Rapids high school, newly elected president of the Minnesota amateur hockey association and director of the AHAUS coaching program in Minnesota will also be on the program.

Open to all coaches and hockey fans, the seminars consist of four hours of classroom lecture and discussion, followed by two hours of on-ice demonstration. Each attending coach receives a comprehensive AHAUS coaching manual written by Vairo and other prominent U.S. hockey coaches.

All interested coaches can enroll on the day of the seminar at the scheduled location.

More than 11,000 muskellunge were raised and stocked in Minnesota waters during 1980, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

8A, 8AA Volleyball Matches Are Set

North and South Half champions Moorhead and Sauk Rapids will meet Saturday in Moorhead in the finals of the 1980 Region 8AA high school volleyball tournament, while four district champions gather that same day for the Region 8A tournament at Fertile-Beltrami high school.

First round Region 8A matches will feature district 31 champion Red Lake Falls vs. District 32 winner Kennedy at 2 p.m., while District 30 titlist Fosston, the pre-tournament favorite, takes on District 29 representative Cass Lake at 3:30.

Third place Region 8A match will be played at 7 p.m., followed by the championship match at 8:30.

Moorhead and Sauk Rapids advanced through North and South Half Region 8AA competition last week, with the Spuds beating Park Rapids 18-9, 18-12 in the North Half finals. The Indians upset top-seeded St. Cloud Apollo 18-7, 18-6 in the South Half championship match.

The Class A and Class AA state volleyball tournaments will be played Nov. 14-15 at Met Center in Bloomington.

Handicapped Given Chance To Hunt Waterfowl

Sportsmen with certain disabilities are allowed to hunt migratory game birds from stationary motor vehicles under an amended hunting regulation announced in the October 23, 1980, Federal Register.

Paraplegic hunters and hunters missing one or both legs may use stationary motor vehicles — including cars, vans and pickup trucks — to enable them to participate in the sport. However, the change will not supersede existing laws or other restrictions which conflict with the ruling, such as limited vehicle access on some national wildlife refuges.

By expanding hunting opportunities under the migratory bird treaty act to include these disabled sportsmen, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) is making it possible for states to broaden their laws.

Providing handicapped hunters such recreational opportunities has caught the public's attention, and the FWS has conducted experimental hunts. In the fall of 1978, the service allowed disabled sportsmen to hunt sika and whitetailed deer on Chincoteague national wildlife refuge in Virginia through a special program sponsored by the service and the disabled sportsmen of America. The hunting program, conducted to reduce an overpopulation of deer on the refuge, served as a model for providing assistance, whenever possible, to handicapped hunters.

Chincoteague's program for disabled persons was an outgrowth of an extended effort to serve handicapped people that began when a disabled visitor, noting the refuge's hunting program, questioned the refuge manager about hunting opportunities for the handicapped.

Both able-bodied and handicapped hunters must comply with all state hunting regulations. All migratory waterfowl hunters age 16 or older must possess a migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp. Proceeds from stamp sales are used for acquisition of waterfowl habitat.

Pink Salmon Record Broken, Reports DNR

Department of Natural Resources has announced that a new state record pink salmon was caught this fall in the Cross river on the north shore of Lake Superior. The new record, weighing 2-pounds, 12-ounces, was taken by Charles C. Krueger of St. Paul on September 13.

Pink salmon, which have a two-year life cycle, were accidentally stocked into Lake Superior in the 1950's and have since established natural spawning runs in odd numbered years.

A few pinks, however, have survived a year longer and as a result small runs are now showing up in even numbered years. It is anticipated that heavy spawning runs of pink salmon will eventually become an annual event in north shore streams.

Pinks are one of the smallest Pacific salmon and their maximum size will probably not exceed three pounds in Lake Superior.

Fish, Wildlife Service Plan

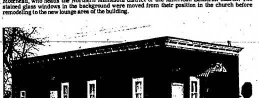
can work toward service goals. A document has been developed for each service program or set of similar programs: Endangered species, migratory birds, fishery resources, mammals and non-migratory birds, animal damage control, habitat preservation, interpretation and recreation, federal assistance, cooperative fish and wildlife research units, executive direction and administration and related support services.

Important resource problems are listed, as they relate to one or more programs, in the appropriate program management documents. Resource problems are often the joint responsibility of several service areas; for instance, endangered species and habitat preservation contribute toward restoration of the bald eagle. Service management plan calls for greater intra-agency cooperation to achieve goals while eliminating possible duplication of effort.

As announced in the September 29, 1980, Federal Register, limited copies of the 84-page service management plan and-or copies of program management documents, averaging 35-pages each, are available by writing to Director, Fish and Wildlife Service, in care of Division of Program Plans, Washington, D.C. 20240.

PARTICIPANTS in the 90th anniversary celebration and dedication of the new addition to Zion Lutheran church in Thief River Falls included the people pictured above. Rev. Richard Larson, pastor of the congregation, is shown at left with Charles Richards, chairman of the building committee; Dr. Hal Freeman, president of the congregation; and Bishop Cecil Johnson of Moorhead, who heads the Northern Minnesota district of the American Lutheran church. The stained glass windows in the background were moved from their position in the church before remodeling to the new lounge area of the building.



HOLT KEEN AGERS will hold an open house Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. at the city hall in Holt with coffee and cookies to be served and the public invited to participate. The hall has been remodeled for community meetings and activities with a new kitchen and restrooms equipped for handicapped persons included in the remodeling. The hall was used for the City of Holt and Township of Holt elections Tuesday.

Mavie Leader Has 24 Years In 4-H Work

although in the last few years, there was an average of 25 attendants per year. Breznay feels that there is not as much interest in 4-H as there once was, although there are more activities for 4-H'ers to participate in now.

"The 4-H program seems to be geared more to the younger children now," she said. "It was not uncommon years ago to belong to 4-H when you were 21. I don't think that the change is bad — competition-wise it's maybe good — but 17 and 18 year-olds could contribute so much today.

"About half-way through my years as leader I felt they should have split the junior and senior age groups," she continued. "Competition would have been more even betwee age groups then. Competition is good but when it is so extreme with the young competing with the older participants it may not always be good."

"But times change," she admitted. "There are more projects now, transportation is different and interests have shifted."

When the 4-H program first began, the major projects were geared toward homemaking and agriculture, she said. Now there is more of a variety to choose from. And, as time progressed, projects began to be used in the city as well as in the rural areas. Breznay feels a new division that has developed — lawn and landscaping — is a good change evident in the 4-H program.

Demonstrations cling to Breznay's mind as being some of the most interesting aspects of 4-H, she said. "We took many (demonstration projects) to the state fair. Even though it was always fun to win, we'd go back and try again if we didn't."

Breznay has done a lot of traveling in her lifetime. One of the most interesting trips she made was to New York City and Philadelphia when she was selected to attend a two-week forum. She visited the national 4-H center in Washington, D.C., and saw many sites such as the United Nations, the Statue of Liberty, Independence Hall and the White House.

Breznay has grown to become familiar with the responsibilities and dedication necessary to become a 4-H leader in those 25 years. As leader, she has been responsible for selecting and organizing projects and exhibits and has helped select plays and programs. Like most leaders she has been responsible for instructing in parliamentary procedure and, in teaching the proper flag salute and the 4-H creed.

"We get much support from out county agents," she said.

"It's the kids I enjoyed the most as leader," she said. "Many of them stop in after a number of years to see me. One of the most important things about 4-H," she added, "is to have a hand in helping men and women become successful in society. There is always the satisfaction of knowing you've helped someone; that you have brought them enjoyment and that they have come back to see you."

Are there any dislikes Breznay has toward being a 4-H leader?

"You mean besides the weather?" she joked. "About the only thing I dislike is the distance I have to travel to attend meetings. Since I live in town, I can't do for 4-H what I would like to do."

Breznay was president of the 4-H leader's council for three years, and secretary for one year. In her 25 years as leader, she has been awarded six pins — beginning with a bronze for her first year as leader, silver for her fifth, gold for her 10th, pearl for her 15th, diamond for her 20th and her final keepsake — the emerald pin which she was awarded during 4-H awards night last Thursday evening.

"I'm going to miss 4-H and working with kids and other leaders," she said. "I'll miss the close contact with other organizations, although I know I can attend meetings whenever I want. 4-H is never a restricted organization. The public is always welcome."

And Louise Breznay has shown, through her 25 years of working with 4-H'ers both young and old, that 4-H is definitely a "family affair."

Stangeland, Hanson And Stumpf Win

county 3,994 to 3,338, Red Lake county 1,604 to 985 and Polk county's 13 precincts 493 to 373. Only in Marshall county did Christensen show an edge, and that was by the slightest of margins at 2,079 to 2,042.

Rep. Nysether had a relatively easy win over Brun in District 1A, using a margin of 3,805 to 2,475 in Roseau county as a springboard to victory.

Congressman Arlan Stangeland was successful in his reelection bid over DFL challenger Gene Wenstrom, but by a narrow margin. With 1,044 of 1,127 precincts reporting at latest count (93 per cent), Stangeland had 120,781 votes to 110,118 for Wenstrom.

Stangeland ran strong in this area despite the DFL legislative strength. He carried Pennington county 3,886 to 3,473, Polk county 8,940 to 8,388, Marshall county 3,491 to 3,301 and Roseau county 3,346 to 2,956 but lost in Red Lake county 1,174 to 1,539.

Marshall county will have its first woman member of the county board of commissioners as Marcella Gonsorowski unseated incumbent commissioner Percy Stokke in the fourth district. Mrs. Gonsorowski carried nine of the 14 precincts to win by a margin of 74 votes — 774 to 700. Leonard Stoltman won reelection unopposed in the second district.

Red Lake county Willard Purath was elected commissioner with 232 votes in the second district to 207 votes for Russell Remick. He will succeed A. Donald Gagner who has moved from the county. Neil Prenevost was reelected in the fourth district, receiving 530 votes while unopposed.

Pennington county commissioner Albert Koop of the third district withstood the challenge of Lyle Jennings Sr. to win reelection by a vote of 871 to 594. Koop carried seven of the 10 precincts and lost by only small margins in the other three — 38 to 35 in Black River, 29 to 21 in Polk Centre and 34-32 in Numedal.

Incumbent commissioners won in Roseau county as George Larson defeated Earl Gilthvedt 653-522 and Milan Erickson defeated John Spina 741-605.

Polk county will have two new commissioners — Ira Mjelde in the first district and Earl Radi in the third. Mjelde will replace Orris Moen who was defeated in the primary election and Radi will replace Alfon Hanson who did not seek reelection. John Driscoll defeated challenger Bud Bushee to win reelection in the fifth district.

Record or near-record turnouts were noted in several of the counties. Auditors commented in nearly all cases on the large number of new voter registrations — sometimes approaching the number of voters previously registered in a precinct. The Polk county auditor noted that the 17,668 votes cast for President in the 91 precincts of that county was an all-time record, and that in some precincts there was a nearly 100 per cent turn-out of registered voters.

27,236 Calls Handled By Tel-Law System

If the number of calls received by the phone operators of the Minnesota TEL-LAW project launched April 1 is any indication, the public's interest in seeking legal advice has never been greater.

(The TEL-LAW project, sponsored jointly by the Ramsey, Hennepin county and Minnesota state bar associations, is a toll-free statewide phone service whereby persons can call and request any of 86 tapes on legal subjects and questions.)

Attribute this interest to the growing complexity of the law and the fact that we have become a "litigous" society, or whatever, the statewide popularity of TEL-LAW is increasing at a rate not expected when the project was launched on April 1st of this year.

"In fact," explained Heidi Hoard, chairman of the TEL-LAW committee, "if the number of phone calls keeps on increasing at the present rate, we'll have to seek additional funds just to keep the project operational, not considering the need for revising the present library of tapes and adding new topics for which we have been receiving requests."

For the five month period from April 1 to August 31, 27,236 calls were handled by the TEL-LAW operators located in the commerce building in downtown St. Paul. This does not include 289 calls received during the last three days of March, while the TEL-LAW lines were operational on a test basis, but official announcement of the service had not been made.

Chairman Hoard explained that the TEL-LAW project has had a number of positive "spin-offs" that earned some "gold stars" for the three sponsors of the service. "We found there was a natural tie-in with the Minnesota better business bureau, the United Fund agency, hospitals and senior citizen groups and many others. Thousands of TEL-LAW brochures were distributed by these groups, and most important, the brochures appear to have been retained for future reference," Hoard said.

"We know that hundreds of TEL-LAW calls have resulted from the promotional efforts of these organizations, and that a considerable number of attorneys are using TEL-LAW to brief new clients on specific subjects prior to first consultation meetings."

The following list indicates some of the most frequently requested tapes and the number of calls received during the five-month period studied:

Where to go for legal help in the Twin Cities, 312; getting the most benefit from attorney's services, 260; what to do if your attorney charges too much, 326; what if your attorney has acted improperly, 246; general information about adoption, 317; and can bankruptcy help me, 886;

Also how do you take bankruptcy, 636; renting residential property -- leases, terminations, 636, what should you do if you are arrested, 373; should you fight your traffic ticket, 462; must you take a chem test for drunk driving, 609; small claims of conciliation court, 591, and how do you collect a judgement, 450;

The food stamp program, 223; what is a legal separation, 844; do you have grounds for annulment of marriage, 503; how can your marriage be dissolved, 1,060; who will get custody of children in divorce, 526; how will property be divided in marriage dissolution, 868; and how will court divide debts in marriage dissolution, 423;

Also how financial support for a child is established, 554; how financial support for a spouse is established, 327; what to do if child support is not being paid, 334; restraining orders in a dissolution of a marriage, 219; what to do about family violence and child abuse, 265; what to do about wage garnishment, 247; why do you need a will, 917; probating an estate, 491; what is a trust, 238; and what is joint tenancy, 316;

Also what taxes have to be paid when someone dies, 384; guardianships for people unable to handle affairs, 226; what if you are injured at work, 482; automobile insurance, 335; medical and legal malpractice, 221; patents, trademarks and copyrights, 235; and libel and slander, 326.

Child Care Provider Meets Set In Area

Thief River Falls AVTI and the Minnesota department of public welfare are sponsoring four four-hour workshops for child care providers in Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk and Norman counties.

"What Can I do To Prevent Harm To Children" workshop will be offered from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Roseau public school, room 306, November 17; Thief River Falls AVTI, room 120, November 19, and November 24; and Crookston Central high school, room 205, December 1.

Enrollment is limited to 20 per class and a $2 fee will be charged. Snooky Bondy will be the workshop leader.

Program's basic objectives are to assist child care providers in recognizing the indicators of child abuse and neglect, understanding their role, function; and legal responsibility in reporting child abuse and neglect; and understanding feelings about responding to and reporting abuse and neglect.

Keen Agers At Holt Complete Hall Project

"The More We Get Together" was the theme song emphasized recently by the Holt Keen Agers as they entertained a large group of honor guests.

Keen Agers were celebrating the completion of renovation projects on the Holt community hall which will provide a center for activities to be used for the senior citizen group.

Those representing the agencies that helped make the project successful through the Federal grant and other funds, were honored, as well as visitors including three members of the Northwest Regional Commission — Verne Green, Kenneth Moen, and LaVern Swan; Donna Myhrers, representing the commission's director, Mike Moore; George Panek, fifth district county commissioner and Mrs. Panek; and Charles Cheney, county auditor. Ivan Johnson, mayor of Holt was given absentee recognition.

Keen Agers club was organized under the direction of Rev. Sorenson in 1973 and has continued in an informal style as a get-together for anyone who wants to attend.

The group has potluck meals, films, movies and speakers. They send cards and gifts to those in the hospital, and recognize birthdays each month with cakes brought by members. They are also involved in the Vial of Life program and have been active in the county's Council on Aging.

At the special celebration, attention was given to the Main Street park which was created and is maintained by the club on land donated by Mrs. Bennie Haglund in memory of her husband. A special thanks was also given to Alf Movick and George Anderson for their work in refinishing the tables at the Nazareth Lutheran church which had previously been the seniors' meeting place.

Program closed with the presentation of $500 to the city by the Keen Agers, accepted by DelRay Sannes, clerk. A personal contribution of $100 was also made by Gerry Nelson for use in purchasing table covers.

Question Value Of Employee Health Program

Growing numbers of companies have invested time and money in programs to promote the health of their employees. But one member of the public health faculty at the University of Minnesota questions the success of such efforts.

While there is evidence that these programs may have immediate results, "there is not enough long-term data to prove that a lifestyle change program reduces the cost of insurance and medical care and prevents the incidence of disease," said Elaine Richard, assistant professor of public health nursing.

"Changing people's habits is the hardest thing in the world," Richard said. "It's difficult to change and even more difficult to maintain the change."

Although these programs may boost morale and develop a person's awareness of his or her own responsibility for health maintenance, Richard said, the "Big payoff" has been in public relations, not dollars and cents.

She said the companies that market lifestyle change programs often exaggerate their impact. For instance, antismoking programs claim a success rate of 85 per cent but "studies show that only 15 per cent have quit smoking after one year," Richard said.

She said companies lack the long-term commitment necessary to evaluate a program's effectiveness properly. "That costs money and raises the price," she added.

Despite her criticism of prepackaged lifestyle change programs, Richard strongly endorsed company-sponsored health promotion efforts — as long as they address the specific needs of the employees in a particular work environment.

Richard offered several examples:

—If a company employs a young, female population, then a health program on parenting; human sexuality and family planning and self-breast exams may be more beneficial than an exercise program.

—With a young work force, a company should address drug problems. "A logical approach would include a drug awareness program aimed at prevention as well as a chemical dependency program," she said.

—Assembly-line workers who perform repetitive motion tasks with their hands are susceptible to carpel-tunnel disease (similar to arthritis). They need advice on how to vary their workloads and-or changes in the procedures for carrying out their work.

—An exercise program for physical laborers is senseless if they spend much of their time in physical activities. They may need information on warm-up exercises before work or coping with fatigue.

A successful health promotion program should be molded to the job function with planning by labor, management and health professionals, Richard said.

Some companies, like General Mills and Control Data in Minneapolis, hire occupational health nurses to plan health promotion programs. These nurses take a holistic approach to wellness in the workplace, concentrating on prevention as well as treatment in emergencies, Richard explained.

But the essential ingredient in a program's success, according to Richard, is the individual worker's participation and endorsement. Unless employees make personal commitments to improving their own health, even the most sophisticated and expensive program is doomed, she said.

The House of Kings

What stories could be told by the White House on Pennsylvania Avenue. It has seen men plucked from the ranks and lifted to the heights of power almost overnight; it has housed large and small families, fed them, entertained them, challenged them and watched them eventually depart to make way for newcomers.

Think of the secrets this House has heard — the hopes and plans for a nation's future. No doubt about it . . . the White House could fill many books with the stories it has witnessed.

Each president has been given a great privilege, as well as a grave responsibility. The opportunity to lead your nation as commander-in-chief is a rare one indeed.

There is another king who has led and inspired the lives of countless millions over the ages. He needs no White House. He is everywhere. His power is infinite, and His oval office is in the hearts of people everywhere. Let His love and guidance sustain you. Worship this week in the House of your choice.

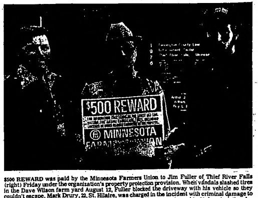
Social Issues Focus of ALC Convention



$500 REWARD was paid by the Minnesota Farmers Union to Jim Fuller of Thief River Falls (right) Friday under the organization's property protection provision. When vandals slashed tires in the Dave Wilson farm yard August 12, Fuller blocked the driveway with his vehicle so they couldn't escape. Mark Drury, 22, St. Hilaire, was charged in the incident with criminal damage to property and appeared in district court September 29. He was sentenced to 90 days in jail under the Huber law and ordered to make restitution of $949.66. Four others involved in the incident were not charged. Second such award made by the Farmers Union in Pennington county in the past two years, the $500 reward is made for action or information leading to the arrest and conviction for arson, vandalism, theft or other felonies committed on a Farmers Union member's property. Also pictured are Korydon Chervestad, Oklee, president of the Pennington county Farmers Union, and Sheriff Charles Richards.

There is no doubt that the American Lutheran church (ALC) has a strong interest in social issues although actions of the ALC's 10th general convention here did not always give a clear indication of where the church stands.

Two statements on abortion were adopted, interpreted by some as contradictory. The contradiction was denied by ALC President David W. Preus. They simply serve two different functions, he said.

A church council recommendation that the ALC convention officially support the Equal Rights amendment was replaced by a substitute motion (adopted 508-380). That action called on the ALC to "reiterate its continuing commitment to justice, especially as this principle affects women's and men's rights within family and society."

It also urged ALC members to weigh the "implications of the principle of justice as it relates to the Equal Rights amendment," and to encourage elected representatives "to vote their consciences with regard to this amendment."

Action on the abortion issue resulted in approval by a 609-323 vote of a statement by the ALC church council executive committee. A statement by a 14-member task force on abortion was approved by a 618-274 vote. The executive committee statement is generally regarded as taking a stronger stand against abortion than the task force statement.

The church council had recommended that the task force statement be received as "information" only and as "one expression of views to be considered." The convention rejected the church council recommendation and gave the statement the status the task force itself had requested.

Although the executive committee statement acknowledges that "there may be circumstances when, all pertinent factors responsibly considered, an induced abortion may be a tragic option," it generally takes a stronger stand against abortion than did the task force statement.

Describing abortion as "always a serious matter," the task force statement places on individuals "the responsibility to make the best possible decision they are capable of making in the light of the information available to them and their sense of accountability to God, neighbor, and self."

Convention also approved, 812 to 104, a statement on "Human Sexuality and Sexual Behavior." Although the statement deals with a whole range of issues having to do with sexuality and sexual behavior, the debate centered around the position on homosexuality.

The original statement, which took a decisive stand against homosexuality, was amended to allow for a greater openness in dealing with homosexual persons. A sentence that referred to "rape, violence, incest, seduction, homosexuality, adultery, prostitution" as sinful was amended to read, "rape, violence, incest, seduction, adultery, prostitution and some forms of homosexual behavior as well as some forms of heterosexual behavior."

The statement, however, rejected homosexuality as an acceptable form of Christian behavior or simply another form of sexual behavior equally valid with the dominant male-female pattern.

By the end of this year, members of the ALC will have contributed $12 million for national and international hunger programs since the program was initiated in 1974. In addition to this extra-budgetary amount, another $2 million from the regular ALC budget is devoted every year to programs that deal with hunger.

The convention voted that the hunger program be continued for another five years.

In other actions dealing with social issues the convention urged conscientious objectors to comply with selective service registration, but also encouraged congregations to maintain a written record of their members who declare themselves conscientious objectors, and to help young people become familiar with the church's views on peace, war and conscience.

Ministry with the disabled was encouraged with the reception of a churchwide statement, "Disability Within the Family of God: A Theology of Access." The convention asked support for the International Year of Disabled Persons in 1981 and suggested that funding be sought for a film on the disabled.

Delegates also called on the church to remain sensitive to the needs of the disabled in all areas of church activity, including the employment of qualified persons with handicaps for the AKC general office.

Despite the attempt of some to have the ALC support the boycott of Nestle' products, the convention reaffirmed its 1978 action, expressing "its continuing concern for the development of nutritionally sound and socially responsible infant feeding programs throughout the world."

Study Ways To Move Material If Hazardous

A program to ensure the safe transportation of hazardous materials has been launched by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT), according to commissioner Richard P Braun.

The Minnesota hazardous materials transportation program is designed to help prevent or reduce the severity of vehicle accidents involving the transportation of hazardous materials on the state's highways, he said.

Included in the program will be a newsletter that provides information to truckers and shippers on the proper way to pack, label and handle hazardous materials and wastes to be transported on our highways, said Don Berg, acting director, Mn-DOT office of rates and regulations. Regional training seminars are also planned, and a hazardous materials manual will be published by November of 1981, he added.

Inspection of shippers and truckers will be conducted by Mn-DOT's recently hired hazardous materials specialists. They are Peter Marcotte of White Bear Lake and Raymond Jones of Chisago City, Berg said.

Mn-DOT will work closely with the Minnesota department of public safety and the Minnesota hazardous materials safety committee in getting the program established, he said.

At Last It's Over!

The 1980 election campaign is now finished. An election has been held, the winners are rejoicing in their victory and the losers are wondering what they could have done to reverse the results. Some are already thinking about a campaign effort in the next two or four years.

While the relentless barrage of material becomes tedious at times and we become annoyed by it, it is a part of our system of government and we must recognize it as such. To attempt to curtail the efforts would give unfair advantage to the incumbents who can, and often do, use their positions to campaign on almost a full-time basis.

So we accept the stream of political commentary as a by-product of living in this free country, where freedom of expression is fundamental. We wouldn't have it any other way. But it will be great to put campaigning issues aside for at least a little while.

A Nation Remembers

In proclaiming November 11 as Veterans Day, President Jimmy Carter said that we will "pay tribute to 30 million living and 14 million deceased patriots who served in our armed forces so that you and I might live in freedom".

Theme for Veterans Day this year is "A Grateful Nation Remembers". And it should be emphasized that while we would rather forget the horrors and miseries of war, we must not forget the men and women who served in those wars at great personal sacrifice.

The Veterans Administration has released a list of participants and deaths in service in the 10 wars our country has been involved in from the American Revolution to the Vietnam war. Most costly in terms of American lives lost was the Civil war from 1861 to 1865 because all the deaths on both sides were Americans.

The figures were somewhat surprising, considering the scope of World War II, for example, and the increase in weaponry and amount of devastation weapons could cause.

Deaths in service during the Civil war's four years of conflict totaled 497,821, including 364,000 Union soldiers and 133,821 Confederates. World War II American losses totaled 406,000, including 291,557 battle deaths. Other countries' losses in World War II were huge. Russia had 7,500,000 battle deaths; Germany 3,500,000, Japan 1,219,000, China 2,200,000, France 210,000, Poland 320,000, Yugoslavia 410,000, the United Kingdom 244,723, Hungary 140,000, Rumania 300,000 and a number of others had battle deaths of less than 100,000. These included small countries like Finland with 82,000, Italy with 77,000, Greece with 77,000 and others.

American war-time losses include the following: American Revolution (1775-1784), 4,000; War of 1812 (1812-1815), 2,000; Mexican War (1846-1848) 13,000; Indian Wars (1817-1898) 1,000; Civil War (1861-1865) 364,000 Union and 133,821 Confederate; Spanish-American War (1898-1902) 11,000; World War I (1917-1918) 116,000; World War II (9-16-40 through 7-25-47) 406,000; Korean Conflict (6-27-50 through 1-31-55) 55,000; and Vietnam Era (8-4-64 through 5-7-75) 47,000.

Totals show 38,924,000 war participants, 1,081,000 deaths in service, 26,180,000 living war veterans and 30,074,000 living ex-service members.

Be More Productive

A century ago, Robert Louis Stevenson devised a number of rules to help people live happier, more productive lives. These rules may be a century old, but they are still excellent guidelines:

1) Make up your mind to be happy — learn to find pleasure in simple things.

2) Make the best of circumstances. No one has everything, and everyone has something of sorrow.

3) Don't take yourself too seriously.

4) Don't let criticism worry you — you can't please everybody.

5) Don't let your neighbors set your standards — be yourself.

6) Do things you enjoy doing, but stay out of debt.

7) Don't borrow trouble. Imaginary things are harder to bear than actual ones.

8) Since hate poisons the soul, do not cherish enmities and grudges. Avoid people who make you unhappy.

9) Have many interests. If you can't travel, read about places.

10) Don't hold postmortems or spend time brooding over sorrows and mistakes.

11) Don't be the one who never gets over things.

12) Keep busy at something. A very busy person never has time to be unhappy.

Sleep When The Wind Blows

Following article by Bob Conklin appeared in the Minnesota Business Journal:

A farmer had been desperately looking with no success, for a hired hand. Finally a young man showed up and said, "I hear you've been looking for some help."

"I sure have," replied the farmer. "What do you do? Can you run a tractor?"

"Nope," answered the fellow.

"How about a milking machine?"

"Never worked one of those either."

After a few more questions with the same negative responses the farmer finally asked, "Well, what can you do?"

"I can sleep while the wind blows," said the young man.

In no mood for joking, the farmer almost told the fellow to be on his way. But he needed help so badly that he decided to give the youth a try.

A week or so later the farmer woke in the middle of the night. Outside a storm was blustering; swatches of windblown rain were battering away at the windows. The farmer jumped out of bed and went to the hired hand's bedroom. Efforts to rouse the helper were like trying to waken a sack of oats.

So the farmer, by himself, rushed outdoors to take care of things. But when he got to the barn the doors were shut and bolted. The animals were securely in the shelter. Remembering that there was straw and feed in the back of the barn that could be blown away and ruined by the rain he hurried outside once more. But his concerns were unfounded for the piles were covered with canvas and fastened down.

It was then that he realized the significance of the young man's prophetic claim, "I can sleep when the wind blows."

It's a pleasant little fable that reminds you not to wait until you're burdened with desperation or clamity before accepting personal responsibility for living your life successfully. Almost all of the strains, anxieties, and worries of the future could be eliminated by the way that you conduct yourself today.

Why do people render themselves helpless with sickened bodies before they take steps to gain good health? Why do some fumble along with half-hearted efforts telling themsleves they will do better when they gain a promotion: And there are those who bogged down with debt and financial distress. They have convinced themselves this cloud of anguish is something they can do very little about today and that, somehow, the future will take care of it.

A friend described it this way: "Life is what happens while you're making other plans!" While you're thinking about all of the things you're going to do someday life is going on.

Living is what is happening right now! The only bit of life that you can experience is this movement. It is what you do with today that matters!

Do you want success? Then do the things today that you have to do to be successful. Do you want happiness? Then enrich a few of the moments just ahead with the simple activities that bring you pleasure.

A lifetime is a bunch of moments, a lot of "right nows," that are chained together hour after hour, week after week, year after year. Using today to show kindness to those around you, to saturate your mind with positive thoughts, and to do your work as well as you know how will enable you to "sleep when the wind blows"!

Borrowed Nonsense:

Election day is a lot like Christmas. Both days are highly traditional. Both are recognized nationally. Both are highly emotional. Both are observed by a large part of the population. And both often produce fruitcakes that last for years.

Lena was upset with Lars for not giving her mother a gift on mother-in-law day.

"Vy give her somting ven she hasn't used vat I gave her last year?" Lars replied.

"Vat did you give her last year?" Lena retorted.

"A cemetery lot," Lars replied.

The government requires electrical appliances to carry energy-efficient labels. The problem is that they're not required for the workers who manufacture them.

Teacher: "Name two things so simple a child can operate them."
Wise Student: "Mom and Dad."

A home is the place where part of the family waits until the others have returned with the cars.

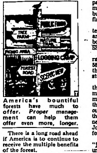
THE PUBLIC INTEREST

Thousands of convenient, essential products, including lumber and building materials, paper products, packaging and chemicals, fuels, such enduring benefits as fishing streams, natural trails, swimming holes, grazing land, wildlife and pure water, are all part of the great American forest. The forest is one of the most useful resources with which this planet has been blessed.

Surprising as it may be to some, all those things can and do coexist in the working commercial forests of America. Commercial forest, as defined by the U.S. Forest Service, is all forest land—whether owned by individuals, government or the forest industry—that is capable of, and potentially available for, growing repeated crops of trees for harvest. It includes land in National Forests but not in National Parks or Wilderness areas.

Demands on the commercial forest are growing at an alarming rate. An expanding population is placing new pressures on the forest for recreation. Thousands of acres are withdrawn every year for homes, shopping centers and additions to Wilderness. Of even more concern, America's consumption of wood and paper products is expected to double in the next 50 years.

Fortunately, there is reason for cautious optimism if the techniques used by industry to grow more trees faster can be applied to all our commercial land. Productivity is less on privately-owned land than on industry's and is seriously lagging in National Forests.



America's bountiful forests have much to offer. Proper management can help them offer even more, longer.

There is a long road ahead if America is to continue to receive the multiple benefits of the forest.

'U' M Tuition To Increase 10 Per Cent

Tuition at the University of Minnesota will rise 10 per cent winter and spring quarters as part of a plan to recoup a $14.1 million loss in the university budget caused by the state fiscal emergency.

The action to raise tuition temporarily was approved on an 11-0 vote by the university board of regents. Regent Neil Sherburne was not present.

Tuition "surcharge" will raise $3.5 million and affect 58,705 day students as well as thousands of evening-class students on all five campuses.

The board also authorized the university's administration to borrow up to $5 million to help cover part of the loss. No loans will be taken out until closer to the end of the fiscal year, when exact needs will be known, said C.T. Johnson, acting vice president for finance.

Calling the actions "joyless" and "reluctant," university president C. Peter Magrath described to the regents his plan for making the $14.1 million cutback through a combination of tuition increase, bank loans and internal budget cuts of $5.8 million.

The cut was made necessary by the projected $195 million deficit in the state's budget, which will leave all state-supported institutions with less money than planned for the year. The university receives 36 per cent of its support from the state.

Enrollment on the university's five campuses reached an all-time high this year. Magrath told the board that "while there is an economic recession, there is no recession in the demand for education.

"While we are experiencing record-setting enrollment, we are also experiencing record-setting retrenchment. This means we must serve more students with fewer dollars," he said.

Students in the college of liberal arts in the Twin Cities campus, the largest body of students, will have to pay $340 for classes winter and spring quarters, an increase of $31 a quarter. Tuition surcharge comes on top of a seven per cent tuition increase approved last year for classes this year.

Although the top priority in making the cuts was to protect all segments of the university directly involved with teaching, about 50 positions for graduate assistants were cut, said Kenneth Keller, vice president for academic affairs.

The loss of those positions will mean larger classes in some cases and fewer people available to grade papers, Keller said. "We had to cut about 50, and a cut of one is serious," he said.

Student plans to protest the budget cuts by boycotting classes and marching on the state capitol are aimed at state government and not at the regents or the university administration, student Joe McLaughlin told the board. McLaughlin is chairman of the students representatives to the board of regents.

Many departments have made their own budget cuts by decreasing their spending for supplies, expenses and equipment. "Much of this will be in travel, which will take a toll in faculty development and outreach," Magrath said in a letter to the board. "Another hard-hit area will be duplication costs, which will reduce our ability to provide students. . . with printed class material to supplement lectures and discussions."

In another action, the regents approved the appointment of Frederick M. Bohen to the vice presidency for finance and operations. Currently assistant secretary for management and budget for the federal department of health and human services, Bohen will assume the university position shortly after the first of the year.

Bohen is the former chief of staff to HEW Sec. Joseph A. Califano Jr., former staff assistant to President Lyndon B. Johnson and former director of news and public affairs for WNET-TV in New York.

Gov. Quie's Column

Recent publicity about disposal of wastes near Spring Valley in southeastern Minnesota and the Twin-cities suburb of Oakdale has brought renewed attention to the topic of waste storage in Minnesota.

These two incidents concern enforcement of laws and regulations relating to present and past dumping. In Spring Valley, the waste was deposited within the last year. In Oakdale, the wastes were buried 20 to 30 years ago. In both instances, the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) and the Minnesota Department of Health, are now taking appropriate actions.

Currently, there are three processes in motion to deal with Minnesota's hazardous wastes.

One, the MPCA is identifying former dumping sites that may contain hazardous wastes.

Two, the MPCA is continually tracking hazardous wastes from the point of origin to the permanent storage site.

Three, and the main emphasis of this column, the new Waste Management Board (WMB) has begun work to identify a site for future storage of hazardous waste in Minnesota.

In my State of the State address in January 1980 I urged establishment of a management policy for solid and hazardous wastes. The Joint Legislative Committee on Solid and Hazardous Waste worked on this task, and the 1980 legislation that I signed into law has actually set this process in motion.

A major factor of this new law is the creation of the WMB. This nine-member board is responsible for the development of a plan for hazardous waste management planning and solid waste facility promotion and siting.

The time deadlines outlined in the new waste management law assure us exactly when Minnesota will have a hazardous waste site. By August 1981, the WMB is to have identified six possible locations in six different counties for a disposal site. By spring 1983, the WMB must select at least one of those locations for the hazardous waste disposal site.

The creation of the WMB is extremely important to me because I view the disposal of waste as one of the major concerns before our state.

In my view, there are two basic principles which must be adhered to in disposing of waste.

First, it is absolutely necessary for the health and safety of our people to find appropriate locations to dispose hazardous waste. We ought to recycle and recover as much of the waste as we can, in the conservation of God's earth, before we have any permanent storage of the waste. What remains must be disposed of safely.

Second, the siting must be done with fairness and wisdom, in a manner which is sensitive to the concerns of our people. If the siting is undertaken in this way, it will be accepted.

Too often in the past, government-owned land has been held inviolate and private locations were sought. I believe the state must look at its own land first as a site for location of hazardous waste.

Driving Down Car Costs

A new little car, the Dodge Aries, can go a long way toward saving its owner time, gas, money and trouble.

A new car is coming out this year that can not only save its owners money when they drive it—it can save them some money when they can't drive it.

The car is a fuel-efficient front-wheel drive small car that seats six. It's designed to be easy—and therefore less expensive—to maintain.

Youthfully-styled, this quality-built vehicle is available as a two or four-door sedan or a station wagon. It is made with galvanized steel and other anti-corrosion materials to assure long, corrosion-free body life. Self-adjusting features in the engine reduce the need for maintenance. The engine compartment is open and accessible, making needed maintenance a lot easier, faster and less costly. The scheduled maintenance intervals are longer, too, saving owners time as well as money. This new car is called the Aries. It is built by the Dodge Division of the Chrysler Corporation. This new car has been called the right car in the right place at the right time.

A car that can cut down the cost of gassing up while it reduces the cost and occasions for maintenance can help a lot of drivers get the jump on inflation.

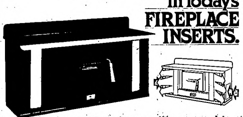
The Hottest Technology in todays FIREPLACE INSERTS.



As home heating costs steadily rise, more and more people are converting their existing fireplaces into better heat generators by installing fireplace inserts. Most fireplace inserts on the market today lack the design structure necessary to be truly efficient heat sources. Many are poorly manufactured with inferior materials. Others are difficult to control. Some are not even engineered properly for effective heat transfer into the living area ... it goes up the chimney instead. And in today's economy, that's a crime.

Arrow—The Efficiency Experts
Arrow fireplace inserts are designed by heating engineers to meet all UL standards and manufactured by a company with 20 years experience in the heating industry. Every Arrow fireplace insert is a happy combination of inventive design and solid construction that squeezes more heat out of every log burned.

The Inside Difference
The firebox of an Arrow insert is lined with durable cast iron around a firebrick floor for maximum conduction of heat. Heat exchangers surround the fire on four sides to extract more heat from the wood than conventional inserts. Two quiet but powerful fans circulate air through the heat exchanger system and into the living area, providing a constant, even heat, free from annoying drafts. Add to that a positive manual damper and variable speed fan control for a unit offering precise adjustment of both burning rate and air circulation flow. A sophisticated fireplace insert that will deliver years of reliable service.

The Outside Style
Outside, an Arrow fireplace insert reflects the same precision and quality as the inside. Clean, contemporary lines blend with virtually any decor. A hardwood handle on the front loading door beautifully accents the rich black finish, yet remains cool to the touch. And the entire door is removable so you can still enjoy an open fire with the optional accessory screen.

Invest in the Best
If spiraling heating bills are getting you down, consider an Arrow fireplace insert. It makes the most of your present fireplace opening without expensive installation costs. Whether used as a sole heating source or a supplement to an existing system, you'll appreciate the features and economy that only an Arrow can provide.

Don't get burned by inferior brands.
Insist on an Arrow.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

One of my most pleasant and important responsibilities as president of the U.S. Chamber during the past five years has been the preparation of these "Voice of Business" columns. They are an indispensable means of communicating at least some of the information that crosses my desk, and of relating just a few of the follies that take place in Washington every day. Then too, they have been a vehicle through which I have enjoyed corresponding with thousands of wonderful people who have taken their time to write and share their ideas with me.

Through the years, our audience has grown remarkably. The "Voice of Business" is now sent to 589 newspapers, 307 radio and television stations, and to scores of state and local chambers, journalists, politicians, heads of large and small businesses, and individual taxpayers. As we experienced this surge in readership, I began receiving more and more requests to reproduce the columns in book form. I want you to know that we have now done just that.

The publication we have completed, and which is just coming off the press, is entitled "Economic Progress . . . It's Everybody's Business." The book is, of course, a compilation of our best "Voice of Business" columns. But, at the risk of being somewhat immodest, I believe it is even more than that. The columns have been specially arranged to tell a unique story about economic principles and issues as they relate to the everyday lives of the American people. The underlying theme emphasizes what has gone wrong with America, what is still right, and — above all — what must be done so that we may all enjoy the bounties of increased progress, prosperity and individual freedom.

The book addresses all the major issues from inflation to recession, energy, taxation, regulation, productivity, the environment, health, welfare and many others. As it does, it examines such questions as: What is the secret of America's success? Is big business running America? Why can't government free enterprise? Are you a right-wing extremist? Could Uncle Sam make us all millionaires? Will EPA require toilet-trained seafood; How is the Iowan Navy? What is the best way to destroy a city?

I am also quite excited, and, indeed, deeply honored that former President Ford agreed to write the forward for the book, which he describes as "the best ongoing commentary I have read on the major economic issues confronting the nation during the past five years."

If there was one compelling reason that motivated me to write this book, it was my conviction that America today faces the greatest financial and economic emergency since the Great Depression. Unless we soon rid ourselves of our dangerous complacency regarding the benefits and the responsibilities of living in a free society, I fear Americans are destined to suffer profound hardship.

Winston Churchill once remarked: "Some see private enterprise as a predatory target to be shot, others as a cow to be milked, but few are those who see it as a sturdy horse pulling the wagon." If we are to surmount the problems challenging America in the 1980's — problems which seem to grow more difficult and dangerous by the day — we must begin rebuilding the nation's economic base by harnessing the tremendous, neglected potential of the private enterprise system. How to do that is what "Economic Progress . . . It's Everybody's Business" is all about. I hope you'll read it.

Should you be interested in obtaining a copy, please contact: U.S. Chamber Press, Special Sales Projects, Attention Philip Sweeney, 1615 H. Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20062. (202) 659-6028.

HONEY PECAN BREAD

The accompanying recipe for Honey Pecan Bread looks and smells good, but more than that it tastes good and packs a nutritional wallop to boot. Ingredients like whole wheat flour, oatmeal, cottage cheese, eggs and pecans boost the nutrients in this loaf. Sweetened with honey it has an affinity for more honey when served with butter and honey for a late evening snack or when toasted for breakfast. One slice of Honey Pecan bread contains 5 grams of protein, 160 calories, plus minerals and vitamins, making a substantial contribution to the day's food needs.

HONEY PECAN BREAD

Makes 2 loaves

- 3-1/2-4 cups unsifted white flour
- 2 cups unsifted whole wheat flour
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 packages Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1/4 cup (1/2 stick) Fleischmann's Margarine
- 1 cup cream style cottage cheese
- 2 eggs (at room temperature)
- 3/4 cup quick oats, uncooked
- 3/4 cup chopped Planters Pecans

Combine 3 cups white flour and whole wheat flour. In a large bowl thoroughly mix 1-1/2 cup flour mixture, salt and yeast.

Combine water, honey, margarine, and cottage cheese in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm (120°F.-130°F.). Margarine does not need to melt. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add eggs and 1/2 cup flour mixture. Beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in quick oats, remaining flour mixture, and enough additional white flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in a greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover bowl, let rise in warm place free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down. Turn onto lightly floured board. Knead in pecans. Divide dough in half. Shape each into a loaf and place in two greased 8-1/2 x 4-1/2 x 2-1/2—inch loaf pans or into balls and place in two greased 8-inch layer cake pans. Lightly grease tops of loaves. Let rise until double in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake at 375°F. for 35 to 40 minutes, or until done. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

The Symptoms: Nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, abdominal cramps, and in rare cases low blood pressure and shock.

The Diagnosis: Food poisoning.

Food poisoning may be the most prevalent disease in the world next to the common cold and measles, notes the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA).

The MMA professional organization of Minnesota's medical doctors points out that few foods are sterile. When present in food, disease organisms will grow and multiply rapidly in temperatures ranging from 50 degrees to 130 degrees Fahrenheit. They thrive particularly well as the temperatures reach the 90 degree mark. These temperatures are rather common in automobile and trunk interiors exposed to the rays of the summer sun. Although large numbers of these organisms or their toxic products are ordinarily required to produce illness, the right conditions including warmth and moisture can cause millions of these organisms to reproduce at a very rapid rate. Dangerous accumulations of the disease organisms can occur within four to six hours, or more frequently, 12 to 24 hours.

Members of the staphylococus and salmonella families are the organisms most commonly associated with infected foods.

All of us occasionally carry staph germs in our nose and throat or on our skin. This substantially increases the chances of food contamination.

It is important to note that staph germs in themselves do not harm the digestive tract. However, when they are present in food they can produce an extremely irritating toxin which cooking doesn't destroy.

Cured meats, sandwich preparations, salads (particularly tuna, chicken and potato), milk and cream filled bakery goods are excellent spawning grounds for staph bacteria.

Meat, milk, and eggs from infected animals carry salmonella.

Although the animals may be healthy, food from these animals can be contaminated with salmonella bacteria by flies, cockroaches, rats, and mice. More frequently, salmonella infections are transmitted by people who don't show signs of the disease but carry it in their intestinal tracts. Hamburger and all food that is prepared by grinding, chopping or stirring, should be regarded as having been thoroughly saturated with all common airborne bacteria, plus those on the hands of the person preparing the food.

Staph poisoning is ordinarily less acute than salmonellosis and shorter lasting.

While little can be done for the relief of salmonella poisoning, persons who are otherwise healthy will throw off the infection themselves, usually within 24 to 36 hours. A medical evaluation is advised for babies and persons with some other ailments who have difficulty in coping with the disease.

The MMA offers the following precautions against food poisoning:

—Always wash hands before preparing food;

—Refrigerate perishable foods immediately after preparing them at home;

—Keep all perishable foods cold until just before cooking or serving them. Preferably, the thermo chest or picnic basket should have an ice compartment.

—Stock your picnic basket with as many non-perishable foods as possible. Suggested examples include canned foods, potato chips, well scrubbed raw fruits and vegetables.

—Discard without bothering to taste any food that is tainted or giving off a disagreeable odor.

—Don't make sandwiches the night before the picnic. Cooked meat next to moist bread makes an ideal environment for bacteria to multiply rapidly.

—Use vinegar in meat, salad and fish dishes to retard bacteria.

In allergic people, problems of the middle ear are relatively common advises the Minnesota Medical association (MMA).

The symptoms or complaints most commonly encountered are those of the impaired hearing, discomforting ear sensations, and frequent attacks of middle ear infection. Although this problem occurs more frequently in children it can occur in adults as well.

The foregoing symptoms are the result of the obstruction of the eustachian tube (the small tube that runs from the middle ear to the back part of the nose). When the nasal tissues become swollen and congested as a result of the person's allergy, the small tube can be obstructed. This prevents air from passing back and forth from the nose to the middle ear. This in turn results in unequal pressure on either side of the ear drum — pressure on the outside of the ear drum being greater forces the ear drum in and produces the "retracted ear drum."

The offending agent (allergen) may be pollen, mold, house dust, animal danders, and in some situations even foods. If this situation of the unequal pressure and retracted ear drum are permitted to exist for a period of time, ultimately the middle ear fills with a fluid. This in turn can result in serious impairment of hearing and provides in invitation to frequent middle ear infections. When it has been proven that the cause of the swelling of the eustachian tube is allergic in nature, the treatment is to control the patient's allergies.

Allergic reactions in the internal ear are infrequent. However, when they do appear they manifest themselves by dizziness and occasionally buzzing noises in the ear. When these symptoms occur in an allergic person, the possibility of having allergy as the cause should be suspected as with the allergic reactions in the middle ear. The offending agent (allergen) may be any one of those commonly associated with allergy.

Allergic diseases are a leading cause of illness in children. Every effort should be made to help the allergic child advises the Minnesota medical association (MMA).

Age has no respect for the onset of allergy symptoms which may appear in the early days and weeks of a child's life. In one infant, the appearance of an eczema may be the first indication of an existing allergy. In another instance, the collicy, irritable, fussy baby may be using the symptoms as a way of saying "hey, look world, I'm new here and already I've got an allergy problem".

The irritable infant who has trouble with night feeding or experiences repeated diarrhea may actually be reacting to an allergy. Because man is the only form of life which drinks milk from another species, the existance of milk allergy in humans is common. This allergy occurs when the infant becomes sensitized to the protein in the cow's milk.

Cow's milk allergy can take the form of an eczema or gastrointestinal distress or both. Allergic symptoms can appear later in life at the age of 15 or beyond.

Although the watering eyes of the stuffy, running nose may develop later, a thorough medical evaluation will usually reveal that some of the traditional infant allergy symptoms were present but were unrecognized at that time.

The MMA notes that the term "outgrowing an allergy" has long been over used and abused. Once you are an allergic person, you are an allergic person for the rest of your life. Symptoms may change for a variety of reasons including a change of environment. The allergic patient who sits back with a "do nothing attitude" waiting for an allergy to "just go away" is likely to be very disappointed.

Any person who thinks that he or she has an allergy is urged to consult his or her physician for a verification of the diagnosis. A course of treatment should be initiated at the time that a doctor's findings disclose the presence of an allergy.

Physicians who treat allergic diseases generally feel that patients who begin treatment during their youth stand a much better chance of obtaining relief or improvement. This does mean that allergy patients in their thirties, forties and fifties will not benefit from treatment. However, the younger the patient, the shorter the duration of treatment and the greater the prospect for improvement.

Pine To Prairie Council Supported By United Way

Thief River Falls area United Way contributions totaling $7,000 this year will be allocated toward the Pine To Prairie Girl scout council.

This council, as well as the Northern Lights council of the Boy scouts of America (BSA), receives a major portion of Thief River Falls area United Way contributions.

The Girl scout council provides training for all adult volunteers, materials, including leader packets, equipment forms, brochures, pamphlets and other associated materials; and professional direction to leaders and Girl scouts.

A further service offered by the council, which is made available through United Way support, among other local campaigns gifts and projects, is communication. A monthly newsletter is printed for all registered adults. A clerical staff is provided to maintain inventory of records, books, supplies, statistical data and prepare required reports. Transportation is provided for field trips, outings, and conventions. Two service centers available within the council are located in Grand Forks and Fargo, with the council covering 20 counties in North Dakota and 14 in Minnesota.

Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire association of the Girl Scout council presented has 262 girls registered in the program, along with 63 adults. Breaking this figure down into various scouting divisions, there are presently 134 Brownies in the program from this area, consisting of those in second and third grades; 105 juniors in fourth, fifth and sixth grades; 18 cadettes in sixth and seventh grades and five seniors comprised of those girls from 15 to 17.

Recently, Brownies from 10 troops participated in a Brownie Bounce conducted at the Franklin Middle School in Thief River Falls, where they discovered how to have fun and learn together through various activities. At the same time, nine Girl Scout troops met during Junior badge day with each girl participating earning her junior citizen badge.

All girls also participate in a wreath sale in the fall and a cookie sale in the Spring. Brownies and juniors have already begun working on Christmas socks to be given to residents of area rest homes. During the first part of December girls will be visiting the Homes in the area to deliver the socks and sing Christmas carols to residents and staff members.

According to a recent brochure on Girl Scouting, the organization is dedicated to helping girls through a flexible and informal education program carried out in partnership between girls and adults.

Girls Scouts of the USA was founded by Juliette Gordon Low in Savannah, GA, March 12, 1912 and was chartered by Congress March 16, 1950. More than 41 million girls, women and men have been members since the organization's founding. National organization is funded mainly by annual membership dues of $3 for each girl and adults and by the sale of Girl Scout equipment.

Annual report of Pine to Prairie Girl Scout council has defined five major goals of the council including 1) to provide a program that is responsive to the needs of girls in a changing world; 2) to provide effective and comprehensive financial support to council activities; 3) to retain and increase membership and participation of girls and adults; 4) to provide for the active and effective involvement of girls in planning and decision making and 5) to improve the Girl Scout image within the Pine to Prairie council jurisdiction.

Leader involvement is an important aspect of Scouting, as it is these people who join the girls in learning, understanding and living by the Girl Scout promise and law, and by taking time to plan meetings, register members, and attend workshops to stay updated and informed.

Pins, badges and patches are awarded to the Scouts to encourage them to continue to develop new skills and share those skills with others. Through regional, national and international Girls Scout sponsored events, girls help contribute to society and become more aware of themselves as persons of worth.

Thirty per cent of United Way contributions are allocated to area youth groups, primarily to the Northern Lights council and the Pine to Prairie council Money allocations to other groups include health, 33 per cent, handicapped, 21 per cent; family 11 per cent; elderly, three per cent and administration two per cent.

Foreign Trade Workshop Sponsored By Chamber

Representatives from business and industry in northwestern Minnesota learned some of the problems and advantages of international marketing at an export workshop held Thursday morning at the chamber of commerce meeting room in Thief River Falls.

Chris Dragland, representing the international trade administration of the U.S. department of commerce, introduced the program and distributed a packet of materials on international trade. He emphasized programs offered by the commerce department to assist business in exporting and encouraged business firms to use the assistance available through the department.

He said that the commerce department can help exporters find agents and assist with distributors, licensing and setting up of trade shows. All U.S. embassies have economic commercial sections which deal with trade in the countries in which they are located.

For small companies, he said, catalog exhibitions seem to work well and involve very little cost for the firms participating. The department also has background information on marketing research, he said, and an "Overseas Business Report" is available for each country with which the United States has trade agreements.

Edward Holm, international representative for the Minnesota department of economic development, commented on the value of foreign markets to firms in Minnesota and elsewhere in the United States. He said world trade opportunities are listed in "Minnesota" magazine, published by the department of economic development and that the department's exporter's guide should be available around the end of this year.

This is a good time to consider exports, he said, because the decline in U.S. dollar value gives Minnesota exporters a price advantage over other foreign exporters. Holm added that the department of economic development will give direct assistance to exporters by answering questions or making information available.

"I always suggest to exporters that they use our directory to contact other Minnesota exporters with mutual products, and foreign markets, to share their sales and credit experiences," he said.

"For example, you may be making a decision on whether or not to sell on a letter of credit basis in a specific country. Use your directory to find out what other exporters are doing in a similar situation."

Another service of the department is the microviewer presentation of Minnesota product brochures. Product material is put on microviewer film in order of basic product categories by standard industrial classification. It is then shown on reader print-out equipment to foreign representatives at pre-arranged appointments at U.S. department of commerce

LHS Students To Experience Piloting Plane

Few people ever experience the thrill of piloting a multi-engine aircraft. Lincoln high school students, in Thief River Falls, however, will be given the opportunity when the air force "Thrill of Flight" van exhibit visits the school Thursday.

Featuring a real jet cockpit, the exhibit combines film and sound to create the setting of a 600 miles per hour flight at an altitude of 200 feet.

Students in the cockpit will view segments of low level, roller coaster footage over mountains and valleys.

Besides the cockpit, a multimedia theater is included in the exhibits. The theater is used to give a film and slide presentation showing aspects of air force life.

Sponsored by U.S. Air Force recruiting, in cooperation with the U.S. air force, the exhibit will be on display from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Air force personnel will be at the display site to help students during their simulated flight and to answer questions.

Local Families Get Christmas Seal Letters

A special Christmas Seal letter will be arriving in the homes of Pennington county residents in early November, according to an announcement by Mildred Deanovic, president of the Minnesota lung association.

This "special letter" addressed to "Christmas Seal family" is the most effective and economical way of delivering Christmas seals to newcomers in the community, new contributors and persons who have recently changed addresses.

"We apologize to our local residents who have received duplicate mailings. In our constant search for new contributors we use a variety of lists, and the same names or addresses may be on more than one of them. It is extremely expensive to eliminate our regulars from such lists," said Mrs. Deanovic.

"The Minnesota lung association is doing all it can to make every dollar contributed to Christmas Seals go a little farther. This Christmas Seal family appeal letter helps raise the funds needed to continue our work fighting lung disease, and maintaining healthy lungs for children and adults during 1981. Thank you for your generous support and kind understanding."

trade centers in major foreign trade areas world-wide. The service is free to all Minnesota manufacturers.

Jeff Judy, international banking officer for Northwestern National bank in Minneapolis, cited three areas of risk in foreign trade. They included commercial risk (including credit capabilities of the buyer), political risk due to unstable governments in a number of foreign nations, and transfer risk, involving the availability and red tape required to obtain U.S. dollars for goods sold internationally.

He cited a number of potential payment methods, giving the advantages and disadvantages of each to the exporter.

Hans U. Iwen, branch manager of Kuehne & Nagel, Inc., Minneapolis, discussed the many problems in movement of the goods from the place of manufacture to the plant of the purchaser. He reviewed forms used to facilitate shipment, outlined potential problems in goods transfer and outlined terms used in international trade to increase understanding between exporter and buyer overseas.

The workshop was sponsored by the department of commerce and department of economic development through the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce.

Theatre Is Life For Performers Here On Wed.

will play all three male leads in "Sweet Charity", working for the same producer in the sunshine state.

"I think most actors and actresses would personally prefer to stay in one area and work at one place," he said. "But in this business you take it one step at a time and do what you have to do."

After nine years in theatre, including radio and television work as well as vocal concerts, Linda is on the road eight months of the year and considers her profession a labor of love.

"I believe people are in theatre because they love the theatre," she said. "It isn't a profession where you can make a lot of money and being on the road is a difficult style of living. But we know that the only way many areas of the country will have professional theatre is for someone to bring it to them."

Informed that the auditorium would likely be filled for their performance that evening, Doug and Linda seemed genuinely thrilled.

"All of us in the cast give our utmost all the time," Linda said. "We are constantly reaching for perfection in our performance and we make every effort to do our very best every time we go on stage. We owe it to our audiences and we owe it to our professional integrity."

"It's a matter of concentration," Doug added. "When you are on tour like we are and perform in a different theatre an average of six days a week, every situation is different. But it almost becomes second nature to be able to determine the acoustics in a hall and to adjust your voice accordingly."

(When I talked to Doug following the performance, he asked if I had been able to get any pictures. "You were sitting toward the back on my far right, weren't you?" he asked. He was exactly right. "I thought so," he said. "I caught the reflection of a camera lens a couple of times." then, as almost an after-thought, he added: "But I WAS concentrating!"

"There haven't really been any major problems on this tour," Linda said. She will play Laurie in "Oklahoma" for six weeks following her return to Naples, Fla., and is also ticketed for roles in "See How They Run" and "Gypsy". "Our major problem would probably be a whole lot of little inconveniences; living out of a suitcase, being on the move every day, eating when and where and what you can. We all go pretty heavy on the vitamins."

"Sometimes you wake up in the morning in a dry motel room and your throat is dry and you think, 'Oh my god, what's happening to me'," Doug said. "But we have been fortunate from a health standpoint on this trip. You really can't afford to get sick."

The traveling group which brought "The Desert Song" to Thief River Falls and nearly three dozen other cities in Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota, Montana, Minnesota and Wisconsin consisted of nine people, including the technical director and musical director. The musical director, Lyla FitzGerald, was also the pianist for the musical and the wife of B.G. FitzGerald, one of the actors who served as narrator and who has been in Thief River Falls with two other theatre offerings.

"We did have one little problem yesterday," Linda added. "There was a bit of missed communication and we couldn't get into Canada for a performance in Kilarney because we didn't have a work permit. It took about a four hour wait at the border, but we got the permit and we did the concert."

Both Doug and Linda encourage the public to involve themselves in the art of theatre, even if it is only to the extent of reading a play. The theatre expands life for more and varied experiences, they agree, and helps a person have a better understanding of his or her own emotions.

Dear friends,
Who wants to burden friends with sorrow? The most truly helpful service a friend can perform is to listen patiently and sympathetically while the bereaved works thru the various stages of grief. Too often this is the one thing friends cannot do. Too painful. We all need to be educated to the bereaved's need to talk and to a willingness to listen.
Respectfully,

Wheat Growers Annual Meet Nov. 21 and 22

Minnesota association of Wheat Growers annual meeting will be conducted November 20-21, at the Ramada Inn in Moorhead. According to Wheat Growers president Jorgen Knutson, the meeting will be open to all Minnesota wheat producers, members and non-members alike.

November 20 will be the annual business meeting of the growers association. Of primary concern during this meeting will be the discussion and adoption of the many resolutions that will guide wheat grower policies and actions during the 1981 year. Reports will be received from the standing committees of the association and speakers will be present to discuss topics of special interest to wheat producers.

According to Knutson, the general session which starts on the morning of November 21 will be highlighted with a noon luncheon speaker, the well known Orion Samuelson, farm director from WGN-TV in Chicago. Samuelson will provide a commentary on the recent election in a presentation he has titled "I Told You So!" "We feel that we have developed a well rounded program," Knutson stated, "with topics pertinent to Minnesota farmers."

Knutson reported that speakers for the Friday morning program will concentrate on domestic issues. Program includes Wayne Nelson, vice president-elect of the national association of wheat growers from Winner, SD, who will discuss the activities of the national association of wheat growers in seeking a viable agricultural economy in the United States. Paul Meyer, grains analyst for the USDA's World Food and Agriculture Outlook and situation board in Washington will discuss "Wheat Farmers and the 1981 Farm Bill." According to Knutson, the morning session will conclude with a presentation by Ray Daniel, vice president for Chase Econometrics in Pennsylvania. His subject is "The 1980 Decade-Long Term Price Projections."

Knutson said the afternoon session will cover export issues beginning with a presentation by Minnesota Wheat Council chairman Einer Satter of Norcross who will explain the research and promotion programs carried out by the Minnesota Wheat Council. Dr. Rollin Denniston, deputy commissioner for the Minnesota department of agriculture, will be discussing the work of the other promotion councils in Minnesota, as well as the marketing efforts of the Minnesota Department of Agriculture.

Another topic, "The Seaway, Your Wheat and Your Customers" will be addressed by John Parrington, superintendent for continental grain company in Duluth-Superior.

"Problems with shipping from the Great Lakes Ports have been in the news all summer," Knutson said. "Hopefully Mr. Parrington can provide some insight into the long term viability of the Port of Duluth-Superior as an outlet for Minnesota grains."

Concluding the Friday program will be Joseph Halow, executive director for the North American Export Grain association, the association of the private cooperative trading companies. A former executive with the producer sponsored market development organization, Great Plains Wheat, Halow is a frequent visitor to the spring wheat area. He will address the issue "Farmers and Exporters, Are They a Viable Team?"

According to Knutson, a preregistration for the Wheat Growers Association annual meeting is requested. Anyone who wishes to attend the meeting should contact the Wheat Growers office, Box 602, Red Lake Falls, Minnesota 56750 or call 218-253-4311.

Revision In Benefits Law For Jobless

Some persons who were denied unemployment insurance or whose benefits were reduced because they were receiving pensions now may be eligible for full payment as the result of a law which became effective September 26.

Persons who may be eligible are those who filed claims after Oct. 7, 1979, or who, because of knowledge of the previous law, did not file claims.

Department of economic security is trying to contact by letter all persons who filed claims and may be affected by the change in the law, according to Barbara Beerhalter, assistant commissioner of unemployment insurance.

Those who are now eligible for benefits but who didn't file claims will have two weeks from the time they read this news story to file claims with the department's nearest office, Beerhalter said.

Those who qualify, will receive payment retroactive to Sept. 26, 1980.

Under the new law, primary social security and railroad retirement payments are deductible from unemployment insurance benefits. So are pension payments from any employer for whom a claimant works during the 52-weeks prior to the time a claim is filed.

Voting On Amendments

Another voter activity somewhat hard to understand is the reaction to proposed amendments to the state constitution in Tuesday's election. While the results will not be known for another couple of weeks when the secretary of state's office has all the returns and the state canvassing board has met, only one appears likely to be passed. That is amendment number two, dealing with campaign spending limits.

Amendments three and four — removal of restrictions on highway bonds and establishment of initiative and referendum — appear to have failed. Amendments one — transferring reapportionment duties to a bipartisan commission — and number five — removing an antiquated requirement that notaries public must be approved by the state senate — were believed close but not likely to carry. That is what an employee in the secretary of state's office told us unofficially Friday.

At least 95 out of 100 voters, we would be willing to wager, never read the purpose of the amendments before going to the polls. Fully half probably were not aware of the amendments at all, much less what they were intended to accomplish. Most probably voted against any change rather than contribute toward change, and many obviously did not vote at all — the same as voting "no" because a majority of people voting "yes" was needed for passage.

Amendment No. 2 probably carried because voters were sick of campaign efforts and felt any means of reducing them would be worthwhile.

Did most voters know that if the measure did not pass, existing statutory campaign finance disclosure requirements would remain in effect, amount of taxes deductible from state income taxes to finance campaign spending would not increase from $1 to $2 per person, and there would be no prohibition of tax credits for contributions to state candidates who elected not to comply with spending limits? We doubt it. If they did know, would that have changed their votes? Possibly.

But the most damaging aspect of passing this amendment is that it gives the incumbent office holder a distinct advantage over the candidate not in office. The incumbent may campaign on almost a full-time basis, using his position as a base to establish identity, and then have the advantage of restricting his opponents to no more campaign expenditure than he himself is allowed.

Defeat of the highway bonding restrictions is a real blow to the rural highway program. Did voters opposing this amendment know they were refusing to allow the state department of transportation to remove a five per cent interest rate ceiling established in 1920 and which made it impossible for the department to sell bonds already authorized by the legislature?

Did they know that inability to sell bonds could well permit highways to deteriorate to the point that any future renovation would be unnecessarily expensive? Did they know how important highways are in the rural area and how desperately funds are needed for maintenance and improvement? If they did, they didn't vote like they knew.

Initiative and referendum — Amendment 4 — would have given the people of the state direct input into the legislative process. Special interests opposed it for a number of stated reasons, but primarily because it is easier and more productive to lobby a few legislators than the whole population of the state. Many legislators opposed it — some out of a genuine concern for sanctity of the legislative process, and some because it would compel them to be more responsive and responsible in their actions.

The bipartisan reapportionment commission would be unnecessary if the legislature would do its job as the law intended. The fact is, however, that redistricting has become a political wrangle every time it has surfaced and there is no reason to believe it would not continue to do so. The bipartisan commission could prevent waste of countless legislative hours. Do the voters care? Apparently not.

And why in the world the voters think it is necessary for the state senate to approve the appointment of notaries public totally escapes us. Such action is obviously a mere formality at best.

Changes in the constitution should not be taken lightly. There are times, however, when adjustments are necessary and appropriate. It is too bad the voters don't make the effort to find out which and when.

Informed Electorate?

Elections in Minnesota, and particularly in this part of Minnesota, always seem to hold a few surprises. And those surprises may be more a result of lack of perception than anything else. We all have a tendency to believe our own viewpoints are shared by many others.

We missed on one of four election predictions made on October 29, the Wednesday before the election. Our guess was that Clyde Christensen would win the District 1B seat in the House of Representatives over LeRoy Stumpf. LeRoy proved us wrong with more than a 1,300 vote margin of victory.

We predicted a Reagan victory for President but advised voters not to look for a landslide. There was a landslide in electoral votes because Reagan support was wide-spread nationally and he carried nearly every state. But the popular vote margin was not all that great on a percentage basis.

We predicted Arlan Stangeland would regain his Seventh District seat in Congress in a close election over challenger Gene Wenstrom. Stangeland did win a narrow victory — closer than the last time he was opposed by the former state legislator.

We predicted Sen. Marv Hanson's easy reelection, and he regained his state senate position with nearly a 2-1 margin over young Mark Skogerboe. It is to Skogerboe's credit that he polled nearly 11,000 votes while conducting a campaign of conservatism in a district which traditionally votes with the liberals.

For us, then, the surprise in the election was the Christensen loss to Stumpf. And the reaction following such a surprise is to attempt a post mortem examination to determine the cause. We suspect the reasons were many and varied rather than large and dominant.

Stumpf was an active campaigner, emphasizing door-to-door personal contact. Christensen did a fair amount of door-knocking too, but perhaps to a lesser degree. Exposure through the primary race probably helped the Stumpf name identification and the further identification of the DFL candidate with the popular Sen. Hanson was helpful.

With Reagan and Stangeland winning in normally DFL areas, however, one would have expected Christensen to benefit from that trend. Such was not the case. And Christensen's strong agricultural background didn't seem to sway the voters in the rural precincts of the district.

Stumpf's appeal to special interest blocs — primarily collective bargaining units, education associations and nurse's associations — was pointed and probably effective, especially material circulated on Monday leaving no time for explanation or reply. That tactic has worked before to swing close elections, and its ethics are dubious, but we don't think it was the total contributor here.

We believe that religion entered into the vote total more than we had suspected it might. Both candidates are active in their respective churches, but Stumpf's Catholic affiliation is more far-reaching than Christensen's Evangelical Free association. It is hard to believe voters will vote for state officials on the basis of religion, but it is hard to believe a lot of things voters do and why they do them.

And it may be that Christensen didn't pull the rural vote because he is too successful a farmer. He lost his home township of Smiley 136 to 125 and the neighboring township of Silverton 63-62. At the same time, Reagan-Bush won in Smiley 140-92 and in Silverton 77-39, while Stangeland beat Wenstrom 141-121 in Smiley and 73-52 in Silverton. Hanson won over Skogerboe in both townships 155-96 and 76-48.

There is often a jealousy or resentment or suspicion among neighbors of farmers who have shown ability to excel at their business. Very likely no little amount of those feelings was expressed in the ballot box.

All of these factors — and probably many others — combined to spell defeat, we believe, rather than an objective comparison of qualifications for representation in the state legislature. For the sake of this district, we hope LeRoy proves us wrong again in our comparative assessment. He sure proved us wrong at the polls.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Father: "What did you learn in school today?"

First Grader: "We learned to say 'yes, sir' and 'no, sir'."

Father: "You did?"

First Grader: "Yeah!"

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I work at Arctic and feel that I have to speak out for myself and others.

About a week before elections they let Rep. Stangeland in the plant to meet the people and ask for their votes. This was fine, but it seems like he was the only one let in to meet the people. I feel this was very unfair to all of us and also the other candidate. After seeing the close election, I can't halp but feel that if Mr. Wenstrom had been let in to meet the workers, there could of been a difference in the voting.

In future elections, I hope that Arctic will let in all candidates, or none at all. It is only fair to us and all candidates.

Thanks for letting me speak out.

To The Editor:

The church was the winner and loser in the recent election. Masquerading behind the front of the National Conservative P.A.C. (Moral Majority) these politicians (born-again Christians) gave Ronald Reagan his landslide victory for the presidency. Most Democrats had accepted a Reagan presidency back in the late summer; but were unprepared for the vicious, devious campaigns waged against targeted victims, namely Democratic senators.

Where did all the money come from to feed the television media with slanderous campaign materials? On election night their spokesman appeared on television and arrogantly stated, "Give us enough money and TV exposure we could elect Mickey Mouse and Ronald Reagan had better watch his p's and q's during the next four years."

The preachers we see on Sundays, resplendent in expensive haberdashery ($200 suits and $25 ties) and their hand on a Bible (probably a TV make-up kit) provided most of the money used to defeat many Democratic senators. It is a sad commentary that the audiences of these preachers consist mainly of elderly women (probably widows) living on Social Security, giving a generous contribution each Sunday while during the week she is probably scrubbing floors in a downtown office building.

The Jerry Falwells and Rex Humbards have mesmerized these poor victims in the name of the church. This is Christianity in reverse! Christ drove these money changers out of the temple. What sins (and crimes) have been perpetrated down through the centuries in the name of the church. The election of 1980 will prove that the church is a loser.

The delicate balance of separation of church and state has been flagrantly violated. The time has come to tax all unrelated church income. Since the days of the founding fathers of America, the church has paid no taxes, not even for fire protection on their blocks of real estate property.

The liberal spirit in America is not dead — we champion freedom, justice, patriotism, economic security — concern for the plight of working people, the elderly and the disadvantaged. The American political game is also a tool of vengeance — we will be back again! This time around, the church will be taxed.

Like all non-profit organizations, if the church gambles (bingo), conducts bazaars and promotes bake sales, she will be required to submit an I.R.S. Form 990 with a check every year. Real estate taxes will be levied on all church property. So the church has become a loser. What joy it will be to pluck a few tail-feathers from these religious peacocks.

In a democracy all citizens, men and women, and institutions should be accorded equal justice and fair-play. American citizenship confers not only benefits, but responsibilities as well. This is the hard lesson the church will learn from the 1980 election.

To The Editor:

Who is the shoplifter? Is it that shifty looking teenager in aisle four? Or how about that sweet little grandmother that just just paused to catch her breath in the doorway? Maybe it is that housewife looking over the weekly sale items. Then again, maybe it is you!

The week of November 9 to 15 is Thief River Falls shoplifting prevention week. It is being sponsored by the Thief River Falls AVTI DECA club, in cooperation with the chamber of commerce, Federated Women's club and the Thief River Falls police department. Purpose of the Thief River Falls shoplifting prevention week is to make both the consumer and the retailer aware of the seriousness of shoplifting.

Your support and awareness will be greatly appreciated, and with your help, it will be a tremendous success all year long.

Sincerely,
Alan Lassila
DECA Club President

Seeking Info From Victims Of Saw Injury

Kris Sanda, director of the Minnesota office of consumer services (OCS), is seeking information from chain saw accident victims to help her in recommending new chain saw safety standards.

Sanda is working with the federal consumer product safety commission in developing future safety standards and requirements for chain saw manufacturers.

"Most chain saws have safety features right now, but accidents do happen resulting in injury," Sanda said. "We want to develop direct input from persons actually hurt by chain saws to help us determine what kinds of new safety requirements might be necessary and helpful."

Sanda said she would like to hear from persons injured by chain saws as to the nature of the injury, the brand name of the chain saw, and what went wrong causing the accident.

The information should be sent to Safety, 128 Metro Square building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Thank You to the voters who supported me in the general election Tuesday, Nov. 4, and to all of those volunteers who gave so willingly of their time and effort.

LaVerne Swan Attends Aging Conference

LaVerne Swan, senior citizens coordinator of Northwest community action, Inc., Badger, was selected by the Minnesota rural task force on aging to attend the mini White House conference on aging at Sioux Falls, S.D., recently.

Delegates from Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Iowa attended the conference.

Swan stated the need was declared for a comprehensive national health insurance for senior Americans, due to the inability of many individuals to obtain health insurance and health care services.

In addition, delegates pointed out that an effective rural transportation system is a vital link in the delivery of all services to the rural elderly.

Cost effectiveness of transporting people to services versus transporting services to people was one element of resolutions adopted, calling for adequate rural transportation funding. Other resolutions adopted included social service delivery, energy, housing and employment needs.

These resolutions will be forwarded to the national White House conference on aging scheduled for December of 1981 in Washington, D.C.

Florence Matthew, Kittson county meal coordinator, attended as a non-delegate sponsored by senior meals and activity nutrition program of Tri-Valley opportunity council at Crookston.

Circuit Riders Provide Help For Consumers

Consumer complaints filed by non-metropolitan Minnesotans with "circuit riders" from the Minnesota office of consumer services (OCS) resulted in refunds of $20,856 for a 10-week period ending September 30, according to OCS director Kris Sanda.

Circuit rider program, started last June by Sanda in cooperation with Commissioner Rolf Middleton of the state department of economic security (DES), sends OCS representatives to 33 Minnesota communities once every four weeks to act on consumer inquiries and complaints.

Of the 864 consumer contacts with circuit riders between June and September, 402 persons filed official complaints. Of those, 177 investigations have been completed, resulting in $20,856 in refunds. First of those 177 complaints was resolved in mid-July.

The largest refund of $11,232 went to a Fergus Falls area farmer for a tractor he had purchased which he claimed did not operate properly.

A Brainerd woman received an itemized billing from a Florida doctor for $3,437 worth of medical bills which the woman claimed would be refunded to her by medicare. The woman needed the itemized billing for submission to medicare, but the doctor had refused to give it to her, claiming he opposed the medicare system.

Other refunds ranged from $2 to $883. Seventeen refunds in excess of $100 were received as a result of circuit rider investigations and mediation efforts.

"We're very pleased with the results so far," Sanda said. "If we project it out over a one-year period, we find that non-metropolitan Minnesotans should receive refunds in excess of $100,000 as a result of the circuit rider program, which is on a par with yearly refunds received by residents of the Twin Cities area and Duluth."

40 Arrested In BCA Sting Operation

Minnesota bureau of criminal apprehension, (BCA), a division of the Minnesota department of public safety, concluded a 10-month investigation October 20-21 that involved the sale and use of drugs and stolen property in Becker county and St. Paul, said public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

More than 40 persons were arrested and several charged with multiple felonies. The "sting" was the second involving the BCA in recent months. Another occurred in the Duluth area.

With a code-name, "Decending Angel," the probe involved marijuana, cocaine, amphetamines and LSD with a street value in excess of $80,000. The drugs were purchased from a number of individuals by undercover officers using Minnesota "state buy" funds and Becker county special funds. Some stolen property was also bought by agents.

First arrests came Monday, October 20, in St. Paul and further arrests were made in the Detroit Lakes area.

Assisting the BCA were the Becker county sheriff's department, Detroit Lakes police department, Otter Tail county sheriff's office, Ramsey county sheriff's office, St. Paul police and the Minnesota state patrol.

Commenting on the arrests, Sopsic said, "The professional cooperation and execution of this complex investigation reflects the sophistication of law enforcement throughout the state of Minnesota."

NWAC Meeting Delayed

Annual fall meeting of the Northwest Athletic Conference has been delayed by Crookston's participation in the 1980 Minnesota Class A state high school football playoffs. Football all-conference choices will be made at that time, and the final chapter will be written for the NWAC football history, which began 26 years ago.

This fall marked the final season of the five-team NWAC football conference featuring Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Crookston, Bemidji and Fergus Falls. The Pirates and Green Wave announced long ago they were withdrawing from the Northwest Athletic Conference in football because of their dwindling enrollment figures that do not come close to matching Bemidji and Fergus Falls, two Class AA-size football schools playing in a Class A conference.

Right now all five are slated to enter the 1981 season as independents — without conference affiliation. Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston would be cast as Class A schools, designed for schools with enrollments between 320-799 in its top three grades. Bemidji and Fergus Falls would be elevated to Class AA status, set up for schools with 800 or more students.

As independents the schools run into scheduling problems, since many of their opponents are locked into conference schedules that leave few open dates for nonconference games. And gaining a post-season MSHSL state playoff berth would be really tough since conference champions are accommodated first, with independents qualifying under a more stringent won-lost basis where a team would have to be close to unbeaten to participate in the playoffs.

Thief River Falls' schedule is set for 1981, with the Prowlers facing the same nine opponents they played this year. Detroit Lakes, Grand Rapids, Moorhead, Bemidji and Crookston will be in Thief River Falls next fall, with the Prowlers traveling to Grand Forks Red River, Staples, Fergus Falls and East Grand Forks.

East Grand Forks has filled out its 1981 schedule by picking up five North Dakota opponents. Besides traditional Green Wave games against Grand Forks Central and Grand Forks Red River, East Grand Forks will play Rugby, Devils Lake and Langdon. Rest of the schedule will include Breckenridge, Crookston, Thief River Falls and Fergus Falls. The Green Wave will not play Bemidji next fall, a game the Lumberjacks have replaced with Moorhead.

"We sit out here by ourselves," East Grand Forks athletic director Larry Selk told Warren Strandell of the East Grand Forks Exponent, describing the lack of Minnesota Class A schools in the area. "There's just the three of us (EGF, TRF, Crookston). The next closest Class A school would be Detroit Lakes and they've dropped us. Staples was supposed to come here next year, but they begged out."

The subject of how East Grand Forks, Crookston and Thief River Falls will be considered for post-season play has not yet been decided, according to Selk. "Maybe we can qualify in North Dakota," he quipped. "We expect to find out something January 21 (a state meeting date). It remains to be determined if they will treat us as independents or as a three-team conference. But they have assured us that we will be taken care of some how. I think there's going to be a lot of conference shake-ups this year."

Regardless of the problems ahead in scheduling or qualifying for the playoffs, Selk believes that severing of ties with Bemidji were good. "I wouldn't mind playing Bemidji, but I don't like to see them advance because of it," he says, citing the enrollment figures that put East Grand Forks at 535 and Bemidji at 1,206.

Bemidji, someone pointed out, finished 5-4 this fall, but all five wins came against Class A-size competition. The Lumberjacks played just two Class AA-size schools, losing to Little Falls 14-0 and falling to Fergus Falls 20-13.

Thief River Falls, meanwhile, is a victim of circumstances. The Prowlers didn't want the NWAC football arrangement to fold. They had no qualms about playing Bemidji and Fergus Falls, and would like to continue to play both of them. The rumor still persists that Thief River Falls might wind up not in a three-team Class A conference with Crookston and East Grand Forks, but instead in a four-team Class AA league with Bemidji, Fergus Falls and Moorhead. All four are currently playing each other anyway, and by simply putting a conference tag on the games the winner would be assured of a state playoff berth since Larry Larson of the MSHSL told us earlier that a winner of a four-team conference would probably get an automatic berth, but that he doubted a winner of a three-team conference would be given the same privilege.

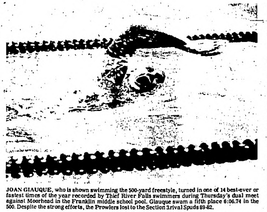
As the only Class A-size school among the four, Thief River Falls would probably have a year-to-year struggle to compete favorably with Bemidji, Fergus Falls and Moorhead. But, if such an arrangement would have been used this year, the Prowlers would have probably advanced to the Class AA state playoffs by virtue of their wins over Moorhead and Fergus Falls. The Spuds, in turn beat Fergus Falls and would have been favored to defeat Bemidji, a winner over Thief River Falls, if they would have met. That would have left Thief River Falls and Moorhead 2-1 in the mini-league, Bemidji and Fergus Falls 1-2.

Instead, Thief River Falls finished near the bottom of the Class A Northwest Athletic Conference with a 1-3 record.

Although football will no longer be part of the act, the NWAC will continue to operate for cross country, tennis, basketball, track, baseball and golf.

Miscellaneous

+There will be no district wrestling tournaments in Region 8A this year, reports Wendell Vlasin of Mahnomen. Instead, the Class A wrestling teams in Districts 29-30-31-32 will follow the Region 8AA format with two sub-regions. The first and second place teams, plus the top four individuals in both sub-regions will move on to the Region 8A tournament.



JOAN GIAUQUE, who is shown swimming the 500-yard freestyle, turned in one of 14 best-ever or fastest times of the year recorded by Thief River Falls swimmers during Thursday's dual meet against Moorhead in the Franklin middle school pool. Giauque swam a fifth place 6:06.74 in the 500. Despite the strong efforts, the Prowlers lost to the Section 3 rival Spuds 89-82.

Moorhead 89-82 Winner Over Lincoln Swimmers

John Hustad figured Thursday's high school swimming meet, matching Section 3 rivals Thief River Falls and Moorhead was going to be a close one. In fact, he had it pegged for a tie based upon past times and performances.

Hustad, the Thief River Falls head coach, knew for example, that Moorhead's outstanding individuals would probably walk off with most of the first place finishes. They did — winning nine of the 11 events. However, what he hadn't planned on was three cases of 1-2 finishes by the Spuds. The result, an 89-82 Moorhead victory over Thief River Falls in the Franklin middle school pool.

"We had to keep them from one-twoing us, and we couldn't quite do it," acknowledged Hustad.

It was the Spuds' second dual meet win of the season over the Prowlers, but it was much closer than a 96-73 decision in the Moorhead pool back on Sept. 30. That was the Prowlers' poorest performance of the year. Thursday, though, Thief River Falls swimmers turned in their best-ever or best times of the year on 14 occasions to ease the loss.

"Of course we would have liked to win, but I'm not disappointed," offered Hustad. "If we would have swam poorly and lost I would have been disappointed. But we swam really well."

Thief River Falls opened with a win in the 200-yard medley relay where Franki Kuyath, Sarah Green, Shelley McGann and Betsie Hallstrom swam a 2:03.04 — their best time of the year.

But Moorhead then came up with back-to-back 1-2 finishes in the 200-yard freestyle and 200-yard individual medley to go ahead 26-20. It was Holly Corner and Dawn Haaland 1-2 in the freestyle and it was Lynn Larsen and Penny Eldevick 1-2 in the I.M.

Thief River Falls regained the lead on the scoreboard, 42-35, when Brenda Lund, Lisa Desrocher and Lori Swanson went 1-2-3 in the diving competition.

But Eldevick and Kris Ramstad answered with a 1-2 finish in the 500-yard freestyle to lengthen Moorhead's lead to 67-58.

The Prowlers, trailing 81-76, needed a 1-3 finish in the meet-ending 400-yard freestyle relay. But despite an outstanding third leg by Lund that gave them a lead, the Prowlers wound up second by nearly four seconds as Horner out-swam Kathy Dillon down the stretch.

Jodi Dailey, Holly Corner and Georgia Corner were all double event winners for the Spuds, who are considered a slight favorite over Thief River Falls and Brainerd for Section 3 honors this fall. The 1980 Section 3 swimming and diving championships will be held Nov. 25-26 at Bemidji State University.

Thief River Falls will close out its regular season home schedule Tuesday with a 5 p.m. dual meet against Bemidji in the Franklin pool. The Prowlers, 8-4 in dual meet competition, will make their final regular season outing Saturday in an invitational at Grand Rapids beginning at 10 a.m.

Northmen Lose Final Game To Royals 43-0

Golden Valley Lutheran clinched the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northern Division football title Saturday with a 43-0 win over Northland community college at Parade Stadium in Minneapolis.

The Royals finished 7-0-1 in the Northern Division and will meet Southern Division champion Rochester in the 1980 MJCAA state playoff game Saturday.

Northland ended its 1980 season 1-6-1 in the MJCAA, 1-7-1 overall.

"It was hell," was the way Northland coach John Helley described the finale. "Our offense didn't get anything generated and our defense broke down. They had a much larger, much more physical team than we had. It was a mis-match."

Helley was impressed by the Royals' talent, but not by their actions, which he felt were overly aggressive in light of the one-sided game that was 20-0 at halftime.

"They have a very good team, but they didn't let up," noted Helley. "They were getting 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalties for swinging their fists after the play even with the big lead. That didn't show me much."

Northland, in addition to battling the Royals, were also fighting an injury list that put tackle Dan Cullen, center Jeff Schmitz, wide receiver Dan Levenhagen and quarterback Jeff Steuck out of the line-up before the game started and then sent linemen Todd Tangen, Jeff Reese and Alan Johnson, along with quarterback Howard Beito, to the sidelines during the game.

"It got to the point where I didn't know who I had left to put in," noted Helley.

But despite the score, Helley praised the defensive play of linebacker Mark Stock of Mahnomen, who was credited with 11 unassisted tackles. "He played a really good defensive game," said Helley.

Passage Of New Wildlife Bill Is Hailed By U.S. FWS

Calling it "the most important wildlife conservation measure in recent years," Lynn A. Greenwalt, Director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said that the new fish and wildlife conservation act "closes the last major gap in this country's commitment to conserving our fish and wildlife resources."

The act was signed into law September 29. It is designed to benefit nongame species that are not ordinarily hunted, fished or trapped for food, commerce or sport and to place special emphasis on urban wildlife. The legislation was supported by fish and game agencies from all 50 states and nearly 300 conservation groups.

When funds are appropriated as authorized by the act, they can be used to reimburse the states for 90 per cent of the cost for developing comprehensive wildlife conservation plans. The plans identify significant fish and wildlife populations, their range and distribution, the condition of their habitats, the factors that may adversely affect them and the actions that should be taken to conserve the species and their habitats. After the comprehensive plans are approved, the law also authorizes federal cost sharing for conducting approved activities such as research, inventories, law enforcement and public education.

Greenwalt said that in calling for statewide conservation "master" plans, the act "clearly recognizes the need for comprehensive management of all fish and wildlife and their habitats as part of an interrelated environment. It also recognizes the intrinsic value of all species, regardless of their use." Chipmunks, meadowlarks, songbirds, herons, osprey and cardinals are among the nearly 3,000 nongame vertebrate species in this country that will benefit from the new legislation.

The measure authorizes $5 million in financial and technical assistance to the states for each of the next four fiscal years, beginning October 1, 1982. The funds are to be apportioned to the states primarily on the basis of population and land area. District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and the Northern Mariana Islands will receive matching funds on a formula basis.

Because two-thirds of the apportionment will be based on population, the wildlife found in urban areas and suburbs likely will receive special emphasis. A growing number of Americans are spending their leisure time in outdoor recreation such as birdwatching, hiking and camping, as indicated in a national survey conducted in 1975. The survey showed that the number of days spent observing wildlife was 10 times greater than the total days spent that year attending professional baseball games, NCAA and NFL football games and horseraces combined.

The nongame act parallels two similar measures for sport fish and wildlife, the Dingell-Johnson act of 1950 and the Pittman-Robertson act of 1937. Under these two acts, $117 million was apportioned to the states and territories last year from special excise taxes on sports equipment such as sporting arms and ammunition, rods, reels, lures, bait and certain archery equipment. At present only about 10 per cent of these funds are spent to benefit nongame species with most of it going to rural areas. In passing the new act, Congress noted that these "traditional financing mechanisms are neither adequate nor fully appropriate to meet the conservation needs of nongame fish and wildlife."

Greenwalt said that experience "has shown clearly that the welfare of wild populations can be advanced by wildlife management techniques such as regular monitoring to track changes in populations, research to isolate limiting factors and management to correct those factors." He also pointed out that it would cost far less to conserve healthy populations than to bring them back from the brink of extinction, noting that 86 per cent of the vertebrate species now listed as endangered or threatened are considered nongame.

The new legislation does not apply to endangered or threatened species, marine mammals or feral animals.

DNR To Take Trout Eggs At Isle Royale

With the permission of the national park service and the state of Michigan, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources will be gathering lake trout eggs this fall from fish netted in waters near Isle Royale.

DNR fisheries supervisor Jerry Kuehn said it is hoped that the progeny of the native "red fin" strain of lake trout found near the island will prove to have better ability to survive and reduce than the offspring of hatchery brood stock presently being used.

Current brood stock are lake trout taken from the Michigan side of Lake Superior. Long-time commercial fishermen on the lake insist that the Isle Royale trout are genetically different from those found elsewhere.

"If it is true that the Isle Royale trout are more adapted to conditions on the Minnesota side of the lake," said Kuehn, "perhaps a higher percentage of their young will survive in the lake after we hatch and rear them to stocking size."

Fish, Wildlife Aid To State Hits $90 Million

Ninety million dollars in federal aid funds have been apportioned by Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus to the 50 states, Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa and the Virgin Islands for sport fish and wildlife restoration and hunter safety programs.

The $90 million, obtained from excise tax collections in fiscal year 1980, is the first of two installments distributed this year to be used by the state to finance their fish and wildlife restoration programs.

Of the total funds available, $56.1 million are for wildlife restoration, $24.5 million for fish restoration and $9.4 million for hunter safety programs.

Funds for wildlife restoration and hunter safety programs come from an 11 per cent excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition, a 10 per cent tax on pistols and revolvers and an 11 per cent tax on certain archery equipment. Distribution of wildlife restoration funds is based on a formula which takes into account the number of hunting license holders and the area of each state. These funds may be used on approved state wildlife projects such as the acquisition of land suitable for habitat, development and management of habitat and research to aid in managing game species.

Distribution of hunter safety funds is based on the relative population of each state and may be used for state hunter education programs, including construction, operations, and maintenance of public target ranges. The states, however, may also use these funds for wildlife restoration projects.

Fish resotration funds come from a 10 per cent excise tax on fishing rods, reels, creels and artificial baits, lures and flies. Distribution of the funds is made according to a formula based on the number of fishing license holders and the area of each state, including coastal and Great Lakes waters. Activities performed by the states include the purchase of land and water areas, construction and rehabilitation of lakes, development of access sites and facilities for fishermen and research to aid in management of sport fisheries.

The attached tables show the distribution of funds by state.

Duck Season

Best duck hunting report so far this season comes from Dick Bach of the Wapashaw resort at Wabasha on the Mississippi river. Mallards and wood ducks are the most previlent. Hunting is good on both sides of the river. Jere Noreen of Tim's Sporting Goods at Forest Lake says the duck opening was slow to fair. Most hunters had the best luck in the Stacy area, 11 miles north of Forest Lake. Green wing teal, mallards and wood ducks were numerous. Dave Gardell of Frank's Sport Shop at Lakeville reports fair hunting with mallards and wood ducks in the lead.

Grand Rapids Fishing

Don Wendt of the Rapids Tackle at Grand Rapids is happy about the walleye fishing in his area. Big Winnie is producing some nice catches. The largest taken recently weighed eight-pounds, 10-ounces. The fisherman was Ronald Borth of New Ulm.

John Mullenmeister of Prior Lake caught a walleye weighing eight-pounds, three-ounces. Several six and seven-pounders were registered.

Largest northern weighed 16-pounds, four-ounces and was taken by Frank Gramke of Grand Rapids. He was fishing in Spider Lake.

Minnetonka Fishing

Lance Barlett of Roy's Live Bait in Excelsior observes that the frog migration is producing some excellent walleye fishing. Fishermen are casting from shore using frogs for bait and the evening hours are the most productive. Frogs also are being used for bass fishing. One fishermen had a nice string of bass and an 11-pound northern for his efforts.

Paul Fahlin of Paul's Landing on Minnetonka has the same story. Walleyes and northerns are hitting. The frog is the best walleye bait at this time of year and the evening hours are the most productive. Bass fishing is improving. A seven-pound large mouthed bass was registered on a recent Saturday.

Contest Reminder

The 1980 Minnesota Outdoors liars contest will end the last week in December. You may enter more than one story, and the story need not be original. Send your story to Dee & Stu Mann, Minnesota Outdoors, 1383 Easter Lane, Eagan, MN 55123.

Judges for the liars contest are John Case of WBBM radio in Chicago, Pat Buttram of Hollywood and Dee and Stu Mann.

Swans Are Back

Carrol Henderson of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources is our guest columnist with his article:

For many generations, the "swan" has generally been perceived by Minnesotans as a domestic bird of parks — a mute swan with its neck gracefully arching over the water.

What, many sportsmen do not realize is that during this century, two species of wild, native, North American swans have been staging a slow and remarkable recovery.

Whistling swans, weighing up to 20 pounds, nest in the Arctic and migrate through Minnesota. The main fall migration is in November. Each year an unknown number are killed by careless shooters who mistake them for snow geese.

The other wild swan, the greatest of North American waterfowl, is the trumpeter swan. It is the third heaviest flying bird in the world. It is a truly beautiful all white bird which can weigh up to 38 pounds. Hennepin county park reserve district took the initiative to help restore trumpeter swans in Hennepin county over ten years ago, and the Department of Natural Resources is now working on a proposal for restoration in the state. Last year 17 cygnets hatched in Hennepin county, and in 1980, 14 more hatched.

However, if such nongame wildlife programs are to succeed, we cannot tolerate the careless slaughter of the wild swans by shooters who believe they are shooting snow geese. The killing of six trumpeter swans by "duck hunters" near the Baker Park reserve in Hennepin county October 19 is not only a tragic loss of a rare species, but a terrible reflection on hunters in general. We do not need that kind of bad publicity for the hunting fraternity.

We must all work together to decrease the incidence of these "mistakes."

We must intensify our efforts at hunter education and waterfowl identification (not just "duck" identification). We can also help nongame species like the trumpeter swan, bald eagle, prairie chicken and bluebird by donating part of our refund on our Minnesota state income tax forms or property tax forms to the nongame wildlife fund. Your donation is deductible on the following year's return. If you ever wanted to do something wonderful for nongame wildlife — this is your chance.

Bass Contest

Michael Elton of St. Paul is the winner of the 1980 Minnesota Outdoors bass fishing contest. The winning bass weighed eight-pounds, 13-ounces and was caught in Shirt Lake near Deerwood on September 13.

Elton will receive a rod and reel, a sportsmen's knife and a selection of fishing tackle.

Judges in the contest included Dan Berry of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, Don Wendt of Rapids Tackle at Grand Rapids, Jerry Fuller of Fuller's Tackle of Park Rapids and Bemidji and Lance Barlett and Paul Fahlin of Minnetonka. The top five:

—8-6, caught by Jerry Noska, Browerville, in Sauk Lake near Sauk Center, Sept. 7.

—8-3, caught by Ted Bodeen, Shakopee, in Lake Waconia near Waconia, July 15.

—8-3, caught by Keith Eastin, Longville, in Big Sand Lake near Longville, May 31.

—8-0, caught by Ronald Carmichael, McGregor, in Flowage Lake near McGregor July 22.

Carlos Avery

Dale Haven of Coon Rapids had good luck hunting ducks in the Carlos Avery area. Wood ducks, mallards and teal are the most numerous and they are local ducks. Dale has seen lots of pheasants in northern Anoka county. There are many pheasants in the Cambridge-Rush City area.

A Reminder

With the pheasant upon us it is interesting to note that this colorful bird did not even exist here 100 years ago. The pheasant is an immigrant, first introduced by sportsmen in 1882.

Hunters by buying the federal duck stamp contribute $11,000,000 dollars for conservation. Since the enactment of the program in 1934 federal duck stamps have raised more than $200 million dollars.

Service Officer Help . . .

The American Legion has 2,000 full-time Service officers and 25,000 volunteer workers for rehabilitation work offering their services to secure beds, vocational training, widows benefits and other educational features included in your G. I. Bill of Rights. You have read or heard of many of the widows benefits such as headstones for graves of the deceased. United States Flags for burial, up to $450.00 toward the funeral services, widows' pensions, and many others.

Americanism . . .

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patiots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

Recreation . . .

Policy of the Local Post has been to sponsor recreational activities for the area's youth. Chief of these activities has been Legion Baseball, sponsored each year among all boys in the community who wish to participate. Other areas of recreation have the attention of this and other Posts across America with the aim of improving the health and vigor of the nation.

Always Ready To Help . . .

Members of the Local Post believe in a well-informed citizenry, and to foster such belief sponsor annually the Student Government Day and Boy's State. The Legion assisted in bringing the National Guard to our city and many of its past and present officers and men stand ready to serve again the call of their country or in times of local disaster when only trained men can offer the most effective help.

Community Leadership . . .

Leadership of the Local Post has over the years taken an active part in every phase of community activity. Whatever the avenue for service, this Post has offered manpower and influence to advance worthy community projects, along with other service and civic organizations in the city, county and over the entire state. Legionnaires are proud of the influence for progress exhibited by the leadership of this Post.

The Legion Constitution . . .

For God and country, we associated ourselves together for the following purposes: "To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the great wars; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth."

Veterans Benefits . . .

The American Legion's national legislative committee wrote and encouraged enactment of the famous law known as the G. I. Bill of Rights. The bill contains the bulk of all legislation beneficial to veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam. In Minnesota, Legion posts have helped with child welfare, bonus, civil defense and other similar bills of general public benefit. The Legion stands ready to assist veterans as a group or individually.

Legion Baseball . . .

Since its inception in Minnesota in 1926, some 560,000 boys under 19 years of age annually participate in Legion Baseball throughout America. Graduates of the Legion baseball program are found in major and minor leagues and appeared in every World Series in recent years. While but few players reach major league competence, thousands of boys learn to love baseball through Legion sponsored training, enabling them to play or watch with greater pleasure.

Boy's State Program . . .

Numerous Minnesota boys have participated in Boy's State since its inception in 1948 including 460 the past year. Some 350,000 youngsters participated in the American Legion sponsored oratorical contests this past year. The Local Post has actively sponsored and encouraged these enterprises and is always striving to build a better America by supporting the many youth programs of the American Legion.

Auxiliary Contributions . . .

Our aims and purposes are mainly to assist the Legion in every way possible. We take pride in meeting our obligations on the District, Department, and National level. However, we are actively participating in many programs in our community. Our main source of income being our catering service, who our members give so freely of their time to make all of the above possible.

Memorial Day Services . . .

Poppies are displayed as the official flower of the American Legion. They are displayed in memory of those who gave their all that justice might prevail in the world. Never forget their service! And may the Local Post home be considered a living memorial to the dead heroes of this nation's wars! Each year the Post joins with other patriotic organizations properly to observe Memorial Day and Veterans' Day with appropriate ceremonies to which the public is cordially invited.

Helping Our Youth . . .

Members of the Local Post have always taken a lead in child welfare work. The Post labors toward the goal that the youth of our nation may know that freedom from ignorance, want and tyranny are God-given rights and must be protected whatever the cost. You can help in this work by joining the American Legion, a membership reserved for all veterans of this nation's wars against oppression.

Absence Of Full Council Prolongs Rezoning Issue

Because of the absence of two Thief River Falls city council members last evening (aldermen Ambrose Wysoski and Clayton Restad), council members tabled two rezoning requests denied by the planning commission at their November 3 meeting.

"I would like to recommend tabling the issues to a future meeting when all members are present," alderman Milan Borsheim stated. A roll call vote on the resolution resulted in five votes in favor of the tabling, while Mayor Bob Carlson voted against the resolution.

Jack Quinlivan, city planner, discussed the two rezoning issues of the Investment Development company of Fargo. All information supplied by him last evening to the cluster of people gathering for a possible final decision from the council, had been explained at the planning commission meeting November 3. Action that evening from planning commissioners resulted in three separate decisions in three rezoning proposals following a three-hour discussion, including a closed executive session with planning commissioners and legal counsel.

First rezoning request brought before council members was for a zoning change from agriculture to R-2 in the northern portion of the Crookston Diocese property near Greenwood street and Allwood acres addition to permit construction of duplexes.

During the planning commission meeting, the request had been returned to the city council with the original planning commission recommendation to deny the request. That rebound action followed the city council's gathering October 30 for a closed session based upon pending litigation. At that meeting they had turned the request back to the planning commission for further study.

Second rezoning request from the Investment Development company involved a zoning change from Agriculture to R-2 (medium Density) with a special use permit for a townhouse development. This request is in the southern portion of the Diocesan property.

This request was denied by planning commissioners at their meeting due to (1) the incompletion of Greenwood street as a connector of two

At Lincoln high school parents are welcome to visit classes for the entire week during regular school hours. Request for parent-teacher conferences can be made by calling 681-2700, extension 247, or extension 328 for center school instructors.

By emphasizing open houses during education week, however, we hope to stimulate visitation by parents when others are visiting so they don't feel self-conscious."

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Jodi Ann Lindblom and Michael Engelstad Wed

Miss Jodi Ann Lindblom, daughter of Mrs. Grace Lindblom of this city, and Michael Jon Engelstad, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Engelstad, also of Thief River Falls, exchanged marriage vows recently at Zion Lutheran church, in this city.

Rev. James Mattson officiated at the 3:00 p.m., ceremony. At the organ was Jeanne Harger, a friend of the couple. She played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," and Wagner's "Bridal Chorus," for the processional, and "The Marine Hymn," for the recessional. Diane Mosbeck, cousin of the bride, sang "Wedding Song," "Longer," and "Sometimes."

The altar was graced with candelabra with two bouquets of fresh mums in peach and gold. Miniature sprays of wheat and oats, tied with peach and brown satin ribbon, marked the pews along the center aisle.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Russel Lane. She was attired in a gown of white chiffon over polyester, styled in empire fashion, with the softly draped skirt flowing back into a chapel-length train. Venice lace enhanced the bodice; and coordinating florets and scallops outlined the Queen Anne neckline, complemented in back by a V insertion of open lace. Her elbow-length sleeves of double-layered chiffon extended back in cape effect. A Venice lace Camelot headpiece held her veil of bridal illusion, edged with the same lace that trimmed her gown. She carried a cascade of peach and gold silk roses, accented with greenery and peach and white ribbon streamers.

Mrs. Russell (Myrna) Lane, attended her sister as matron of honor. Other attendants were Nancy Gish, Manomen, Kathy Erickson, Duluth, and Cheri Pula, Minneapolis. Their A-line gowns of peach qiana were styled with blouson bodices with rounded necklines that dipped in back, and split cape sleeves with self ties at the shoulder. They carried silk bouquets of peach roses and gold mums tied with matching satin ribbons. Their Black Hills hold crosses were gifts from the bride.

Attending the groom as best man was Mark Bean of Seattle, Wash. Groomsmen were Buzy Karter, Minneapolis; Dave Stadum, Finley, N.D., and Bunky Ebersole, Grand Forks, N.D. All are friends of the groom who served with him in the armed forces. Ushers were Mitch Engelstad, Lonsdale, and Murray Engelstad, brothers of the groom. All wore chocolate brown tuxedos and bow ties, off-white ruffled shirts, and peach silk rose boutonnieres. The groom's boutonniere was accented with stephanotis.

The mother of the groom was attired in an off-white street-length dress with a blouson bodice with a self-tie at the waistline. Her corsage was of peach silk roses. A coordinating corsage of miniature roses and gold mums was worn by the groom's grandmother, Mrs. Inga Shelter, who was honor guest at the wedding together with Dana Engelstad of Chicago, Ill., a cousin of the groom. Their flowers, like all the flowers at the wedding, were of scented silk, made by Mrs. Pauline Aubol.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlors for about 175 guests. Host and hostess were Mark Engelstad, Fargo, N.D., brother of the groom, and Ann Lindblom, New Berlin, Wis., sister-in-law of the bride. At the guest book was Dawn Elias, Minneapolis, who also served as the bride's personal attendant.

Highlighting the serving table was a pillared, three-tiered chocolate and white wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with clusters of peach roses, sweet peas, and green accents. A triple bell ornament, backed by a pearlized heart and tulle topped the cake, which was baked and decorated by Margaret Rupprecht. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Art Armstrong and Mrs. Myrtle Waltonen, aunts of the bride. Pouring coffee were Pam Engelstad, Lonsdale, a cousin of the groom, and Terry Ward. Punch was ladled by Mary Engelstad, another cousin of the groom. Waitresses were Carie Jo and Connie Armstrong, cousins of the bride.

Following the reception, the wedding party and a few friends visited at Valley Home with the bride's mother, who was unable to attend. Later they gathered at the home of Mrs. Inga Shelter with about 75 friends and relatives for the opening and viewing of the wedding gifts. A buffet supper followed.

Out-of-town relatives and friends at the wedding were from Arizona, Indiana, Illinois, New Berlin, Wis.; Seattle, Wash.; Fargo, Drayton, Grand Forks, Pembina and Finley, N.D.; Lonsdale, Hallock, Minneapolis, Breckenridge, St. Paul, Duluth, Moorhead, Mahnomen, Inver Grove Heights, Gaylord, Bemidji, Felton, Bloomington, and the Thief River Falls area.

The couple is now at home at 201 Castille avenue, apartment 3, Madison WI 53713. The bride is a graduate of Lincoln high school and the Practical nurses training course in this city. She is now employed as a licensed practical nurse at the Americana Health Care center in Madison, Wis. The groom is also a graduate of Lincoln high school. He attended Winona State college and served four years in the US Marine corps, stationed in Viet Nam. He is now attending the University of Madison, studying computer science. Ordonez And Anderson Vows Said In California

Edith Ordonez of Fontana, Calif., and Donovan J. Anderson of Loma Linda, Calif., exchanged marriage vows at a recent afternoon ceremony at the Arlington Seventh-day Adventist church in Riverside, Calif.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. Gustavo Ordonez of Quito, Ecuador and Mrs. Teresa Chico Ordonez of Fontana, Calif. Parents of the groom are Mrs. Maynard (Leonette) Molskness of Thief River Falls and the late Curtis I. Anderson.

Rev. Marvin Ponder officiated at the ceremony attended by approximately 150 relatives and friends. During the ceremony, he also sang, "Entreat me Not to Leave Thee" and Marriage Prayer." At the organ was David Banta. He played "Air from Suite 3 in D major," as the candles were lit by John Rivers of Fontana, and Stacy Milne of Fun City; "Priere a Notra Dame," as the mothers entered; "Sheep May Safely Graze," for the bridesmaids' processional; and "Bridal Chorus," as the bride was escorted to the altar by her brother, Edwin Ordonez. Special musical selection was the flute solo, "Paris Nocturne," by Marcia Kime. The ceremony also included the lighting of the Unity candle. Prior to the ceremony the wedding programs were distributed by the groom's cousins: Mary Ann Nordvick and Alvina Rittenour of Grygla.

Large potted ferns and candelabra with greenery flanked the altar graced with arrangements of daisies. White ribbon bows marked the pews.

For the wedding the bride selected a white, sleeveless gown featuring a cathedral length train. Lace, embroidered with pearls, formed the high neckline and outlined the bridal illusion yoke. A white satin floral headpiece held her double tiered illusion veil edged with a narrow lace trim. She carried a hand bouquet of satin flowers in rainbow colors.

Casey Milne was the bride's personal attendant.

Lisbeth Ordonez of Fontana attended her sister as maid of honor. Her chiffon gown of seafoam green with touches of light silver, was styled with a square neckline and short flowing sleeves.

Bridesmaids were Marcia Kime, Glendale; Cheryl Tanimoto, Los Angeles; Pam Mills, Riverside; and Anna Swiderski Miller, Canada, friends of the bride. Their sleeveless gowns, of the same fabric as the maid of honor's, were styled with high necklines, accented with lace and ribbon. A matching ribbon nipped the waistlines. In their hair, they wore two seafoam satin flowers with babies' breath. They carried identical bouquets of daisies, in rainbow colors.

Serving as flower girl was Dawn Anderson of Spring Valley, Ohio, a niece of the groom. She wore a coordinating gown of floral print, trimmed with lace and tied at the waistline with a satin ribbon. Bible boy was Jeffrey Anderson, a nephew of the groom. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a silver gray tuxedo with satin lapels, a white shirt, striped tie and a daisy boutonniere.

The groom wore a black tuxedo with tails. His boutonniere was a white rose.

Keith Christianson of Loma Linda, a friend of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Sami Issa and James Emerson of Loma Linda, friends of the groom; Forrest Anderson, Spring Valley, Ohio, brother of the groom, and Edwin Ordonez of Glendale, a brother of the bride.

The mother of the bride was attired in a floor-length seafoam chiffon gown topped by a matching cape. The groom's mother wore a light blue floor-length gown with a pleated skirt. Her long-sleeve bodice was of matching lace. Their corsages featured white carnations, yellow rose buds and ferns.

Special guests at the wedding were Joe Tamayo, Quito, Ecuador, uncle of the bride; Maynard Molskness, Thief River Falls, step-father of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Molskness, St. Hilaire; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Molskness, Candy and Nicole, Santa Ana, Calif.; Mrs. Alvin Nordvick, Mrs. Tim Rittenour and Mary Ann Nordvick, all of Grygla; Steve and Faye Dudas of Gainsville, Fla.; and the Forrest Anderson family of Spring Valley, Ohio.

A reception in the church fellowship hall followed with Mr. and Mrs. John Rivera as host and hostess. Mrs. Faye Dudas, sister of the groom, presided at the guest book and Mrs. Esther Villedas ladled the punch at a table surrounded with a mist.

Highlighting the serving table was a three-tiered carrot cake, iced with whipped white frosting and decorated with sea foam. On either side of the cake were heart cakes inscribed with the names of the bride and groom. Judith Rivera cut and served the cake. At the gift table was Marie Nordvick of Grygla, aunt of the groom. All wore daisy corsages in rainbow colors.

Following a wedding trip to San Francisco and the Lake Arrowhead area, the couple is now at home at 11299 Jan Juan street, Loma Linda, CA 92354. The bride, an occupational therapist, is a 1980 graduate of Loma Linda university and is employed in that position at the New Day Clinic at Rialto, Calif. The groom is a 1977 graduate of Union college, Lincoln, Neb., and is a senior medical student at the Loma Linda university school of Medicine. He will graduate in June of 1981. Aid Victims Of Holocaust To Get Benefits

Social security has changed its procedures to help World War II victims caught up in the Nazi holocaust, according to William Phalen, district manager in Grand Forks. The change was made to help survivors of the holocaust who may have falsified their ages during World War II to avoid persecution and would help members of this group establish their true dates of birth.

Anyone who had to change a date of birth in order to escape persecution during this period should contact a social security office immediately to protect his or her eligibility.

Some people living in Nazi-controlled areas in the 1930s and 1940s falsified their ages in an effort to survive. The false information later found its way into official records of some who have become U.S. citizens and now keeps them from collecting social security because their official age is too young.

According to Phalen, under the new procedures, every effort will be made through American embassies abroad to obtain valid birth certificates or other government records for the people in question.

He said that, if no such records are available, social security will accept other evidence from the applicant to establish a date of birth for social security purposes.

Council Seeks Rural Areas Of Concern

Persons concerned about some issue or problem in the local community that might be part of a pattern of concerns throughout rural Minnesota are invited to contact the governor's council on rural development.

During November and December, regional development commissions will research and gather issues pointed out to them by local residents. Out of this list of concerns, each commission will identify three priority issues that merit the governor's council's attention and resources over the next several years.

The regional commission's representative to the Governor's council for this region of the state is Fred Sorenson, Box 24, Grygla, MN 56727. His telephone number is (218) 681-6111. (His alternate representative is Ervin Strandquist, Newfolden, MN 56738)

Governor's council is an advisory body without power to enact legislation. It is led by the state's lieutenant governor and its membership includes heads of state and federal agencies involved in rural development. A member of each regional development commission also sits on the council. In addition, the president's small community and rural development policy makes the council an important link between rural citizens and decision makers in Washington.

Agricultural extension service represents the University of Minnesota on the Governor's council.

"Desert Song" Gets No Rave From Reviewer

by Paul Mortenson

Despite a largely phlegmatic first act, Thief River Falls concert-goers warmly received Sigmund Romberg's light opera, "The Desert Song" last Wednesday evening. Outstanding voices helped salvage the act and the show, which developed steam as time went on, growing delightfully corny and unabashedly romantic.

Based on the dual identity of a French colonial general's only son, who at once is the bumbling Pierre Birabeau, and surreptitiously, the dashing desert rebel The Red Shadow, "The Desert Song" is the story of love between the rebel leader and a French girl, Margot Bonvalet, set in Morocco in the 1920s.

With an introduction ala "The Fantasticks", with the performers feigning unreadiness and costumed in pants and t-shirts, the B.G. (fearless leader) FitzGerald functioning as a sort of candid anchorman with expository asides to the audience, "Desert Song" started off with a promising unorthodoxy injected into an old favorite, but bogged down with spotty acting, funereal choreography, and bad prop handling until well nigh the end of Act 1.

Notable exceptions were Linda Willits' Margot, with a slightly dizzy, Carol Channing-like fluttering and vacuity, and Douglas Baker's Pierre-Red Shadow, displaying excellent body movement, particularly Pierre's acrobatic, stumbling entrance into a room near the end of Act 1. By the time of the title song, Willits and Baker had woven a good bit of classy, sheer romanticism into the show, which carried through Act II.

The second act brought a few more high points and considerably more verve, with some good ensemble singing in "Eastern and Western Love Song," and an intense interpretation of Margot's 'The Sabre Song," plus some good drama between Margot and The Red Shadow.

Throughout the show, B.G. FitzGerald had his movements, usually in his asides, but essentially presented a disinterested picture of General Birabeau. Gary A. Pate's Sid El Kar, if not outstanding, was compensated for by Pate's outstanding tenor. Ian Douglas was passable in his portrayal as the imperious and brash French soldier vying for Margot, and as the pompous (and sexist) Ali Ben Ali in Act II, but lacked the spark to make his roles work well.

Patti Jo Stevens as Susan, and Dottie Romero as Azuri, were onstage continually, doubling as Moroccan tribesmen, French soldiers and just about anyone else who seemed necessary, albeit Azuri was weakly played, particularly her drunken scene at the end of the show, which was badly overdone and badly underconveyed.

One of the weakest points, perhaps, was what one might call the "statuesque" approach to the use of the chorus, with the choristers often standing around like so many bumps on a log with little more than an occasional stilted response to the stage action. This looked like a directing error as much as a performance one, though throughout it was difficult to tell whether the show lagged because of tired players on a foreign stage or a misperception in direction, mistaking restrained corniness for unrestrained lethargy, dampening an otherwise whimsical and charmingly naive piece.

To be charitable, taking a show on the road is demanding, and if "The Desert Song" was not brought off with quite the polish and sparkle one might have wished, it nevertheless was brought off, and the night was not lost. The performers are not to be undersold for their efforts which brought a night of music and theatre to area aficionados, and if not a "rave" review is due, certainly a respectful one is.

MEA To Hear Testimony On Fund Cutbacks

Second in a series of public hearings conducted by the Minnesota Education association (MEA) to investigate the effects of Gov. Quie's cutbacks will be conducted Saturday (November 15).

The hearing — to which school board members, parents, high school and college students, teachers, teacher leaders, business leaders and public school and college administrators have been invited — will begin at 9 a.m. in Comstock memorial hall on the Moorhead state university campus.

"We are extremely gratified with the results of our first public hearing," says MEA president Donald C. Hill, referring to the October 11 session in St. Paul, which covered the St. Paul area. "Transcripts of that hearing have been sent to the governor, the commissioner of education and to the chairman of the state board of education. We're waiting to hear their reactions."

Examiners for the Moorhead hearing include James Rosasco, counselor in the Red Wing public schools; Wendy Robinson, director of Minnesota working women; and William Wilson, former state human rights commissioner and now a member of the St. Paul city council.

MEA plans similar public hearings for Hibbing, November 18; Marshall, November 19, and Bloomington, December 2.

Slow down and live.

Chief's Corner

by Ken Froschheiser
Chief of Police
Thief River Falls, MN.

With Halloween over and November here, we are starting to think about the first snowfall of the winter season. Before getting into the main message of this article, I would like to publicly thank the Thief River Falls Jaycees and the law enforcement chapter of Explorer scouts for their assistance on Halloween evening. Vandalism reports were down and it turned out to be a good evening.

Snow removal season will soon be here and the street department will be out in force cleaning the streets. For the past two years we have worked with the street department and removed vehicles that were parked on the streets or avenues which were in the way of the plows. We shall continue that procedure this year with one exception. So that the process can be done much more efficiently, the calendar parking ordinance shall be enforced from November 15 through March 15. This simply means that vehicles parked on a street or avenue on the wrong day will be tagged for violation of the ordinance. This will be done regardless of snow-removal.

If snow removal is being done and the vehicle is parked on the wrong street or avenue, it will be towed away. During the first 30 days we shall use a warning of violation ticket and no fine will be imposed. After December 15 a fine of $2 shall be imposed. If the vehicle is towed for snow removal, the fine will not be imposed and the two fee shall take its place.

The warning tickets will include the correct days for parking on streets and avenues. This will be an education system so that all should become aware of the calendar parking procedure. Notices shall also be placed in the Times and announcements will be made on both local radio stations.

We hope that this procedure will not only be effective for the street department, it should also assist you as a resident in keeping the street in front of your home clean from snow during the winter months. We also hope that we do not have to remove your vehicle for snow removal and cause an inconvenience to you. Thank you for your anticipated cooperation in this procedure. Should you have any questions, feel free to call me at 681-6161.

No parking on streets (east and west) Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays; no parking on avenues (north and south) Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays.

To The Editor:

On Thursday, Nov. 20th, people nationwide will be asked to stop smoking for one day. Last year 15 million people took part; five million succeeded in giving up the habit for 24 hours. According to a Gallup study, one to three days later, 2.3 million still weren't smoking.

In conjunction with this I would like to call public attention to a very fine program being conducted here at Northwestern hospital beginning November 16 at 7 p.m. and running through November 20.

It is a five-evening program conducted by Dr. Leo Herber to help those who want to quit, break the habit. This program has been very successful and has been conducted here and in other communities as well.

Research has traced at least a partial responsibility for a number of ailments to cigarette smoking, the most serious of which is lung cancer.

Lung cancer in men was a rare disease prior to the smoking of cigarettes. Today it is the leading cause of cancer death in men. Since women have taken to cigarette smoking lung cancer in women has been rising at an alarming rate.

Many other harmful substances are being produced today that also cause lung cancer, in industry, mining, etc. Wherever such substances are found regulations are enacted to protect the workers' health.

With cigarette smoking the decision is up to us. Our lungs are vital to our health. They are called upon to do a tremendous job providing for the needs of the cells in our body and expelling the harmful substances that enter in the air we breathe. We can eliminate one of the most harmful of these substances just by quitting the cigarette.

There is no quick, easy, inexpensive way to discover lung cancer early, consequently only a very small percentage of the lung cancer cases are discovered early enough for the disease to be cured.

I would like to express the appreciation of myself and the members of the Pennington unit of the American Cancer society to Dr. Herber and those associated with him in this work. I would like to encourage anyone wishing to shake off the cigarette habit to take part in this program.

Just go to the north entrance of Northwestern hospital at 7 p.m. November 16.

Sincerely,
Raymond V. Ptacek
Public Education Chairman

Traffic Deaths In Minnesota Down In 1980

Minnesota, after eight months of 1980, is among leaders in states with traffic death reductions during the year, according to Public Safety Commissioner John P. Sopsic.

Through the end of August, Minnesota reported 517 traffic fatalities compared to 546 and 634 through corresponding periods of 1979 and 1978. Percentage decrease is 5 and 18 respectively.

Only six states, Arizona, Hawaii, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio and South Carolina, had higher rates of decrease from 1979. Just two states, Alaska and North Dakota, had fewer traffic deaths than Minnesota in the 1978-80 comparison. Alaska's reduction was 40 per cent and North Dakota's 29 per cent for '78-80.

Nationally, the death toll of 34,830 is 5 per cent higher than the 1979 figures and 6 per cent above the 1978 total through eight months.

Election Set On Bargaining Agent Selection

An election will be conducted from mid-November to mid-December so that more than 5,100 professional employees can select a bargaining agent to represent them with their employer — the state of Minnesota.

The employees, who constitute the second largest body of state workers, are distributed throughout the state in every department and agency and in job classifications ranging from accountants to zoologists.

The 1980 legislature dissolved some 120 bargaining units of state employees, replacing them with 16 units organized along occupational lines instead of departmental administration lines.

"Trouble is," explains President Robert Mooney of the Minnesota Association of Professional Employees (MAPE), "the state tried to accomplish the transition from the old to the new without election and in a manner that would have doubled representation rights of AFSCME — the American Federation of state, county and municipal employees council 6."

Frustrated by developments, Mooney continues, a group of professional employees founded MAPE and affiliated it with PEM — Public Employees of Minnesota — to challenge for an election to select an exclusive bargaining agent. Teamsters local 320 also conducted an organizing drive.

Mooney, on leave from his position as a crime laboratory analyst in the state's bureau of criminal apprehension laboratory, reports that more than 3,000 authorization cards were signed calling for such an election in the general professional unit, one of the 16 set up by the new law.

The bureau of mediation services has ordered and will conduct the election.

Ballots will be mailed first class November 18 to professional employees at their home addresses. Ballots must be returned to BMS — via U.S. Mail — before 4:30 p.m. December 12.

Ballots will be counted December 15 by BMS.

Leadership Is Meeting Topic January 26-29

Governor's council on rural development announces the Minnesota rural leadership program to be conducted January 26-29, at Arrowwood Inn near Alexandria.

Program is being operated by continuing education and extension of the University of Minnesota, Morris in cooperation with the Minnesota agricultural extension service. Co-sponsoring organizations include Minnesota association of commerce and industry, Minnesota league of women voters, association of Minnesota counties, agricultural extension service of the University of Minnesota, Minnesota council of churches and association of Minnesota townships.

Primary program objective is to create a situation where rural Minnesota leaders, both current and emerging leaders, can learn leadership skills or gain a better understanding of the skills they possess and are using in their present roles. Program is designed so that participants will be able to apply the skills they learn to actual projects in their home communities.

Program is limited to 100 participants nominated by rural communities and organizations statewide. The cost, including materials, meals and lodging, will be $50 per participant. To obtain more information and nomination forms contact Tom Mahoney (612) 589-2211, ext. 6464 or write to: Minnesota Rural Leadership Program, Continuing Education and Extension, Room 235 Community Services Building, University of Minnesota, Morris, Morris, MN 56267.

ON TOOTHPICKS

The next sentence may surprise you: Toothpicks are okay! Not recommended to be used in public, they do have value in helping to keep teeth clean and gums healthy.

The history of toothpicks is rather interesting. They were used as early as 3500 B.C., in the form of twigs, reeds and pieces of grass. A wealthy, ancient Greek would probably carry a ring with several impressive looking toothpicks dangling from it. These toothpicks might be made from gold, silver, ivory or ebony. Others were delicately carved or embedded with jewels.

Dentists object to the abuse of toothpicks, not their use. They should be used gently or they will injure your gums. A dentist should really instruct you on how to use them.

A toothpick can be a lifesaver if you've just finished a steak and can't reach that maddening spot. A soft, flat wooden toothpick, not a bobby pin or sharp instrument, can free the debris stuck between your teeth and make you feel instantly more comfortable.

4H CLUB

November 3 Pennington county 4-H leaders council meeting was called to order by president Sharon Hamre. Flag pledges were said, roll call was taken, and secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved.

Unfinished business included a discussion of awards night, which was considered a success. Deb Matero discussed the Holiday craft show and stated that more workers are needed. Northwest leaders forum information is available at the county extension office.

Junior leaders who attended the junior leader retreat said they enjoyed the event. October 29 Howard Person met with other leaders in the making of a new leaders handbook which explains 4-H for all new leaders. Project leader training meeting has been cancelled. Nine to 13 year olds attending a Model Hair Shoppe grooming class will meet for their last class, November 17, when an open house will be conducted.

Howard Person discussed a new demonstration project which our county needs more involvement in and about having a practice session in June to give 4-H'ers a chance to demonstrate without receiving ribbons. It would help them know what their strong points are and what they need to work on for the fair, he said.

In new business, it was mentioned that host families are needed for exchange students. If anyone would like to host a student pick up an application form at the county extension office. Leaders council scholarships and the Stuey Food science scholarships are both due December 1.

District record judging will be December 10. Anyone interested in kitchen conferences who hasn't had one may contact either Deb Matero or Howard Person.

Ruth Legvold, who was unable to attend Awards Night, received her Friend of 4-H award.

Letters are being sent out informing people of operation Merry Christmas which is sending gifts to Fergus Falls hospital. Some gift ideas are roll-ons, toothpaste, coloring books, and simple puzzles.

After the meeting was adjourned, Becky Kresl presented a program on food and nutrition leader training in Washington, D.C.

VA Payment Checks Reflect Percentage Hike

Nearly 2.3 million veterans, 240,000 surviving spouses and more than 83,000 children of deceased veterans will receive larger Veterans administration compensation checks in November, VA administrator Max Cleland announced recently.

Increase is the result of recent Congressional action signed into law October 7 by the President which hiked compensation rates by 13 per cent for those rated from 10 to 40 per cent disabled, and 14.3 per cent for more seriously-disabled veterans. Dependency and indemnity compensation rates for surviving spouses and children of veterans were increased by 14.3 per cent also.

Effective on October 1, the new rates will be reflected in checks received November 1. The legislation made several other changes in VA benefits, including:

+ An increase from $25,000 to $27,500 in the amount of a VA home loan guaranty for conventional homes, and from $17,500 to $20,000 for mobile home loans;

+ Payment of up to $5,000 for special housing adaptations for veterans with service-connected blindness in both eyes (5-200 visual acuity or less), or with the loss, or loss of use, of both hands;

+ Provision of headstones or grave makers for a veteran's wife, husband or child buried in a state veterans' cemetery;

+ Improved pensions for military retirees whose retirement income falls below the poverty level.

Legislation also provides relief for veterans who obtained mortgages during periods of high interest rates and later find they can obtain refinancing at lower rates.

Previously, VA loan guaranty eligibility required that a mortgate be paid off and the property disposed of before a veteran was once again eligible for a VA mortgage guaranty. The new law permits refinancing of the existing mortgage and VA guarantee of the refinanced loan.

The bill restricts benefits for veterans incarcerated in federal, state or local penal institutions on felony convictions. They will receive compensation or DIC at a lesser rate after they have been confined for 60 days.

New compensation rates mean that a veteran with a service-connected disability rated at 10 per cent will receive $54 a month, an increase from $48. Rate for a 50 per cent disability goes from $255 monthly to $291, and a veteran with 100 per cent disability will receive $1,016 monthly instead of the current $889. Additional amounts, providing a maximum monthly payment of $2,898 (up from $2,536), will be paid for specific severe disabilities.

VA chief Cleland said a detailed explanation of the new rates will be included with the November compensation checks.

To The Editor:

The Republicans are in, the Democrats are out. The election has not been over more than one week and we hear the cry "unfair", "devious campaign tactics", "we will soon be under a bondage of conservatism", "woe unto you Scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites" etc.

Why can't certain people understand some of us (and it would appear a majority of us) simply want a change, maybe slow down and think things over for a moment.

The Democrats did not seem to discern this mood among Americans. Instead, they seem to want to blame, of all things, the church. Evidently, they would want to divide Americans on this particular subject. I believe this could cause insufferable damage to the American way of life and our country in general.

First of all, their main whipping boy appears to be Jerry Falwell but, like it or not, he also has the right to speak out as he believes. He can receive support from any who may want to give it to him. I personally am not a Falwell supporter, but I evidently voted as if I was. Should I feel guilty? Maybe get the post election blues?

Why did America vote as it did. I believe a lot more than just a few people are finding closer ties to Christianity and-or the values to which it ascribes. We simply could not tolerate abortion on demand, especially when it starts coming out of our pockets. I would personally rather see my taxes were spent for a stay out of the motel or back seat of the car campaign.

I think a lot of us don't like the way a few "really make out" on welfare while we foot the bill. These people have even become so lazy they evidently did not even bother to vote last election. There are a lot of women who do not support ERA simply because it does make them equal. Why would they want to come down from the pedestal my Dad always told me to put them on? When I look at my wife I can sense there are some differences; I can't quite put my finger on it, but I can sense it.

And, I can remember prayers in school, In God we trust on money, the words "indivisible under God", kind of a general sense that He (not she) was around, and I guess I turned out all right.

How about the recent problem of celebrating Christmas without Christ? I cannot even believe how silly this idea is. It all comes down to one simple fact: sometimes freedoms are not freedoms at all but servitude in a different way.

Those of us who feel these issues are important could not vote for a man who, like Pilate, simply set aside his personal beliefs and washed his hands of it all, deciding to run on a platform he did not personally believe in. A friend of mine said it best about freedom:

"Paradise lost is the loss of your freedom
Pain is the prize you receive;
I'm here to say there's a way to find Eden,
Look to the Son and believe."

Sincerely,
David Micheal Crowser,
Democrat voting for Republicans

Conservation Proposal Gets Public Response

Suggestions by the American public during a recent review of soil and water conservation programs are reflected in fiscal year 1982 budget proposals by the USDA soil conservation service (SCS).

SCS chief Norman A. Berg, in a speech at the national soil conservation conference in Rapid City, SD, said the priorities in his agency's 1982 budget request are: (1) Reducing erosion in critical areas and on fragile soils, (2) improving water quality and water conservation, (3) more nonstructural methods of reducing flood damages, (4) preserving wetlands and wildlife habitat, and (5) conserving energy in agriculture.

In preparing its budget proposals, SCS analyzed written responses from 118,000 concerned citizens. These responses contained 1.5 million different comments. Responses showed the greatest support for objectives to reduce soil erosion and retain prime farmland.

Comments on how these objections could be achieved most frequently said that erosion control measures, structural flood control measures, conservation tillage and drainage were effective conservation measures.

Congress has not yet acted on a 1981 budget for USDA's soil conservation programs. In 1980, however, the USDA budget for helping Minnesota landowners plan, install and pay for conservation practices, was $16.5 million.

Persons generally believed that USDA agencies and their conservation programs were effective but said that the agencies could do a better job if they had more funding. They said that education and research rather than regulation are appropriate areas for government involvement in conservation.

Most public comments favored a strategy of redirection for the department's existing conservation programs. Second most preferred strategy would provide bonuses to land users who voluntarily apply and maintain conservation measures that meet USDA standards. Least favored strategy was regulatory authority to carry out a national soil and water conservation program.

"The persons who responded want more technical assistance for on-the-ground implementation of conservation, more funding and less regulation and red tape," Berg said.

"What these comments boil down to," Berg said, "is widespread support for a voluntary, locally-controlled but government subsidized conservation program."

Recommended USDA program should go forward to the president and the congress during the first half of 1981.

Meanwhile, several bills have been introduced in Congress that relate to the recent appraisal of conservation programs. One proposal would authorize the federal government to develop long-term conservation contracts with farmers in parts of the country with especially chronic or severe soil erosion problems.

Another would authorize financial and technical assistance to those geographic areas which have severe soil erosion or irrigation water management problems.

Still another bill before congress suggests a system of incentives to landowners who install and maintain conservation measures on their land.

Bartering Gains In U.S. Popularity

Had the Internal Revenue service been around when Manhattan Island was bartered for a bunch of beads and blankets, they would have insisted the deal was taxable because the properties exchanged were not "like-kind."

In fact, the IRS says you cannot barter a steer for a cow, because one sex is more valuable that the other.

Bartering has become popular again, despite the fact that it is taxable, says the Minnesota society of CPAs, because it offers the small business a way to acquire goods and services without any cash outlay.

Before losing money on slow-moving inventory or selling it at closeout prices, consider exchanging those products for goods that your company needs. With barter, you don't have to worry about collecting payments, and your exchanges may generate new cash business as well.

There are several ways to do it. You can search around until you find a company that wants to swap every time you have merchandise you want to barter. Perhaps that firm has exactly what you want, maybe not. If not, you'll have to keep looking until you can trade again. This would reduce the practicality of barter, so barter clubs or trade exchanges have been established. These organizations act as clearinghouses to bring together members who either want to "buy" or "sell." Be sure the club is licensed or covered by state legislation.

Joining a barter club or exchange generally requires an annual membership fee. Larger clubs may issue checks or credit cards, send you a monthly statement listing your transactions and provide you with periodic listings of goods and services available.

You will probably be charged a fee when you "buy" goods or services from another member. You'll also have to pay the club a standard commission, which can range from two to 15 per cent, whenever you "sell" goods or services. These fees can be paid in "trade dollars" (or credits) or in cash, depending upon the rules on the club. Keep these fees in mind before you sign any contracts.

Determine if your profit structure is set up so you'll benefit from barter deals, CPAs say. For example, if you sell stationery supplies for 200 trade dollars and you have to pay a 10 per cent commission in credits, you net only 180 spendable trade dollars. When you use those 180 credits to make a purchase and the buyer's fee is eight per cent, you end up paying another 14.40 trade dollars. Total price of the purchase is then 194.40 trade dollars. (One trade dollar generally equals one cash dollar within the exchange, but a trade dollar is not redeemable for $1 cash.)

Receipt of barter club credits can be considered gross income by the IRS, and therefore subject to federal taxes. You are taxed on the fair market value of all credits you use, generally when they are credited to your account, not when you redeem them. For example, the $200 worth of stationery supplies you sold for 200 trade dollars this year must be reported on your 1980 tax return as income of $200. (The commission you pay to the barter club may be deductible as a business expense. Check with your tax advisor to be sure of the tax treatment.)

Some business barters are not taxable. CPAs say there is no tax involved when like-kind properties are exchanged. To be considered like-kind, business property must be held for "productive use" or for investment purposes, and not be held for sale as part of your inventory. Bartering an apartment building for a store building qualifies as a like-kind exchange.

Barter clubs and trade exchanges aren't always easy to find. Look for them in the Yellow Pages under "Trade Organizations," "Brokers," Merchandise Brokers," "Stocks," "Business Brokers" or "Due Bills," If you can't locate them under "Barter."

Board Approves 1980 Local Levy

Approval of the local levies for 1980 (payable in 1981), discussion of the head lice situation in the local schools and beginning of the procedure to secure a new superintendent of schools took place when the Thief River Falls board of education met Monday evening in the school district service center.

Total local levy for 1980 of $2,532,401 is a slight decrease from the $2,639,876 levied locally in 1979, according to a comparison submitted to the board by Harry Nelson, the district's business manager. He said the difference is due primarily to the deduction of tax credits which are paid to the district by the state.

The 1980 levy payable in 1981 includes the following amounts by budget departments: Maintenance, $1,874,680; transportation, $91,875; community service, $30,817; capital expenditure, $297,956; general debt service, $103,525; AVTI debt service, $133,547 (this amount will be reduced by state aid); and AVTI maintenance, none.

Figures for the 1979 levy payable in 1980 include: Maintenance, $1,925,270; transportation, $133,462; community service, $30,778; capital expenditure, $284,079; general debt service, $127,700; AVTI debt service, $136,586; and AVTI maintenance, $2,000.

The board received a report from Leo Ruberto, director of special education and health, that nearly 900 students had been screened for head lice and that slightly over 50 cases had been identified. Most were in the elementary schools and the students affected were sent home for treatment in accordance with the procedure followed in the district.

The procedure calls for a screening of all students by October 15 of each year, and where head lice are discovered the student is referred to the central office. Parents are contacted and requested to remove the child from the school.

Parents are given a form when they pick up the child that must be signed either by the family physician or by a local pharmacist acting under orders for the family physician, that treatment has been implemented. Pamphlet on measures of control that can be taken at home is also given to the parents.

Children are rechecked on return to school and if the check produces positive results, a letter is sent to the family indicating the results. Another check is made in 15 days, and if infestation is again found, the child is sent home and another form must be signed by the family physician.

The board instructed the clerk to develop material in preparation for advertising for a superintendent of schools to succeed Dr. William Corliss. The superintendency will be open as of June 30, 1981, at which time Dr. Corliss has a contract for other duties within the district.

In other action the board requested a several year projection of the administrative cabinet's recommendation that the district maintain its program of kindergarten through grade five in elementary, sixth through eighth grade in middle school and ninth through 12th grade in high school. The projection is to be made at the November 24 board meeting. Administrators believe maintaining the present system is best from the standpoints of program, personnel and finance.

Approval was given to advertising for the sale of three 60-passenger school buses of 1970 and 1971 model years. Orley Gunderson, director of the area vocational-technical institute, was authorized to submit a supplementary budget request of $82,039 to the state department of education for its approval.

Agreement was entered into with the firm of Armstrong, Torseth, Skold, Rydeen, Inc., to have that firm conduct maxi audits on Lincoln, Franklin, Mark Twain, Knox, Washington, AVTI and AVTI airport at a cost of $28,240.

Bids were accepted for the AVTI new house project and included: Plumbing, Falls Plumbing and Heating, $1,899; electrical wiring, Jorgenson Electric, $1,902; heating, Brodin Sheet Metal, $2,100; and building materials, Home Lumber company, $18,821.

Bids for the AVTI remodeling project included: Plumbing, Swenson Plumbing and Heating, $1,730; electrical wiring, Jorgenson Electric, $1,564; and heating, Brodin Sheet Metal, $2,535.

Hired by the board were Janel Walter, substitute secretary for buildings and grounds department, at $4.84 per hour; Diane Anderson, part-time physical education instructor at Lincoln, four hours per day at $12.44 per hour; and Shelly Bakken, management aide to the hearing impaired students' instructor at $3.64 per hour.

Extra-curricular assignments were approved for Jay Forney, seventh grade boys basketball coach, $526.75, and Diane Anderson, ninth grade girls volleyball coach, $265.

Authorization was given to post and advertise for one full-time custodian for the school district service center.

Administration was directed to develop a report indicating the areas in special education that require supervision and submit the report to the board, with a plan for delivery of that supervision, no later than December 31.

Approved for appointment to the high school home economics advisory committee were Mrs. Warren Mosbeck, parent; Dennis Bondy, consumer education; Mrs. Judy Pinkerton, consumer foods; Mrs. Sue Fredeen, consumer housing; Miss Karen Kloety, student; Rev. Curtis Anderson, Rev. Richard Larson, Dr. Peter Johnson and Scott Bentson, child development and family living; and Mrs. Betty Walton, consumer clothing.

Lack Of Full Council Delays Zoning Action

major arterials; (2) neighborhood opposition (property value loss, no evidence of need for subsidized housing in the city); and (3) traffic in the area.

Third and final rezoning request acted upon by planning commission members arrived following a petition received from area residents for a change in zoning from Agriculture to R-1 (low density residential) for 10 acres of the Diocesan property. This request had been tabled at the planning commission meeting November 3 until the two other requests were resolved.

Further housing issues arrived with a discussion by Jack Quinlivan of the 1981 community development block grant.

"We are seeking council approval to submit the three-phase program outlined in the pre-application of the block grant to the Housing and Urban Development (HUD) authority for their approval," he said.

First phase of the program would involve rental rehabilitation of 40 units in Thief River Falls to "provide low income renters with sanitary living conditions," according to Bill Seeger, executive director of the Northwest Multi-Housing redevelopment authority, Mentor.

Second phase of the program would involve housing rehabilitation, acquisition and extending sewer and water serives to two properties — Tessum's Addition and Eshelby's Rearrangement.

Third phase of the program would involve upgrading the Ripley Alliance Shelter for Battered Women.

Following the discussion of the three phases, alderman J.J. Womack introduced the resolution to accept the planning commission presentations of the various phases within the pre-application to be submitted to HUD. The resolution was seconded by alderman Dr. Don Goodrich.

A roll call vote on the issue, resulted in five voting in favor of the issue and alderman Borsheim opposed to submitting the program until further study is done on the various phases of the program.

Public safety and street committee recommendations were addressed by Ken Froschheiser, chief of police.

Recommended removal of "30 minute parking here to corner" signs in various locations where they are in violation of state law was approved by council. And, the issue concerning "Calendar Parking" proposed to be in effect from November 15 to March 15 in Thief River Falls, was following discussion, accepted with a report back to the next regular city council meeting November 25 following legal review of the matter.

Bids will be opened on the Airport Development Aid Project December 9 at 2 p.m. for additions to the Crash Fire Rescue building and handicapped facilities for the airport terminal.

Schedule Break

With the exception of the Lincoln high school swimming team, which will close out its 1980 regular season schedule Saturday by participating in an invitational meet at Grand Rapids, the Thief River Falls sports scene is in the middle of a break between fall and winter sports.

The Lincoln girls will compete in the Section 3 swimming and diving championships Nov. 25-26 at Bemidji State University, with several individuals setting their sights on the 1980 state meet Dec. 5-6 at the Cooke Hall pool on the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis.

Thief River Falls' winter sports schedule will get underway on two fronts Saturday, Nov. 29, when Thief River Falls plays host to the Section 8 high school hockey jamboree and the Northland community college basketball team stages its annual alumni game.

Things will get into full swing the following week:

+Northland hockey team will host the Bemidji State University junior varsity Wednesday, Dec. 3, then begin its MJCAA schedule with a weekend series in International Falls Dec. 5-6 against Rainy River.

+Lincoln basketball team opens its 1980-81 season Friday, Dec. 5, by hosting Roseau.

+Northland women's basketball team will be in Bottineau, N.D. that same night.

+Northland men's basketball team will participate in an invitational tournament in Winnipeg sponsored by Red River community college Friday and Saturday, Dec. 5-6.

+Lincoln girls basketball team opens at home against Karlstad Saturday, Dec. 6.

+That same night the Lincoln hockey team will be in Crookston for its regular season opener.

+Lincoln boys swimming team will wait until Saturday, Dec. 13, to open its 1980-81 season with its Prowler relays in the Franklin middle school pool.

TRF Hosts Jamboree

A new format will be used when Thief River Falls stages the annual Section 8 high school hockey jamboree Saturday, Nov. 29. Invitations were sent to all 17 Section 8 hockey schools, and 14 of them will be here that day to kick off the 1980-81 season. Only Brainerd, Crosby-Ironton and Little Falls — the newest Section 8 member — will not participate in the new-style jamboree that replaces the old eight-team format staged at various sites in the past.

The day-long affair will find teams paired off against one opponent for two 11-minute periods. The schedule shows Hallock vs. Red Lake Falls at 2 p.m.; Lake of the Woods vs. Fergus Falls at 3:10; Indus vs. Detroit Lakes at 4:20; Moorhead vs. Bemidji at 6 o'clock; Warroad vs. Alexandria at 7:10; Crookston vs. Roseau at 8:20; and Thief River Falls vs. East Grand Forks at 9:30.

The evening session appears to be most attractive. Pairings were based upon the final 1979-80 regular season Section 8 point standings, matching No. 1 vs. No. 2; No. 3 vs. No. 4, etc.

However, the $2 admission price for adults and $1 for students is good for both sessions — all seven matches.

Thief River Falls head hockey coach Wendell Grand, who is heading the program, is excited about the enlarged jamboree format.

"It gives you the opportunity to look at the entire section," pointed out Grand. "It's a good opportunity for the kids, too; it'll give them exposure to the college coaches," he mentioned, noting that the annual Iron Range hockey jamboree (run in the same manner) will be held that Friday, and college scouts are likely to use the back-to-back dates to get an early look at most of the hockey talent in northern Minnesota.

Thief River Falls amateur hockey association (TRFAHA) is sponsoring the Section 8 jamboree. The organization will supply volunteer workers, with the Thief River Falls officials' association also donating its time. Jamboree profits will go to the Thief River Falls youth hockey program.

The expanded jamboree concept is on a one-year experimental basis. Thief River Falls was chosen as the site because of the location and facility. Those involved in the jamboree here hope to put on a good show so that it might become an annual event for the city and TRFAHA.

Little Falls, by the way, replaces Mount St. Benedict as the 17th Section 8 hockey school.

Miscellaneous

Seven fan buses made the long trip from Crookston to Rochester Saturday to watch the Northwest Athletic Conference champion Pirates defeat defending state champion Rochester Lourdes 35-12 in the semifinals of the 1980 Minnesota State High School League Class A state football semifinals. A large crowd should be on hand Friday at 7:30 p.m. when the Pirates host Pipestone in the Class A state championship game. Crookston runningback Steve Johnson, who rushed for 121 yards on 19 carries against Rochester Lourdes, now has rushed for 1,562 yards this fall. He's scored 22 touchdowns. Meanwhile, runningmate Brent Weiss is near the 900-yard mark rushing for the year and has scored 12 times.

A 10-POINT AVERGE isn't bad on the basketball court, but it's even better in a deer camp. The four bucks taken by Mr. and Mrs. Hilary Stoltman and Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Johnson of Thief River Falls during the first four days of the 1980 Minnesota deer season averaged 10 points each. Mrs. Johnson (left) and Mrs. Stoltman each bagged 10-pointers, Mrs. Johnson on Sunday and Mrs. Stoltman on Tuesday. Hilary connected with his eight-pointer on opening day and Sherman toppled the 12-pointer at right on Monday. That buck field dressed at 250 pounds and was estimated at 350 pounds live weight. The party had to drag the trophy several miles out of a swamp. The party did its hunting in the Fourtown area.

Prowlers Defeat Bemidji For 9-4 Dual Meet Mark

Betsie Hallstrom won two individual events and swam the anchor leg on the winning 200-yard medley relay Tuesday to lead Thief River Falls past Bemidji 105.5-68.5 in a girls high school swimming meet in the Franklin middle school pool.

The final home appearance of the 1980 season closed out the Prowlers' dual meet record at 9-4. They'll finish their regular season schedule Saturday by participating in the Grand Rapids invitational beginning at 10 a.m.

Thief River Falls had little trouble with Bemidji yesterday. Hallstrom won the 50-yard freestyle in 26.45 and took the 100-yard freestyle in 59.89, and followed Sarah Green, Franki Kuyath and Shari McGann in the 200-yard medley relay that opened the meet with a first place 2:04.05.

Other Thief River Falls wins were turned in by Brenda Lund, 253.3 points in the diving competition; Mary Geatz, 6:04.52 in the 500-yard freestyle; and Loudeen Flom, Shari McGann, Geatz and Shelley McGann with a 4:12.93 in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Peggy Schmidt and Deb Trihey were double event winners for Bemidji.

"We were pretty happy with it," said Thief River Falls coach John Hustad of the results.

DNR Trail Meeting Scheduled For TRF

Thief River Falls will be the site of one of several Department of Natural Resources state-wide meetings concerned with the recreational trail system throughout Minnesota.

Faced with the task of preparing a state-wide plan for the future development of recreational trails in the state, the DNR has asked the public for its advice.

In order to hear the citizen's views, the DNR has scheduled several public forums around the state during the month of December and invited everyone interested in the subject to attend one of the sessions.

The Thief River Falls meeting will be held Thursday, Dec. 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the city auditorium.

Trail planners said they have to come up with a plan setting forth the number, kind and location of trails. They want the public to attend one or more of the forums and identify issues surrounding DNR trail acquisition and management. They want to know whether trail users want more or fewer trails, what kind of trails (horseback riding, snowmobiling, hiking, etc.) and where the trails should be located. They also want to hear from any other persons having a particular interest in trails.

Those unable to attend one of the forums but who wish to express an opinion may write to DNR Trail Planning, Centennial Building, St. Paul. Those who wish to speak at one of the forums are asked to call toll free 1-800-652-9747 and ask for "trail planning." Those unable to call can send their name and phone number to the above address and they will be contacted.

In addition to the meeting in Thief River Falls Dec. 4, the DNR trail forums will be held Nov. 25 at Mora; Dec. 1 at Fergus Falls and Appleton; Dec. 2 at Brainerd, Willmar and St. Cloud; Dec. 3 at Bemidji and St. Paul; Dec. 9 at Mankato; Dec. 10 at Slayton and Chisholm; Dec. 11 at Duluth and Minneapolis.

Cuppett, UND Earn Spot In National Meet

Marchell Cuppett, junior goalie from Thief River Falls, posted two shutouts over the weekend as the University of North Dakota women's field hockey team earned its first berth in the association for intercollegiate athletics for women (AIAW) Division II national tournament with a third place finish at the AIAW Region VI championships at Cedar Falls, Ia.

North Dakota shut out Southeast Missouri State 1-0 in its first Region VI start last Thursday before losing to Central Missouri State 4-3 in overtime and falling to eventual champion Southwest Missouri State 3-1. UND bounced back to blank Bemidji State University 4-0 in the third place game to earn a berth in the nationals, scheduled Nov. 19-22 at Edwardsville, Ill.

Cuppett raised her season record in goal to 25-5, including 16 shutouts. Having played every minute of every game for the Sioux this fall, Cuppett has allowed just 26 goals for an 0.86 goals-against average. She stopped 23 Southwest Missouri State shots in what most observers said was the best game of the Region VI tournament last Friday afternoon, reported UND coach Margaret Peterson.

State Matches Are Scheduled In Volleyball

Two-time defending Class A champion Gaylord and defending Class AA victor St. Paul Johnson lead the list of 16 teams that will be entered in the seventh annual Minnesota State High School League state girls' volleyball tournament, scheduled for Friday and Saturday at the Met Center in Bloomington.

Nine of the 16 schools which had teams in last year's tournament have earned their way back to this year's state event. Included are last year's runner-up teams — Moose Lake in Class A and Marshall in Class AA. Moose Lake, in fact, draws Gaylord in opening round action Friday.

The tournament schedule finds quarterfinal play beginning at 10 a.m. Friday with contests taking place simultaneously on two courts in both classes. The four quarterfinal matches in each class will run continually until play is concluded at approximately 2:30 p.m. Semifinals action is on tap for 7:30 and 8:45 p.m. Friday evening with championship matches set for Saturday. The Class A title confrontation begins at 12:45 p.m. with the Class AA finals match slated for 2 o'clock.

Six of the 16 team entrants in the event have never previously had their school entered in a state girls volleyball tournament. Four of those schools are in Class A. They include St. Charles, Madelia, Wabasso and Delano. The two new Class AA entrants are Minneapolis Washburn and International Falls.

Moose Lake and St. Charles are the undefeated teams in Class A, while International Falls is the lone unbeaten in Class AA. Gaylord had a winning streak of 56 matches, extending three seasons, snapped by St. Agnes in a regular season match and brings in a three-year won-lost mark of 64-1.

Gaylord is favored to capture top honors once again in Class A, while Marshall has been picked by many to capture the Class AA laurels.

Class AA

Upper bracket — 10 a.m. — Marshall (19-1) vs. Armstrong (19-1); 11:15 a.m. — Minneapolis Washburn (16-6) vs. International Falls (19-0).

Lower bracket — 12:30 p.m. — Apple Valley (17-1) vs. St. Paul Johnson (17-1); 1:45 p.m. Columbia Heights (16-3) vs. Moorhead (18-2).

Class A

Upper bracket — 10 a.m. — Delano (16-3) vs. Breckenridge (20-1); 11:15 a.m. — St. Charles (19-0) vs. Madelia (19-1).

Lower bracket — 12:30 p.m. Gaylord (20-1) vs. Moose Lake (21-0); 1:45 p.m. — Wabasso (18-4) vs. Fosston (19-4).

BEST BUCK of his four-member hunting party was bagged by Mark Isaacson of Thief River Falls. He was hunting in the Thief Lake area with his dad, Vern Isaacson, Lambert Brunkhorst and Ken Johnson. The party took two other bucks as well but both were — as Mark's smile attests — somewhat smaller.

DNR Explains Steps To Follow In Deer-Auto Road Mishaps

You're a motorist and you've just collided with a deer on a Minnesota highway — What do you do next?

Department of Natural Resources today explained what the law requires of a driver who runs down a deer or other wildlife and how the DNR handles such cases.

More than 6,400 deer were killed on Minnesota roads last year, according to DNR records, and the majority were killed during the fall months.

Department enforcement officials said that when a motorist runs down a deer, the animal should be left where it has fallen unless it is blocking the road and can be dragged off to the side.

The next step is to call a conservation officer, sheriff or highway patrolman and report the accident. When the enforcement agent arrives the driver may be offered the deer or may ask to purchase it.

DNR regulations provide that the minimum price is $5 but may be higher, depending on the size and condition of the animal. However, the conservation officer has the duty of disposing of a car killed deer and the driver does not automatically gain possession of it. The conservation officer may elect to sell it to a charitable organization or institution.

Either a check or cash may be used to make the purchase and the driver will be given a receipt, or seizure slip, on the spot if the enforcement agent is a conservation officer.

If the agent is a sheriff or deputy, or a highway patrol officer, the driver may be allowed to take the deer and will be contacted the next day by a conservation officer to complete the paper work.

The conservation officer must send a check to DNR headquarters in St. Paul for the price received for the deer along with a confiscation report showing the time and date of the accident, buyers name and other details.

Pheasants or other game birds killed on the road should be left where fallen and may be sold to the driver for not less than $1. Waterfowl, by federal law, cannot be sold but must be gathered up and disposed of by the conservation officer.

If the car killed bird or animal is to be mounted, the seizure slips must accompnay the wildlife to the taxidermist and must be attached to the bottom of the mount afterward.

Hunters Should Think Safety At All Times

Minnesota hunters should start thinking "safety" long before they reach their hunting site, according to Public Safety Commissioner John P. Sopsic.

"It's just as important for hunters and trappers to follow common sense rules of highway safety while driving as it is to follow safety precautions while hunting," said Sopsic.

The commissioner noted that in too many cases hunting parties leave after work and try to reach hunting sites in a non-stop, marathon drive. Driver fatigue often results, so frequent stops are a good idea. On the other hand, stopping for alcoholic drinks or "pick-me-ups" is always a bad idea when driving is involved.

An open bottle in a van, motorhome or in any motor vehicle is not only a bad idea, it is strictly illegal.

Traffic may be heavy on the way to and from weekend hunting expeditions. Extra care is called for when passing, especially on two-lane roads. The pass that might save a minute could cost a life.

Unpredictable weather conditions of late fall can also require extra care in driving. Frost, rain or an early snow can cause slippery road conditions and also affect windshield visibility. Decreasing speed to match weather and road conditions is a must.

Most hunters have strict rules about drinking while hunting and using safety precautions such as carrying their guns properly and using safety catches. In addition to following these rules of the woods, hunters should remember the equally important rules of the road while getting to the woods.

Wildlife Wetlands Projects Reduce Flood Levels In Valley

Recognition that marshes and lakes can play a significant role in reducing flood levels has prompted the state to initiate several projects in the Red River Valley area designed to increase the water retention capacity of wetlands managed by the Department of Natural Resources.

Severe flood losses in both farming areas and municipalities during recent years in northwestern Minnesota has created strong interest in developing impoundments along streams tributary to the Red River.

The idea was given new impetus recently when the Red Lake Watershed engineer calculated that the DNR's Thief Lake wildlife management area and the Agassiz national wildlife refuge reduced flood peaks in Crookston and Grand Forks by 1.5 and .5 feet respectively during the flood of 1979.

The continual flooding that has plagued the area resulted in the formation of watershed districts, giving local authorities the legal and financial means of implementing flood control projects.

And to supplement local funding, the legislature appropriated $1 million through the Legislative committee on Minnesota resources (LCMR).

A number of projects have involved DNR wildlife management areas (WMA) and other state owned lands.

First such project, now completed, was a 52 acre marsh within the Lake Ida WMA in Norman county where a small dike and water control structure along with a ditch improvement upstream was constructed to improve flood water retention and to provide a more adequate water supply.

Cost of $121,500 was financed largely by two watershed districts with the DNR providing some funding in addition to the land.

Largest project finished to date is on the Elm Lake WMA in Marshall county where the impoundment was enlarged to provide 4,500 acre feet of temporary floodwater storage.

Cost of the project was shared by the watershed board and the DNR with additional funding from the LCMR.

Several other projects are in various stages of planning including the Nereson WMA in Roseau county where dike work and control structures will create a permanent pool of 600 acres and provide 2,500 acre feet of temporary floodwater storage.

DNR officials said that prior to the start of these latest flood control efforts, the department's section of wildlife had undertaken similar projects in cooperation with the Soil Conservation Service and Soil and Water Conservation Districts under the federal small watershed program.

Examples of these projects in the northwest are the East Park WMA in Marshall county and Skull Lake and Joe River WMA's in Kittson county.

They added that many other wildlife impoundments in the state also provide flood control benefits even though not specifically designed for that purpose.

They also noted that many conservationists have insisted for years that the widespread drainage of natural marshes to obtain land for agriculture and other development is a major contributing factor in flooding.

"By restoring these wetlands and enlarging them we are allowing them to fulfill one of their most important benefits to nature — and to man," said Charles Burrows, DNR fish and wildlife director.

Fish, Wildlife Conference Is Scheduled

A behind-the-scenes look at the administrative, public relations and political considerations involved in implementing steel shot regulations will be a feature of the 42nd midwest fish and wildlife conference, scheduled for St. Paul Dec. 7-10.

The meeting annually brings together practicing professionals in the field of fish and wildlife management. However, those planning this year's conference say they aim to put together a program that will also be of interest to sportsmen and conservationists in general.

With the theme "Battlegrounds of the '80's: Fish and Wildlife Habitats" the conference will focus attention on new ideas and approaches to deal with the problems of maintaining an environment for fish and wildlife during the next decade.

Included in the program are topics on urban fish and wildlife, human impacts and conflicting interests.

Subjects expected to be of particular interest to Minnesotans include the management of winter-kill lakes and the management of walleye pike.

Install a CO-OP Forget-it Battery now.
Farmers of the Northern Plains know what it takes to start an engine after a night of howling winds drops the windchill temperature down to -40°. That's why, for example, more North Dakota farmers buy CO-OP batteries than any other single brand.
You can't buy a more powerful CO-OP battery for your car or pickup than the Forget-it maintenance-free Battery. It provides up to 550 amps of cranking power at 0°F. It never needs water, and virtually eliminates terminal corrosion.
Your trucks and tractors can have this same dependable starting power, too. The CO-OP Forget-it F-31 Battery combines advanced lead-calcium maintenance-free construction with a tough hard rubber case. Up to 625 amps of cranking power for heavy-duty equipment.
Both Forget-it Batteries available at your CENEX Co-op.

The Background Of Integrity

There are millions of men in this world whose word is trusted — whose handshake is a binding contract — whose integrity others accept without question.

We've come a long way from the days when a strong man and a stout club were the social graces.

And this growth in man's capacity for integrity has paralleled his growth in religious expression.

Of course, the cynics will point to men and nations who still live by the code of the cave man. Must we believe that the clock of progress has turned . . . is running backward?

The sound, the sensible, the sincere still feel the strength of God's Bible in every handshake. With their children they are finding new spiritual opportunity and hope in the churches they cherish.

Are you with them? Are you, too, pushing forward the frontiers of faith?

Hints For Homeowners

REMODEL AND REDECORATE

Before you begin a remodeling project, you should know your options: how many steps will be involved and what materials can cost.

Easiest for the do-it-yourselfer is a one-step approach that lets you cover any surface—from bare framing to cement walls—in one operation. Then you can just step back and admire your work.

Some decorator wall panels have a solid, fire-resistant gypsum core. The side you see, though, is a wallcovering in designer patterns and colors. It may also be a foil or natural texture that can be mixed and matched for easy-to-live-with results.

Without any guesswork, you can create a custom wall, even to a wainscoting look. Four-by-eight-foot panels are among the easiest to handle, cut and install. Only basic tools are needed: a sharp knife, a straightedge and a hammer.

The durable finish on these Decorator Panels is so scrubbable that virtually any type of stain can be removed with mild household detergents. There's also a free booklet available from building material suppliers and home centers that tells how to figure the proper number of panels for a room and then install them.

If you add or divide a room, one-step decorator panels can be applied directly to studding with dramatic effect.

You can apply Decorator Panels with adhesive only, adhesive and matching nails or with adhesive and matching moldings. Gold Bond offers 16 patterns with moldings to match each one.

You can use matching moldings as trim for ceiling-side-wall joints, the end of a partition or around windows and doors with equally good results.

A Class A fire-resistance rating is another built-in feature of paneling that lets you remodel and redecorate in one easy step.

Election Dissection

One final note on the Tuesday election as it relates to preparation by the voters to select the best qualified candidates and take the most responsible action on issues affecting the community, state or nation:

Pennington county gave 1,549 votes to Jack Baker, candidate for associate justice of the Minnesota supreme court. Baker is an overt homosexual and fought the system for permission to marry his male partner. A past president of the student body at the University of Minnesota while in law school, he was a subject of discussion before being permitted to take his bar exam.

When his petition for a license to marry James Michael McConnell was denied by the clerk of Hennepin county district court, Baker took the matter to district court. The clerk's refusal was upheld and the case was appealed by Baker to the state supreme court, where the decision was again upheld. That decision was dated Oct. 15, 1971.

Interestingly, the Hennepin county attorney representing the clerk of court in that case was George Scott, the associate justice who Baker opposed in the general election.

The question: Would 1,549 Pennington county voters who knew that a candidate for the state supreme court was an avowed homosexual have given him their vote? You know the answer.

Improper Concept

Columnist Tom Braden was disturbed recently about a newpaper article which stated: "Sixteen women, almost all of them as celebrated in their fields as the guest of honor, were invited to 'tell her (Joan Kennedy) how terrific she is' and how much women all over the world look up to her and have been inspired by her."

Branden wondered in what field Joan Kennedy is celebrated, then decided it is her much publicized bout with alcoholism and her "victory" over it.

"It is precisely at this point that I have a problem though I must be careful not to be unkind," the columnist writes. "I like Joan Kennedy. I also admire her. I admire her for her talent as a pianist and for her bravery during the primary campaign. I agree that anyone who can conquer a bad habit deserves private praise.

"But public celebration? A party given by Gloria Steinem? Newspaper coverage? Where are we going with this trend toward treating those who suffer or have suffered from alcoholism as though they were candidates for the olive wreath?

"One place we're going," he continues, "so it seems to me, is toward the concept that if you drink you're blameless. On a scale of one, you insult the Egyptian ambassadress and people say, 'Oh, well, she has a drinking problem.'

On a scale of one again, you relieve yourself in public and make racial slurs, after which you enter an institution. Everybody praises you for 'courage' in recognizing you have a problem.

"On a scale of 10 you wander around town at night picking up homosexual teenagers, after which you admit to having had a long struggle with alcohol. Then you announce that you will run for reelection. A lot of people support you for your 'courage' in being candid about your drinking problem. Those who don't support you explain that they doubt whether you really had a drinking problem. The inference is that if they believed you had a drinking problem, they would at once forgive your assaults on teenage boys.

"On a scale of 10 again, you stuff a $50,000 birbe in your pocket and when caught red-handed by a hidden camera, you plead that you were drunk. I wonder whether the jury would have voted to acquit if the sound track and camera had not revealed a seemingly sober man."

Admitting that he has more than once drunk more than he should have, Braden notes, "But do I deserve praise for so saying? And immediate forgiveness for any misconduct which accompanied the misconduct of having too many?

"I do not mean to be unkind to Joan Kennedy or Betty Ford or anybody else who has had a drinking problem and worked at it. Particularly, I do not mean to be unkind to those who join Alcoholics Anonymous, but let's keep that word 'anonymous'.

"Public celebration for having overcome private sin seems to me to be leading us toward the concept that there was never any sin."

And we would agree with Braden that this is an improper concept.

Suspicions Aroused

With many of the nation's ills being blamed on "big oil" and the public knowledge of wealth and influence which the oil companies command, there is always room for suspicion that the companies are suppressing technology which could improve the economy of our country.

Although we think the power of the oil companies, individually or as a group, is somewhat overestimated, there are legitimate questions which arise from time to time that cause a person to wonder.

An article was recently called to our attention in a two-year-old issue of a national magazine questioned what happened to the turbine powered car which Chrysler corporation was developing a few years ago.

The article points out that Chrysler started developing the turbine during World War II, and that by 1954 it had built the prototype of its first turbine-engine passenger car. The turbine was promoted as a clean-burning engine which could run on any liquid fuel.

Fifty test cars were reportedly built in 1962 and by 1966 they had been driven over a million miles and were ready for refinement before marketing. But the turbine-powered car never hit the market and the internal combustion engine continues to be the power plant in use in automobiles today.

Perhaps there is one or more logical technological or mechanical reasons why the turbine car was dropped. The magazine article speculates that it was because the Rockefeller oil interests bought into the company and placed a key man on the board of directors. In view of large scale government loans to Chrysler recently, perhaps the government should find out what happened.

It seems to us that if the free enterprise system is permitted to function, new technology will rise to the surface to solve some of the problems and provide energy breakthroughs. Profit motive is still a powerful one, and if companies can make money with a product, it should certainly find its way onto the market.

It is understandable that any industry might seek to suppress that which it views as a threat to its existence. Therefore the suspicions of the oil industry may be somewhat valid. But oil does not control all of the nation's wealth and technology, and the day is drawing dangerously near when oil will run out. Executives in the oil industry with foresight for which they are paid substantial salaries are undoubtedly looking to that day.

Turbine engines have been used successfully in air craft. They have been proved marketable and desirable in that industry. Why couldn't they be used in the auto industry where alternate fuel — such as ethanol (commercial grade 200 proof alcohol) — could reduce demand on a dwindling oil supply?

A lot of people would like to know the reason why. Their suspicions are aroused.

Let Mules Sell Grain?

Somewhat of a truism exists in the following story by Albert Kohlmeyer which was published in the November issue of the Pennington-Red Lake Leader, official publication of the Pennington-Red Lake county National Farmers organization:

"My father told the story of how a neighbor hauled wheat to town on a sled pulled by a team of mules. He made two trips a day for two days, but on the third and fourth days the mules made the trips without a driver.

"When asked why he let the mules go to town alone with the wheat, he replied: 'Why not? They get the same price I get.'

"The moral of the story is that as long as we market our products like jackasses, we won't get a better price."

Borrowed Nonsense:

Office Worker: "My wife won $1,000 playing poker and split with me."

Co-Worker: "What are you going to do with your half?"

Office Worker: "What half? I mean she packed her bags and left."

He: "Do you think that your mouth is beautiful?"

She: "I'll put it up against yours anytime!"

Interesting Opinions:

"There are three ingredients in the good life: learning, earning and yearning."

Gov. Quie's Column

The Greatest Tax Cuts & Reforms In Minnesota History

The greatest single accomplishment of my first two years in office as governor of Minnesota has been the enactment of $792 million in tax cuts and reforms.

In 1979, the Legislature passed, at my persistence, a comprehensive tax bill that has resulted in $775.9 million in tax relief. That's the largest tax cut bill ever signed into law in the history of Minnesota. But tax revisions did not stop there. In 1980, another omnibus tax bill was approved providing $16.1 million in additional tax cuts for this biennium, making a total of $792 million in tax cuts and reforms in these two years.

Minnesotans of all walks of life are today benefiting from those tax measures. The new laws offered tax breaks for renters, pensioners, the elderly, homeowners, farmers, military / personnel and low income families.

Tax Ratings

In discussing these 1979 and 1980 tax cut bills, I believe I must also comment on the recent release by U.S. Department of Commerce and the Minnesota Taxpayers Association of a comparison of taxes in the 50 states. These figures show that in fiscal year 1979, individual income taxes, sales taxes and property taxes increased. However, I cannot emphasize enough that these figures represent Minnesota's taxes before the 1979 and 1980 tax laws went into effect. Thus, they illustrate the great need for the legislation that was passed in those two years.

With this in mind, let me review a few of these tax changes made in the last two years:

Lower income taxes:

One of the most significant tax changes passed in 1979 is the 85 per cent indexation of income taxes. With indexing, the state will not automatically tax you more as your salary rises to meet the increasing cost of living. Tax brackets will be widened by 85 per cent of the rate of inflation in the Twin Cities. This change has already provided $289 million in tax relief.

Most importantly, indexing is not a one-stop tax cut. Indexing will offer continuous tax relief.

In addition to indexing, personal credits and standard deductions have been increased and will be indexed to the rate of inflation beginning in 1981.

Tax relief for low income families:

Eligibility ceilings have been raised allowing certain low income families to earn $5,500 to $10,000 without having to pay taxes.

First-time homeowners:

Those wanting to purchase their first home may now take up to a $1,500 tax deduction per year for use as a down-payment for a house.

Military personnel tax exclusion:

Military personnel in Minnesota now receive a $3,000 income exclusion, and Minnesotans serving outside the state now receive a $5,000 exclusion.

Pensioners:

Pensioners can now earn up to $11,000 from their pensions without paying taxes. Pensioners can also earn up to $17,000 in gross income before having to reduce the $11,000 tax-free pension.

The elderly:

Homeowners over age 55 won't have to pay a capital gains tax on the sale of a home, up to a $100,000 sales price.

Property tax relief for homeowners:

By increasing the homestead credit, the state will pay, in 1981, 58 per cent of a homeowner's taxes, up to a $650 maximum. Maximum refunds under the state's circuit breaker system have also been increased.

Renters tax relief:

Renters now may count 23 per cent of their rent for property tax refund purposes.

Farmers:

Farmers are receiving property tax relief by an increase in the agricultural mill rate credit from 15 to 17 mills and an increase from 160 to 240 acres for the maximum acreage eligible for ag homestead tax rates.

Inheritance tax:

The state's former inheritance and gift taxes have been eliminated. A new more equitable estate tax has been enacted. This change will mean that a surviving spouse will no longer have to sell the farm just to pay the inheritance taxes.

Sales tax:

The sales tax on city sewer and water charges has been eliminated.

These are just some of the tax relief measures included in the 1979 and 1980 tax bills. More detail on specific taxes, such as property and income taxes, will follow in later columns.

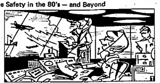
Let's Ask The Experts!

Airline Safety in the 80's — and Beyond

A trip in a U.S. airline is safer today than a trip around the corner. Will it remain that way with the enormous growth in traffic that is predicted? In this article, the President of the Air Line Pilots Association explains what must be done now to assure our air safety in the future.

By Capt. John J. O'Donnell



Changes must be made in aircraft certification procedures if air travel is to remain as remarkably safe tomorrow as it is today.

We can be proud of the safety record of scheduled airlines, but some disturbing trends may compromise the safety record we are so proud of today.

All facets of aviation are expected to grow substantially during the coming decade. The number of passengers is expected to increase by two-thirds in 1990; the total number of aircraft in the U.S. by 50 percent. At the same time that the volume of airspace is getting smaller, we will be asked to fit increasing numbers of high performance jet aircraft into it.

Airline pilots are concerned over the aggressive efforts of the manufacturers who are trying to persuade airline companies to purchase the next generation of aircraft with a cockpit designed without a flight engineer station. All of the current wide-bodied aircraft have full crews of three in the cockpit. This has been the industry standard for decades.

An important step in reducing accidents caused by human error would be to extend the philosophy of so-called redundant and fail-safe mechanical systems to the humans in the system. For instance, it is normal to have three or even four separate hydraulic systems where two—or even one—would suffice.

The third crew member will provide the "redundance," the extra margin of safety future aircraft will need to fly safely through the increasingly crowded and complex environment. The prime justification for a crew size reduction is economics—not safety!

The FAA's responsibility under the Federal Aviation Act to promote commercial aviation should be ended because it conflicts with the agency's mandate to ensure the highest level of safety. The Agency should devote all of its attention to making aviation as safe as possible—a job that is going to get even tougher as the number of planes in the air increases.

Certification is today a closed process. Only the FAA and the manufacturer participate and they do so behind closed doors. Thus, defects in certification come to light only after an aircraft has entered service. Allowing qualified persons with special expertise to participate in certification would strengthen the process and result in safer aircraft being certificated.

Making Family Life More Fun

ADD ZEST TO WEEKEND MEALS

With a little ingenuity, you can raise ordinary family dinners a notch or two into entertaining family affairs.

Encourage everyone to take part in what could become one of your most memorable, "fun" meals together. You might organize it around a cheese fondue.

Gone are the days when fondues were neatly categorized into meat, cheese and dessert, the American Dairy Association points out. Cheese fondue today can be a meal-in-one dish, since you can dip cooked meats and raw or parboiled vegetables, as well as bread.

Enlist the help of children to cut bread, peel shrimp and separate broccoli and cauliflower flowerets. Then you have only one dish to prepare—this creamy smooth fondue:

CLASSIC SWISS FONDUE

4 cups (1 pound) shredded Swiss cheese
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1 clove garlic, halved
2 cups sauterne wine, or white grape juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup kirsch OR dry sherry (optional)
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Dash freshly grated nutmeg

Slices of a variety of American cheeses with names like Cheddar, Monterey Jack, Colby and Swiss can add life to any family meal.

—Toss together cheese and flour. Rub inside of a 3-quart saucepan with garlic; discard garlic. Add wine and heat until bubbles rise. Add cheese, 1/2 cup at a time, over medium-low heat, stirring until cheese is melted after each addition. Add salt, kirsch, Worcestershire sauce and nutmeg. Transfer to fondue pot. Serve with cubes of French bread, vegetable dippers, cooked ham cubes or cooked shrimp.

For 35 other tantalizing recipes, you can write for the 20-page booklet, "The Wonderful World of Cheese." Send your name and address, along with 35 cents, to: Wonderful World of Cheese, P.O. Box 721, Rosemont, IL 60018.

Smithsonian Study Of Photosynthesis On Chesapeake Bay

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

Sailing from Jamestown in 1606, Captain John Smith described it in his log as "... a faire Bay compassed but for the mouth with fruitful and delightsome land." Three hundred years later, critic-journalist H. L. Mencken dubbed it a "great, big outdoor protein factory." Novelist James A. Michener viewed it as a "sequestered paradise... the river of rivers in which the fish of fish abound." One wag aptly termed it "the world's best fishin' hole."

"It," of course, is the Chesapeake bay, a 200-mile long body of water, covering 4,400 square miles, embraced by 7,325 miles of meandering shoreline. From its rich waters fisherman haul an estimated 600 million pounds of shellfish and finfish annually, making the bay one of the largest producers of seafood in the United States.

The Chesapeake is also an enigma. The Bay contains enormous quantities of sediment, the result of erosion and land runoff. These particles all but block sunlight from penetrating the bay's muddy, brownish-green waters.

Yet plant life, which depends on sunlight for photosynthesis, thrives in the Chesapeake. Especially abundant are microscopic, one-celled plants, called phytoplankton, which provide food for the Chesapeake's oysters, crabs, clams and fish.

Why is the Chesapeake so productive even though sunlight is so limited? How does it pull off this feat?

Now, scientists at the Smithsonian institution are trying to get to the bottom of the Bay's bounty by examining exactly how sunlight interacts with the intricate network of water, sediment, plants and animal life. They are being aided in their investigation by a new, portable instrument which permits scientists for the first time to measure the extremely low levels of light that somehow penetrate the turbid bay waters.

The findings will help scientists and water resource officials predict and manage the effects of man's activities along the bay, its five major rivers and countless minor tributaries. They are interested, for instance, in why rooted grasses, which used to be prevalent in the bay, have died off. Is this condition due to herbicides draining from farmland or from light penetration?

Well beyond the Chesapeake bay region, the study should also prove valuable to resource managers elsewhere, because the Chesapeake typifies a common and important ecological system — an estuary.

Like all estuaries, the bay is a partly enclosed body of water, connected to the open sea, in which sea water is diluted and infused with fresh water and nutrients. Many coastal features in North America are estuaries, including the lower reaches of the Hudson and St. Lawrence rivers, the seaboard end of the Mississippi river and Galveston bay. The Chesapeake is the largest estuary in North America and one of the largest in the world.

"Many people are interested in estuaries because they are so productive," says Dr. David L. Correll, an associate director and chemist at the Smithsonian's Chesapeake bay center for environmental studies in Edgewater, Md. "But very few studies have been carried out on estuarine light penetration. We are trying to determine what hampers light penetration and how plants use available light so efficiently."

The study is a blend of field and laboratory research that has brought together diverse talents from several Smithsonian bureaus.

Correll, along with Dr. J. W. Pierce, a geologist at the national museum of natural history in Washington, D.C., is analyzing the light-absorbing particles that find their way into the bay either naturally or as a result of man's activities. Correll is determining the amount of dissolved organic material; Pierce is investigating the amount, size and type of all sediment particles suspended in the water.

Dr. Maria A. Faust, a microbiologist at the Chesapeake bay center, is investigating phytoplankton and their relationships to other organisms in the bay.

"These simple, photosynthetic organisms were the early pioneers of life on earth," Faust says. "They had millions of years to adapt to low levels of light. As a result, many of them have evolved special, light-gathering accessory pigments. These pigments 'harvest' light for photosynthesis efficiently in highly sedimented waters when chlorophyll, the main photosynthetic pigment, cannot do so."

For instance, chlorophyll absorbs sunlight strongly in the blue and red portions of the spectrum and the accessory pigments absorb in the green region. But in the Chesapeake bay, where light penetration is minimal, most of the light reaching plants is in the green to orange section of the spectrum. This contrasts to oceans, where most of the light is blue to green.

In her laboratory experiments, Faust has found that phytoplankton respond to green light conditions by producing larger amounts of their accessory, light-harvesting pigments. Now she wants to confirm this for the natural conditions existing in the bay.

To gather all the information required to resolve the various questions, the Smithsonian scientists assemble aboard a specially outfitted research boat every Tuesday, rain or shine, throughout the year, except when the bay is frozen. For three hours, they cruise along the Rhode river, a sub-estuary of the bay, taking measurements at five predetermined sites.

Aided by students, the researchers collect water samples and measure light penetration, temperature, salinity, turbidity and electrical conductivity and the amount of dissolved oxygen in the water (a measure of photosynthesis).

The key to the entire study is a unique, rugged, portable instrument — a spectral radiometer — which measures the amount of light in various portions of the spectrum at different depths. The instrument was developed by Dr. William H. Klein and Bernard Goldberg of the Smithsonian's radiation biology laboratory in Rockville, Md., to meet the demands imposed by the bay's murky waters.

Back in their respective laboratories, the researchers analyze water samples for sediment or the amount of phytoplankton and their pigments. The amount of each pigment is later correlated with information on light penetration, sediment composition, the types of phytoplankton and other conditions measured in the bay waters.

Faust's interest in phytoplankton is not limited to their pigments, however. In a series of experiments last year, she discovered that phytoplankton contribute to the natural enrichment of the bay by secreting a variety of dissolved organic compounds. Under certain conditions these compounds are incorporated by bay bacteria into their own cells, eventually making their way back to the food chain.

"In nature, nothing gets wasted," Faust observes of this process. "What we are seeing are dynamic forces at work in the bay."

The eight million people who live within the Chesapeake's bountiful reach may not be fully aware of these forces. But the Smithsonian researchers are confident that when all the data is in — about two more years — they will have a better understanding of the basic biological processes responsible not only for the Chesapeake's prodigious output, but for the productivity of estuaries around the globe.

You may someday do your commuting in a helicopter similar to the one pictured here.

This 12 passenger aircraft is already in use, playing an important role in offshore oil production in the Gulf of Mexico. It is the first transport category helicopter specifically designed for commercial operators.

The helicopter can travel at speeds up to 178 miles per hour for distances of 460 miles. It can climb at a rate of 1,350 feet per minute and fly at 15,000 feet.

These S-76 helicopters are made by Sikorsky Aircraft, a division of United Technologies Corporation. They cost over a million dollars — and the company has already received orders for over 400 of them from 101 operators in 25 countries.

It appears lots of people are high on this new kind of aircraft.

MPIRG Issues Handbook On Tenant Rights

A new updated edition of the tenant's rights handbook has just been released by the Minnesota public interest research group (MPIRG).

Handbook explains state laws and court decisions governing residential rentals including material on notices, deposits, evictions and discrimination. It also includes a model lease as well as a listing of tenant advise centers. Non-legal factors such as inspecting an apartment before moving in are also covered.

"We want the handbook to be a guide for both tenants and landlords to help solve most rental problems" said Jim Grathwol, MPIRG's state chairperson.

The new revision is MPIRG's third since the handbook was first published in 1972. MPIRG, a student-funded and managed consumer and environmental group, publishes other handbooks on subjects such as women's right, conciliation courts and environmental problems.

Plan Workshop On Renewable Energy Ideas

"Renewable Energy and Your Future" is the subject of two days of workshops to be held November 21 and 22 in the Fosston civic center. Value of solar energy and fuel alcohol to farm and rural residents are the chief topics.

The workshops are part of a statewide series being sponsored by the MPIRG-VISTA energy project and the citizen's energy coalition. The Bi-County community action council and the Inter-County community council are providing financial assistance. All are advocacy groups for low income people.

Solar energy is the subject for November 21. John Weber, an experienced solar engineer from Long Prairie, will lead the day's workshop. He will concentrate on: Conservation, the preliminary and necessary step toward effective solar space heating; your south facing wall or making the most of what you have; solar technologies to fit your budget, solar water heaters; and principles of solar grain drying.

Fuel alcohol is the topic for November 22. This workshop will be conducted by Dennis Jackson and Paul Gorman who teach agribusiness mechanics and farm management at the area vocational technical institute in Mankato. Neither are salesmen. Over the past few years Jackson and Gorman have designed one of the most efficient stills in the state.

The information they will share includes basics on how a still works; how alcohol is made with corn, a step-by-step procedure; tractor modifications; how to build the Mankato AVTI vacuum distillation unit; stillage as a livestock feed; and the true economics of alcohol production.

Registration is $3. The workshops will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. both days. To preregister write Tom or Marsha Murphy, Fosston, MN 56542 or call (218) 435-1309.

The Veterans Administration's annual report — a 199-page publication on the nation's 30 million veterans and how the agency serves them — can be obtained by sending $6 to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Fire Chief Gives Ideas For Safer Woodburning

"Once your mind is made up that you would like to install a solid fuel supplemental heating device, check with local dealers in order to determine the size and type that will best meet your needs. When installing this device, we recommend that you follow the directions which should be supplied by the manufacturer," states Thief River Falls fire chief Duane Noel.

"When speaking of placement of stoves, I primarily refer to stoves or free-standing fireplaces, not masonry fireplaces. The appliance should be as centrally located as possible, so as to take advantage of the radiant heat. But, remember — heat rises, so keep stoves away from stair wells, if possible, unless you want to heat the upper level."

Local codes vary as to clearances to be observed in installing a stove. A good "rule of thumb" to follow is: 36 inches away from anything that will burn — meaning walls, ceilings — front, back and both sides, and 18 inches from the floor. This clearance may be reduced if the adjacent material is of brick, concrete, tile, etc.

All free-standing devices should be on a protective pad. Perhaps the most common is a metal-covered asbestos stove board, available in hardware stores. It is recommended that the pad under the stove extend 18 inches beyond the ash removal door at the front or side of the stove.

If you intend to use an existing chimney for your stove, see that it is sound and has a flue lining. If the chimney lacks flue tiles; or if the masonry is cracked, get it repaired. Fire in an unlined or cracked chimney can spread into the house.

If at all possible, see that your stove has its own chimney; a separate chimney is required for open burning appliances. Sometimes two or more heating devices can be hooked to a common chimney flue, but often this will create a problem. If two appliances are on a common flue, they must be manifolded before they enter the flue. If the appliances are not properly installed, trouble may come when flue gases are drawn into the house through an unused opening, or there may be poor draft and creosote accumulation. In addition, be sure all unused openings are plugged.

Your first indication that you have a draft problem is smoke in the house. The chimney should extend at least two feet above the roof line. Puff-backs may be caused by the wind if you are close to a steep hill or a taller building. Dirty chimneys can create blockage by soot build-up, bird nests or fallen masonry.

Usually the problem is creosote and soot build-up. This comes from incomplete combustion. "Let me attempt to explain," Noel said. "Seasoned air-dried wood contains about 20 per cent moisture. Combustion occurs in three stages: in stage one, the moisture is driven off by the heat; in stage two, as the wood heats, gases are driven off — if there is enough oxygen and heat in the fire box, the gas burns; in stage three of combustion, the charcoal burns, leaving ash.

"Creosote is a product of incomplete combustion, when gases are driven off but do not burn. Instead of burning they pass into the chimney. If the chimney is cool, moisture will condense on the inside of chimney walls, depositing what is commonly called 'creosote'. The biggest source of creosote comes from burning green wood and from small fires. This is because a small fire does not burn all the gases, and the chimney is not heated sufficiently to permit complete combustion; therefore, these particles tend to collect inside the chimney. Creosote can run down and stain an enamel stove permanently or a spark from the fire can ignite the creosote, causing a chimney fire," the fire chief said.

To guard against this problem, use well-seasoned wood, preferably hard wood. The drier the wood, the more

Chamber Hosts Seminar On Legislature

Seminar on how the next session of the Minnesota legislature may affect issues of concern to business in the state will be held Thursday at 7:30 a.m. at the Best Western Inn of Thief River Falls.

Co-sponsored by the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce and the Minnesota association of commerce and industry, the seminar will be 90 minutes in length and cost $10, including breakfast. Reservations may be made by calling the chamber of commerce office at 681-3720 and payment may be made at the door on Thursday morning.

Issues to be discussed at the session include transportation, workmen's compensation, unemployment compensation, Minnesota tax structure and other items. Information will also be given on how individuals can affect the outcome of issues being introducted at the 1981 legislative session.

Thief River Falls session is one of 20 begin scheduled throughout the state by the Minnesota association of commerce and industry. Information kits will be distributed and area legislators are being extended special invitations to attend.

Beyers Back In The Barn Again, Happy That The Cows Are Home

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

When a man considers a tornado which destroys his livelihood a blessing, there might be reason to question his mental faculties.

But when the man is Irv Beyer and he explains what he means, there is proof he is not only sane but sensitive as well.

Beyer would be the last person to consider himself a philosopher, but there is depth in thought and perspective when he talks about what has transpired since a July 11 tornado ripped the dairy barn from over his head. The barn has been rebuilt and the operation is getting back to its normal hectic pace.

"No, it's not an economic decision," Beyer insists. "Far from it. From an economic standpoint the odds are all against it. At my age, there are a lot of things I could have done with the money — what little of it was mine — that would be more profitable than rebuilding the barn and staying in dairying. But there are other factors to consider."

Those "other factors" given an insight into the Beyer character.

For one, his son-in-law and daughter, Dennis and Nancy Haglund, and their children are involved in the dairy operation and are looking to a future in farming. Two of the Haglund children, 12-year-old Susy and nine-year-old Steven, were with their grandpa and 13-year-old cousin Paula Peterson in the milking parlor when the tornado struck early that July evening. They huddled in a corner of the milking parlor as the glass pipeline broke and showered down around them.

"I'm a family man at heart," Beyer adds to his list of other factors. "This family has a solid base in dairying, established over a long period of time. This is where the family gathers whenever we get together. It seems like the family, scattered throughout the country, believes there should always be a Beyer farm in Minnesota. And judging by the overwhelming amount of volunteer help and assistance we received, it seems the neighbors are happy to have the family here."

The Beyers can trace their family in Minnesota back to Civil War times and the present farm northwest of Red Lake Falls has been the home farm for about 60 years.

"And there is always a little bit of the fear of the unknown," he adds, indicating that dairying is familiar territory and there is comfort in familiarity.

Beyer said that the entire family is filled with wonder at the display of helpfulness and the spirit of cooperation and togetherness shown by everyone in the community following the tornado. He said they were deluged with cards, expressions of encouragement as well as sympathy for what had happened, and the object of community support and physical help — all of which made day to day living much easier.

Mostly with hired professional labor but with some volunteer help, the barn has been rebuilt on the original foundation. It includes a 120x50 main section, 28x122 "T" section on the north end, and a 64x28 calf barn. Silos were rebuilt and repaired to the extent that there would be forage available to fill them this year. One silo and a machine shed have not been rebuilt.

Some material from the previous barn could be salvaged. There were some sheets of plywood, some dimensional lumber and some metal siding that could be used. The metal was used on the back side of the barn and new siding on the front. Things like the 650-gallon bulk tank and most of the milking equipment except some of the pipes were salvageable. None of the glass globes in the milking parlor or milkhouse was damaged.

During the rebuilding period the Beyer cattle were kept at the Mrs. Jean Beyer farm a mile southeast of the Irv Beyer farm. The herds were kept separate and both owners fed roughage to their own herds. The same feed concentrate was used for feeding both herds to simplify that operation. And the Jean Beyer herd was milked first, calibration on the bulk tank was read and recorded, and then the Irv Beyer herd was milked.

"We were very fortunate to have those other facilities available to us and thankful that we were able to use them," Beyer said.

He doesn't know just how the storm, the change in location and feeding pattern and related stress affected the herd's production. He does know that production is down from normal, but a part of that is likely attributable to the extremely dry year.

"Any dairyman knows that stress affects production," Beyer said, "and it is reasonable that greater stress has a greater effect. Right now it would only be a guess as to what extent production was cut."

Although the barn has been repaired and the cattle are home again, memories of the tornado remain. One reminder walks into the milking parlor twice a day — a cow with a gaping wound on the shoulder which it received in the storm. The gash was too deep to suture and must be allowed to heal from the inside out while it remains open.

It was on the 17th of October

PAUSING FOR POSING after milking their 55 dairy cows one evening are Irv Beyer of Red Lake Falls, his daughter Julie and granddaughter Susy Haglund. The Beyers have rebuilt their dairy operation after a tornado destroyed the barn, silos and other buildings last July. Susy and her grandpa were in the barn when the tornado struck and escaped injury by huddling in the corner of the milking parlor visible under Beyer's right arm in the photo above. Happy to have their cattle back home, the Beyers are convinced the cattle seem more contented as well.

WALKING SPACE was scarce during the fourth annual Holiday Fair conducted at the city auditorium Saturday. Although many shoppers left with armfuls of gifts, many seemed interested in browsing through the assortment of skillfully created items on display throughout the day. As Jeanie Ringwelski, a calligraphy artist from Little Falls said, "Many people just like to browse through the items. But that's enjoyable too. It's fun seeing and visiting with all the people." Pictured in center front of photo is Polly Mathison, a calligraphy artist from Burnsville.

Eggebraaten-Hogenson Vows Spoken At Fisher

Miss Wendy Jean Eggebraaten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenny Eggebraaten of Fisher, became the bride of Marc E. Hogenson of East Grand Forks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hogenson of Thief River Falls, on September 19, at Trinity Lutheran church in Fisher.

Rev. Daniel Hougum officiated at the double-ring, candlelight ceremony before an altar graced with candelabra, greenery and yellow mums. White lace bows marked the pews. Mrs. Tim Wagner was the organist, and Mary Jo Hogenson, Minneapolis, a sister of the groom, was soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a floor-length gown of white organza with Venice lace rosebuds accenting the empire bodice and the ruffled flounce on her full, floor-length skirt. To compliment her attire, she wore a white picture hat, trimmed with Chantilly lace, and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses, white starburst mums, stephanotis and babies' breath, accented with Eucalyptus.

Kristen Eggebraaten, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Stacey Eggebraaten, another sister, Sonja Jorgenson and Marlys Steinwand. They wore rust floor-length gowns and carried bouquets of yellow and bronze mums, accented with babies' breath and eucalyptus.

Attending the groom as best man was Ed Austin, a friend. Groomsmen were Jeff Boyum, Kenny Stevenson, and Mike Hogenson, a brother. The ushers were Tim Eggebraaten and Myles Hogenson, brothers of the bride and groom. To correspond with the bridesmaids' attire, they wore rust tuxedos and yellow starburst boutonnieres. The groom's attire was in all white.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Eggebraaten selected a fall-green gown with a floor-length pleated skirt. The groom's mother wore a rose colored floor-length gown topped by a matching lace jacket. Their corsages featured carnations and yellow and white starburst mums with babies' breath.

Special guests at the wedding were the bride's grandparents, Mrs. Jean Halos of Crookston and Mr. and Mrs. Art Eggebraaten of Fisher, and the groom's grandmother, Mrs. Anna King of Thief River Falls.

The bride's personal attendant was Mrs. Brad Humble. Mrs. Charles Boushey attended the guest book.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. Serving as hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jorgenson and Mr. and Mrs. Lars Wold. Cindy Parkin and Mrs. Dennis Florey presided at the punch bowl.

The four-tiered wedding cake, decorated with yellow roses, was cut and served by Mrs. Clifford Jorde and Mrs. Douglas Hannah. At the coffee service were Mrs. Paul Eggebraaten and Mrs. Tom Tobin.

Gift bearers were Darryl Jorgenson and Carrie Halos; and the waitresses were Brenda Gruhot and Stacey Quern.

Those from a distance attending the wedding were Mrs. Marie O'Hollaren, Seattle, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tobin, Leawood, Kans.; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Joseph Tobin and Shannon of Western Spring, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Armond Lian, Minneapolis and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hogenson, Duluth.

Later in the evening, a wedding dance was held at the Eagles in East Grand Forks.

The couple is now at home in East Grand Forks, where the groom is employed by Farmsco Oil. The bride is employed by H.E. Everson company in Grand Forks.

Ruth Shefveland Gives Flower Arranging Tips

At the November meeting of the Rocksbury homemakers club held recently, Ruth Shefveland gave tips to remember when making arrangements, using either flowers or dried materials. She stated that many of the natural weeds and grasses can be used. While speaking, she demonstrated the making of a fall arrangement. She was introduced by councilor, Evelyn Nelson, who presided at the meeting. The homemakers' lesson on flower arranging was given by Ivadell Reierson.

The meeting was held at the Gloria Johnson home with Mrs. Nelson as co-hostess. The 14 members attending answered roll call by telling what they would like for Christmas. The request given by the majority as the most important was good health for the family.

Member Bea Erickson, who is residing at Oakland Park Nursing home, invited the club members to hold their annual Christmas meeting at the Home on December 1. The members accepted the invitation and made plans for the event, which will include visiting with the residents while serving coffee breads and ice cream. Later the members will assemble in a private room for the club's annual Christmas party and exchanging of gifts. Secret pals will also be revealed. Selected as lunch hostesses were Goldie Breiland, Viola Husby, Inga Geving and Hildur Lian.

Correspondence included invitations to attend the showing of old films November 14 and December 12 at the Northland Community college auditorium, sponsored by the Lone Monk Cinnema; and the natural foods cooking school to be held at the Lincoln high school home economics room, sponsored by the Health Specialities.

The homemaker's creed was read by Gina Gunderson and the door prizes were won by Julia Finstad and Viola Husby. Lunch was served by the hostesses.

Members present, in addition to those already mentioned, were Synneva Engelstad, Gladys Heinze, Audrey Heieren, Dolly Mead and Clara Voldness.

DID YOU KNOW?

The Pig and the Drunkard

Oh, how well do I remember—
It was early in September—
I was walking down the avenue
With pride.
My heart was in a flutter
As I fell down in the gutter,
And a pig walked up and lay down
By my side.
Our hearts were both a-flutter
As we lay there in the gutter,
And a lady passing by was Heard to say:
"You can tell the man who boozes
By the company he chooses,"
And the pig got up and slowly
Walked away.

Hidden Treasures Are Studied At WCTU Meeting

"Hidden Treasures," was the theme of the Alice Mae Stuart Thief River Falls Woman's Christian Temerpance Union meeting held November 7 in the community room at the Riverside Terrace apartments.

Corresponding with the theme was the devotional meditation given by Agnes Longren. She read II Peter 1:1-8, giving the Christian virtues of faith, virtue, knowledge, self control, patience, godliness, kindness and love. She stated that these hidden treasures, found in the Second Letter of Peter, written to the early Christians, promise eternal life. She said, "On Thanksgiving day many will thank the Lord for their blessings. Unfortunately some will only thank Grandmother or Aunt Mary or the waitress for their dinner. Some won't even do that. As we think of the things we in America can be thankful for, we ask ourselves if a nation can cry out for help when the essence of its problems lies in its lack of will to follow God." To stress the affirmative answer she read Lam. 5:21. She concluded by saying, "We have magnified the rights of men and minimized the rights of God. We have heard the Gospel, but as a nation, we have esteemed it lightly. Let us pray, like the psalmist, 'Turn us again, O God of hosts,' for only God can meet our needs as an individual and as a nation."

The meditation began with the singing of "Give to the Winds Thy Fears," and concluded with several individual prayers.

During the business session, members were urged to write to Paul Ziffren, chairman of the Los Angeles Olympic organizing committee, suite 630, 10100 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, CA, 90069, voicing oposition to Annhouser Bush Brewery's wishes to sponsor the olympics.

Mrs. Valborg Hanson read the clipping, "WCTU Alive, its goal nothing less than reinstitution of prohibition," which she had received from her daughter in Indiana. Geneva Overum read the radio releases; Ruth Haugan, "Facts vs. Fiction;" and Hildur Lian read a leaflet written by a Washington, D.C. correspondent, "You Don't Have to Drink."

Members signed cards for Mrs. Marion Green, who is hopsitalized, and Geneva Overum, for her birthday.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Hildur Lian.

The next meeting will be held in December at Valley Home. A Christmas program will be given.

Irv isn't convinced that there is a bright future for agriculture in general, but he is convinced that the Beyer farm has a place in whatever future there is. Much of it is due to the encouragement and support of people who showed that they cared. And because of that demonstration of caring, the Beyers feel their tragedy has been a blessing.

Fire Chief Gives Ideas On Woodburning

heat you gain and the less creosote you form.

Spring and fall are the times when creosote build-up occurs most frequently. If a small fire is needed, people tend to let the fire smolder for long periods, resulting in incomplete combustion. When you don't need much heat, try a quick, short, hot fire. You'll get the heat you need without creosote. If you want to let your fire smolder, clean your pipes and chimney more often.

If all of this sounds complex — in practice it isn't. Like anything else, the ability to operate a wood stove or fireplace improves with experience. By doing it properly, you will have plenty of heat with very little creosote.

If you burn good wood, have an adequate chimney and manage your fire with skill, chimney cleaning should be only an occasional chore.

"Check your chimney and stovepipe at least once a year to see if they require cleaning. If you are new at wood burning or have reason to suspect a soot build-up, check it more frequently," Noel suggested.

It isn't unusual to have a little smoke come into the room as you open the stove door. You can avoid this by opening the draft wide before opening the door. But if your stove begins to smoke increasingly when you open the door to add wood, a chimney blockage may be at fault.

To find out what's wrong, look into the chimney from above or below. You can use a mirror to look up the flue.

When you install your stovepipe, connecting your stove to the chimney, tap it with your fingernail — it will make a "tinging" noise, echoing inside the pipe. Later, if there is a soot build-up, the sound will be a muffled thud, and the stovepipe should be cleaned.

Chimney fires are usually started by allowing a stove or fireplace to get out of hand — by using the stove as a trash burner. Don't ignite large masses of material like paper, excelsior, twigs or plastic, and let the flames go up the chimney with the draft wide open.

If you have a chimney fire call the fire department. If the fire fighters don't arrive quickly, close any drafts that supply oxygen.

The National Fire Protection association reports that a chimney fire "can usually be controlled and possibly extinguished by dumping a large quantity of coarse salt on the fire". Another way is to discharge a dry chemical fire extinguisher up the chimney. Use water only as a last resort, because it could crack your flue. Then use a spray nozzle on your hose. But, above all — call your fire department first!!

Briefly, to recap, burn dry, well-seasoned wood; preferably season it a year to 18 months. The "moral" is — don't burn green wood. Green wood is heavier; it looks different — experience will tell you. Seasoned wood most often will show cracks radiating from the heartwood toward the bark, like wheel spokes. Green wood won't show this pattern of cracks.

Before starting a fire in a stove, cover the bottom with an inch of ashes or sand. This protects the floor and the bottom plate from extremes of heat.

To start a fire, place a small pile of paper and kindling in the front of your fire box. Place heavier wood on the kindling. Light near the front of the paper. The draft will draw flame from the paper through the kindling, igniting it.

Don't do anything that will cause sudden sharp changes in the temperature of cast iron, such as throwing cold water on a hot stove. It will crack.

Never use gasoline, kersene, charcoal starter or similar liquids to start a fire.

Dispose of ashes in a metal can and store it outdoors two feet away from anything that will burn. If you have a garden, this is a good place to dispose of them, in limited amount.

If you do have a creosote or soot build-up in your chimney, have it cleaned by a professional. This service is available in our area. You can remove some of the build-up by placing lengths of chains — like tire chains — in a burlap bag. Secure the bag on a rope, running it up and down the inside of the chimney. To prevent this soot from coming into the house, close the damper and doors. If it's a fireplace, tape a covering over the fireplace opening.

Things to remember — why wood heat is a hazard:

(1) Wood burns at a higher temperature than gas or oil;

(2) Firebox temperature can approach 2,000 degrees farenheit;

(3) Most wood stoves do not have automatic controls;

(4) Wood requires a chimney that can resist the higher temperatures and a possible chimney fire;

(5) Wood stoves are very hot; children are exposed to hot surfaces (and so are nearby combustibles);

(6) Wood produces creosote, which causes chimney fires;

(7) Wood heat requires a lot of attention; and

(8) Wood ashes require safe handling and disposal.

NCC To Offer New Two-Year Career Program

Beginning this winter quarter, December 1, Northland community college will be offering a career program for therapeutic recreation technicians.

Therapeutic recreation is concerned with providing opportunities for recreation to people with physical, mental, emotional and social handicaps. Therapeutic recreators work with older people in nursing homes, with long-term hospital patients and with physically, emotionally and handicapped children and adults in a variety of settings.

Northland community college 90 credit associate degree program focuses on specialized courses in therapeutic recreation plus courses in specialized therapeutic knowledge and skills. Students in the two-year program will also take various general education courses in science, psychology, health, physical education and communication.

Laurie Axtman, a recent graduate from the University of North Dakota, will be employed by Northland to inaugurate the new program.

Because the therapeutic recreator is one of the newest members of the health care team, specialists in the field are much in demand. Employment opportunities are particularly good in nursing homes and other long-term care facilities.

Anyone interested in a Therapeutic Recreation program is encouraged to contact Northland community college by phone (681-2181) or visit the college campus.

Dear friends,

Impressive medical advances involve the transplanting of tissue and organs from one person to another, such as eye cornea, heart, and kidney. Some people feel that offering parts of their bodies to help those still living is a special way of sharing. Such plans should be made in advance by the donor.

Juniors Lead 1st Honor Roll At Newfolden

Eleventh grade at Marshall county central school at Newfolden led the first quarter honor roll by placing 20 class members — 54 per cent of the 37-member class — on the scholastic honor roll, according to Dave Kragness, principal.

Seniors at the school had the second largest number on the honor roll — 18 of 44 for 40.9 per cent — but the seventh grade was second in percentage with 13 of 28 for 46.4 per cent.

Honor students are listed on a scale of 2.67 (B-) to 4.00 (A) with extra honor points given for advanced mathematics and science classes which would permit a student to have more than a 4.00 average. For the entire six grades at Marshall county central, 91 students out of 232 enrolled made the honor roll for a percentage of 39.2, Kragness said.

Honor students by grade include the following:

Fuel Cut-Off Illegal During Cold Months

"I used to enjoy that first snowfall of the winter," said Rose, 66, a widow and life-long Minnesota resident. "But now winter's onset makes me worry. I wonder, how will I pay my heating bills? What will happen to me if I can't?"

Because increasing numbers of persons share Rose's fears, the Minnesota public utilities commission issued the "cold weather rule" to prevent wintertime home-heating shut-offs for persons unable to pay heating bills, or able to pay only in installments. The Minnesota public service commission (SC) is responsible for enforcing this rule.

Home-heating customers of a regulated Minnesota utility who worry about meeting their bills, should make financial plans before they face a shut-off. To do this, they should be knowledgeable about the new rule. It says the utility must give all new customers a "plain language" description of the rule, notifying them of their right to name another person who would receive advance notice of their potential shut-off. Between October 15 and April 15 the service cannot be shut off. However, if they are unable to pay the bill or can pay only in installments, a certain process must take place.

First, the utility must notify the customer and the other person named of the potential disconnection. The notice must include a statement of the customer's rights, a list of possible sources of financial help for making heating payments, and a postage-paid form on which to reply that the customer is unable to pay.

Fuel customers have at least seven working days to return the form. Without such response, the service can be shut off. If such a response is made, the utility company must try to arrange a reasonable payment plan related to the circumstances.

If the utility company disagrees with the statement that the customer cannot pay the bill, it can appeal to the PSC, but it must also give notice of this appeal to the local welfare and human service agencies which provide fuel assistance. If such an appeal is made, the PSC will determine the inability to pay. Until that PSC decision occurs, the customer cannot be forced to enter into a payment plan, nor can service be disconnected. (If the PSC finds the customer is able to pay, service could be interrupted. If the PSC agrees the customer does not have the ability to pay, service can't be disconnected in the cold weather season.)

If customer and the utility are negotiating a payment plan but can't agree on what is "reasonable," the customer has seven working days to appeal to the PSC for a hearing on which both sides would be heard. The PSC would then decide what is a "reasonable" amount as related to individual circumstances. The customer will need to give proof of income, or lack of it. (In this appeal, as in the one previously described, a PSC decision will occur within 30 days of filing the appeal, and shut-offs cannot occur before that decision is made.)

Any person in a payment plan who can't make the payments, should notify the utility company, asking to adjust the payments according to his or her present financial circumstances.

Persons who receive a shut-off notice between October 15 and April 15 have a right to enter a payment plan, and persons whose service was disconnected before that period may, at their request, be reconnected at the start of the heating season if they are willing to agree to a "reasonable repayment schedule."

Utilities have broad freedom in establishing payment schedules and advance deposits for reconnections, yet such demands must be "reasonable" and related to the customers' circumstances. Since the PSC has not begun to decide what is a "reasonable" payment and-or deposit when an unpaid balance is involved, any person who cannot pay the required amount should make a complaint to the PSC. PSC decisions on such matters can occur only when such complaints are made.

Crookston To Host Seminar On Sunflowers

Two principal speakers with differing backgrounds will address the subject of current and future economic status of sunflower production and marketing at the second annual sunflower breakfast seminar Thursday morning (November 20) in Crookston. Conference will open with a free breakfast at 7 a.m. in the Best Western motor inn banquet facility.

Theme of the seminar this year is "Dollars and Sense: Sunflower Economics in Domestic and Foreign Markets." Issue will be examined from several, often divergent, perspectives by featured presenters with credentials in public (government) administration, academic circles, international trade, and farm produce marketing.

Keynoter will be Dr. G. Edward Schuh, professor and head of the department of agricultural and applied economics at the University of Minnesota in St. Paul. Prior to assuming his present post in 1979, Schuh was deputy under secretary for international affairs and commodity programs for the U.S. department of agriculture. His teaching experience in higher education also includes a 20-year appointment (1959-78) in agricultural economics at Purdue university.

Second speaker, Sam Browman, will examine the seminar topic from the standpoint of projected shipping conditions of sunflowers to foreign markets. Browman, a Minnesota native from the Bertha area, is manager of trade development for the Seaway Port Authority of Duluth. He joined the port authority in September of 1988 after a 22-year career in the nation's railroad industry. His last previous position was with the Rock Island Railroad in that system's marketing and sales department.

Guest of honor at the seminar will be Robert Schuler of Breckenridge. Schuler will receive the seminar sponsor's second annual Valley Pioneer award. Each year the planning committee for the event selects an executive within the Red River Valley sunflower industry who has been a leader for many years in promoting sunflower production in the region. Last year's recipient of the first Pioneer Trophy was Clark E. Dahlgren, former president of Dahlgren & Co. sunflower processing firm in Crookston.

Ed Ross, farm director of KROX radio station in Crookston, will be master of ceremonies for the morning program.

Miss Sunflower Bowl for 1980-81, Corey Holt, a senior at Grand Forks Central high school, will assist in bestowing "top grower" awards. A total of 18 area farmers have been nominated by their respective seed dealers. Sunflower pins and certificates of excellence will be presented to these top producers of high-yield sunflower crops.

Recipients this year are, in alphabetical order, A.C. (Curt) Borgen, of rural Moorhead, Bruce Brovold, Trail; Wayne Capistran, Crookston; Raymond Dahl, Felton; Norman Dufault, Crookston; Everett Flesche, St. Hilaire; Alfred Holzbauer, Jr., a double nominee from Breckenridge; and Marvin Klevberg, Northwood, N.D. Other outstanding growers to be recognized are — Jerome Knutson, Red Lake Falls; James Link, Moorhead; Robert H. Peterson, Breckenridge; John Rice, Maddock, N.D.; Ed Ross, Fisher; John Sweeney, Manvel, N.D.; Elliott Thorssen, Gully; and Merrill Triebold, Valley City, N.D.

Col. Sommers Gets Andrew Craigie Award

Association of military surgeons of the United States presented the 1980 Andrew Craigie award to Col. George A. Sommers, chief of Walter Reed Army Medical Center's Pharmacy Service, at their 87th annual meeting conducted recently at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D.C.

A native of Warren, Sommers received his bachelor of science degree in pharmacy and a master's degree in hospital pharmacy at the North Dakota state university in Fargo, N.D. Mrs. Sommers is the daughter of Adolph Kleinvachter of Thief River Falls.

Award is given annually for outstanding accomplishments towards the advancement of professional pharmacy within the federal government. It is named for Andrew Craigie, the first apothecary general of the military forces who served under George Washington during the Revolutionary war. For his contributions, Col. Sommers received a silver plaque and an honorarium of $500. He is the first practicing pharmacist in the army to receive this award.

On December 1 Sommers will become the consultant in pharmacy to the surgeon general, United States army.

Pork Producer Group To Meet Thursday Night

Northern Minnesota pork producers will resume their monthly meeting schedule on Thursday at 8 p.m. in the American Legion club rooms in Thief River Falls. Officers and directors will meet at 7 p.m. before the regular meeting.

Association president Robert Fincher of Viking indicated there will be a very important program on marketing. "A close look at your marketing program can make the difference between profit and loss or could even influence whether or not you stay in business during this cost-price squeeze," Fincher said.

Marketing alternatives and price outlook will be discussed by area extension agent Bill Penning and county extension director Terry Courneya. They will use a cost and cash flow budget planning example that should greatly assist producers in planning their farrowing and marketing strategies for the year ahead.

EPA Panel Supports Use Of Lindane

Scientific advisory panel for the environmental protection agency has recommended the continued use of the chemical Lindane as a seed treatment. The EPA had originally recommended that the chemical, which is used to control wireworm infestation, be banned. The scientific advisory panel's decision has been applauded by the Minnesota association of wheat growers as "very good news for farmers."

Rick Baird, a farmer from Red Lake Falls and a member of the national association of wheat growers chemical committee, testified before the advisory panel in August. In his statement, he explained how Lindane is used and its importance in improving wheat yields. He told the panel that studies show that banning of Lindane as a seed treatment, with no known substitute, could reduce yields by as much as four bushels per acre.

Baird also described to the panel members the precautions taken by farmers in using closed application systems and protective clothing while using Lindane to minimize the risk of exposure. He recommended that the EPA "first seek to improve safety standards relative to clothing and equipment, rather than propose an outright ban."

Transcript of the proceedings released after the hearing indicates that the scientific panel placed a great deal of weight on Baird's statement in reaching its decision. In making its recommendation, the panel indicated that "seed treatment uses of Lindane should be continued under restricted classification by certified operators with full warning labels and mandatory protective clothing proposed by EPA. Testimony presented to the panel suggests that 90 per cent of Lindane seed treatments are made with closed mechanical systems that essentially eliminate operator exposure. EPA should sponsor an educational program to make the use of such closed mechanical seed treatment systems universal."

According to Baird, the EPA does not have to accept the scientific advisory panel's recommendation, but it is believed they will.

Enrollment At All-Time High At University

Student enrollments in Minnesota's seven four-year state universities have reached an all-time high of 41,361.

Total appropriation from the Legislature for instruction in the university system is the same as it was in 1976-77.

These two facts signal problems ahead.

President David L. Simpson of the Inter Faculty Organization (the 2,000-member faculty association affiliated with the Minnesota Education Association (MEA) explains:

"The chancellor of the state university system sold the 1977 Legislature on a plan wherein funding would remain at the 1976-77 levels during what he called 'a temporary enrollment bulge'. This bulge was expected to run through the early '80s. It now appears that the bulge could continue until 1987-88."

Record enrollment trend began in 1974-75, Simpson says, indicating widespread acceptance of the quality of education in the state universities; however, there's a problem.

"Everyone concerned," he emphasizes, "should be aware that we cannot continue to provide quality program for a steadily increasing number of students with frozen appropriations. This year, enrollment is more than 3,700 above that of 1976-77. Appropriations — except for minor inflation-related adjustments — are the same as in 1976-77. Actually, in real dollars, appropriations are down — significantly."

Seven universities are in Bemidji, Mankato, Marshall (Southwest State University), Moorhead, St. Cloud, St. Paul (Metropolitan State University), Winona.

Yellow, Amber, Red Driveway Reflectors Out

For safety's sake, use only white (colorless) or blue colored reflectors on each side to mark driveway entrances, says Commissioner Richard P. Braun, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Red, amber or yellow colored reflectors are not permitted because such colors resemble motor vehicle tail lights and could be confusing to an approaching motorist, he explained. Reflectors should not be used on roadside mailboxes or posts either.

Braun recommends using double-faced white or blue reflectors that are clearly visible from both directions on the highway. Installation should be no closer than 10 feet from the edge of the road shoulder. Square or circular reflectors about three inches in width can be used and are easily visible when placed at a height of four or five feet above the road surface.

Reduced Services Favored

We recall a candidate during the recent election campaign who said he was amazed at how conservative candidates of every party become when they are running for office. His point was that it is popular to be critical of government spending and high taxes, but that the actions in office often believe the professed concern of a campaign.

If there was no clear-cut message in the way Minnesotans voted in the November 4 election, it was probably because the candidates professed many of the same beliefs and concerns, regardless of their party affiliation. There was certainly a message in the Minneapolis Tribune's recent "Minnesota Poll".

In that poll, 1,200 adult Minnesotans were asked to consider how to bridge the gap between the state's income and expenses. By a margin of more than two to one, a majority preferred cutting services to raising taxes. In the part of the state that metropolitan dwellers like to refer to as the "outstate", cutting services was favored by as much as four to one.

Commenting on the opinion expressed in the poll, publisher Bob Johnson of the Wadena Pioneer-Journal states the following:

It's easy for the legislators to tell us inflation is the villain. But our opinion is that government is the villain and the cause of inflation. But who is government? It's our elected representatives, the people we chose to watch out for our welfare. And these are the same people we should tell, in no uncertain terms, that we're fed up with inflation.

The men and women in the legislature don't like to see people hurt by high prices and high taxes. Still, many keep right on spending. Why? By providing things some of their constituents want, they enhance their popularity. But that's poor management.

What's the cure? A long range, concerted effort by state government to reduce spending. A two per cent across-the-board reduction has been suggested for the federal government for each of the next three years. We believe a similar effort should be made at the state level, instead of the better than 17 per cent increase Gov. Quie is advocating for the next biennium.

But state government, like the federal, won't act unless you force it to. So write or telephone the men and women who represent you in St. Paul. Your letter doesn't have to be long. Something as simple as "I'm fed up with Minnesota's high taxes. Reduce state spending." They'll get the message.

No Butts About It

Smokers around the country are encouraged to take a day off from their habit on November 20. The hope for sponsors of the no-smoking day is that it will provide the impetus for many cigarette puffers to kick the habit for good.

Last year 15 million people participated in the attempt and a third succeeded in not smoking for a 24-hour period. One to three days later, a Gallup poll determined, 2.3 million still weren't smoking. This year the American Cancer society expects more than seven million smokers to quit for at least the day.

To help area people give up the cigarette habit, a five-day plan to stop smoking started last night at Northwestern hospital. It has been a few years since such a program has been held here and for those who need an added boost to stay away from cigarettes it might be just what a smoker needs.

Researchers at the UCLA school of medicine's neuropsychiatric institute say that the best way to quit smoking is to simply stop — once and for all — instead of trying to taper off. The five-day plan advocates a decision to stop smoking, then provides helps for people not to start again.

"In theory, tapering off makes sense," the UCLA researchers say. "It is consistent with sound behavioral principles and is the method of choice in treating other drug habits. But in practice, smokers who try to give up a little bit at a time seem to suffer more than those who quit cold turkey."

The researchers speculate that by continuing to smoke while trying to stop, smokers merely perpetuate such withdrawal symptoms as inability to concentrate, increased irritability, aggression, anxiety and a severe craving for tobacco that seems to be most powerful around 7 p.m.

The craving lasts for about two weeks, they say, and is probably the major reason that three out of four efforts to stop smoking fail.

Smoking is not only a health problem, it is a financial burden as well. In New Jersey a man and wife were sentenced on charges of welfare fraud, and the sentence included attendance at a five-day plan to stop smoking. Martin and Loretta Gandy pleaded guilty to obtaining $550 in food stamps while receiving aid over a period of four months, but had failed to report to the welfare board and unemployment compensation checks they also had received.

Asked why he had made this misrepresentation, Gandy reportedly told the judge, "Because if I didn't, my wife and two children would have starved."

But investigation showed that during the four-month period the Gandys had smoked six packs of cigarettes a day between them and spent $540 for cigarettes. Nicotine is poor nutrition.

If you think you should quit smoking sometime, why not on November 20. . . and November 21. . . and November 22. . . and. . . You'll be better off without cigarettes — no butts about it.

Extremists Get Bolder

Following editorial is from the Bemidji Pioneer:

The kooks have, of course, always been with us, small-minded people eager at any opportunity to peddle their wares of racism and anti-semitism and religious dogma.

But they have not been particularly obtrusive in recent years, having found little sympathy for their hatreds and keeping, for the most part, to their subterranean depths.

This is changing. They are becoming bolder, more open. There is a resurgence of the KKK and neo-Nazi organizations. There is a new visibility, a new campaign.

More frightening, the broader, deep-seated feelings of anti-semitism and racism are finding a new voice, and the appearance of new strength, among those who would have nothing to do with those imfamous organizations.

And we, in the Bemidji area, are not immune to it, for its presence is evident in such things as the mail we receive, an increase of "hate mail," a sudden venting of hostilities and frustrations that would urge a return to earlier, darker days.

Have these extremists found hope and new vigor in the conservatism that has swept the country? Do they seek tha same acceptability that the so called "Moral Majority" has seemingly found? Are we in a period of regression that will allow the return of such prejudices and hatreds?

It is an illusion, though a dangerous one. It is an attempt to couple the pettiest and meanest qualities of the old extreme right with a shift in political ideology that has nothing to do with any of those qualities. Conservatism is not synonymous with retrogression. The old civil rights battles will not have to be fought anew. Whether conservative or liberal in our political views, we remain committed to fair treatment and opportunities not based on race or sex or religion.

But we have opened a door. We probably did it by listening so much to Jerry Falwell and his "Moral Majority," for they are as narrow minded as the others and more dangerous because of their acceptability.

It may now have to run its course, and there may even be benefits to that, for it will at least be in the open rather than restlessly stirring in our murky depths. Being before us, we can deal with it, and we must.

We cannot, for example, allow it to find entrance into our schools — though some would have it there. It cannot remain unchallenged, least the lie take on an aura of truth. It must be recognized as having elements, however suppressed, in all of us.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Teacher: "If a farmer sells 4,700 bushels of wheat for $7.50 a bushel, what will he get?

Farm Kid: "Probably a new pickup."

Modern merchandising is when you hear somebody say: "You're all out of cigarettes, eggs, cheese and bread? What kind of a gas station is this?"

If you tell a man there are 300 billion stars in the universe, he'll believe you. But if you tell him a bench has just been painted, he has to touch it to be sure.

BSU President Shares Views On University

Calling for Bemidji state university to rise as "a top rank, small university" which will offer high quality, relevant academic programs over the coming decade, Dr. Rebecca Stafford was recently inaugurated as the northern Minnesota school's fifth president. Stafford, who was selected as BSU's top administrative officer last January, assumed responsibilities on campus in April.

In an inaugural address entitled "The Fallacies and Realities of Higher Education," the new president enumerated three major misconceptions frequently imposed on university management and academic structure: Bigger is better; more vocational training will attract students and give them a competitive edge in the labor market; education can be quantified and measured.

In addition to underscoring the need to combat these fallacies as they relate to Bemidji state university, Stafford detailed emphasis areas key to the university's future. Balanced curriculum was one such objective.

"Every student should learn the basic skills of reading, writing, speaking and mathematics, the appreciation of great literature, art, philosophy, the heritage of Western civilization and the nature of man's global community," she said. "We must see that the students are exposed to the methods and context of each branch of learning. We must teach them to work, teach them to think, teach them responsible criticism, teach them to understand and appreciate beauty and truth.

"We must instill in our students a commitment to the life of the mind and insist that they exercise their intellects as never before. It is important that every course in our university requires the development of the students' critical faculties, that every course teaches them the discipline of the intellect, that every course relates the specific material of the subject matter to the theories and assumptions of the discipline, that no course be simply a cookbook exercise in how to succeed without really trying," Stafford stated.

Prior to her appointment as president of Bemidji state university, Dr. Stafford served at the University of Nevada, Reno as dean of the college of arts and science from 1977 to 1980, following a three-year term as professor and chairperson of the department of sociology. She served as an associate professor of sociology at the University of Nevada from 1970 to 1974.

Cambridge was the site of Stafford's formal education, which includes a bachelor of arts degree, magna cum laude, from Racliffe college and both master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees from Harvard university. She has been elected to membership in the honorary scholarly societies Phi Kappa Phi and Phi Beta Kappa.

Farm Diversity Contributes To Area Stability

Size and diversification of the agricultural sector in the Upper Midwest has contributed to the overall stability and prosperity of the region's economy, according to an article in Northwest Bancorporation's (Banco) recently released third quarter report to shareholders.

"By avoiding the pitfalls historically associated with an over-reliance on one agricultural commodity, Banco's territory has enjoyed a greater measure of protection from the normal cyclical swings of the farm industry," stated the essay, "Agriculture: A Diversified Regional Industry."

High degree of agricultural diversification is one reason why net farm income in Banco's seven-state region amounted to $7.1 billion in 1979, more than 25 per cent of the U.S. total. The states include Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Montana, Iowa and Nebraska.

"In spite of the enormous dimensions of the region's agricultural economy, it is a mistake to think of agriculture as a single industry that responds predictably to the same set of prevailing conditions at any given moment," the Banco article stated. "In reality, agriculture in the Upper Midwest consists of a broad range of separate industries with varying degrees of dependence on each other."

About two-thirds of total cash receipts in Banco's seven-state region are currently generated by sales of livestock and livestock products, with the remaining one-third resulting from sales of crops.

But not all states follow this pattern, noted the essay. In 1978 sales of crop commodities accounted for more than 70 per cent of North Dakota's total cash receipts — the opposite from the overall regional pattern. Also, cash receipts for Minnesota and Montana were almost equally divided between crop and livestock marketings.

In addition, annual net farm income and cash receipts for each of the seven states rarely move in tandem. In fact, it is not unusual to see one state's farm income increasing during a year when total regional income is declining, according to the essay.

The region's farmers also play a leading role in national agricultural markets, the essay affirmed, adding that this seven-state region accounted for nearly one-third of national total sales of livestock and related products in 1978. During that year, farm operators in this area generated 47 per cent of total U.S. sales of hogs and about 30 per cent each of all dairy products and all cattle and calves.

The region's receipts from all crop commodities, the article continued, amounted to one-fifth of the national total in 1978, including 99 per cent of all U.S. sunflowers, 40 per cent of all corn, 38 per cent of all wheat, and 25 per cent of all soybeans.

Most Arthritis Patients Employ Care Of Self

Who takes care of people with arthritis? The people with arthritis, that's who, according to the Arthritis foundation.

A foundation spokesman observed that most arthritis patients see their doctors regularly. But between visits, as day follows day, it's the patient who must take the prescribed medication on time, get the proper rest and exercise, and scrupulously follow the doctor's instructions. It's right in the home, he went on, that arthritis care is either good or bad.

Arthritis foundation has found — and most physicians agree — that the arthritis patient who is best able to control the disease is one who has a good understanding of arthritis. The foundation has published a 32 page booklet, 'Arthritis: The Basic Facts', that provides general information about many kinds of arthritis and about arthritis care. Free copies may be obtained by calling the foundation's toll-free number, 1-800-552-1278.

Services of the Arthritis foundation are made possible in most Minnesota communities with the support of the United Fund.

Mailbox Design Plan Available From Mn/DOT

Minnesota department of transportation has developed two standard mailbox installations which are recommended for use along rural roads. The use of either of these designs can speed up mail delivery, minimize damage by snowplowing and allow plowing equipment to do a better job of clearing snow. This can result in a cost savings in mail delivery as well as in road maintenance.

Two installation designs utilize a wood post or steel pipe and are simple, durable and inexpensive. Persons planning to replace their present mailbox or install a new box are urged to contact the Mn-DOT office in Bemidji (755-3800) or Crookston (281-3503) for a free plan.

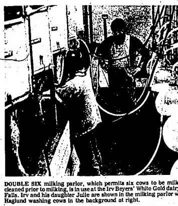
PIPELINE WASH-UP is automated at the Irv Beyer dairy farm northwest of Red Lake Falls. Here Beyer attaches milker hoses to the system which will wash, rinse and disinfect the lines automatically.



DOUBLE SIX milking parlor, which permits six cows to be milked while six more are being cleaned prior to milking, is in use at the Irv Beyers' White Gold dairy farm northwest of Red Lake Falls. Irv and his daughter Julie are shown in the milking parlor with Irv's granddaughter Susy Haglund washing cows in the background at right.

MERRY MILKMAID is Susy Haglund, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Haglund, who assists her grandfather Irv Beyer and aunt Julie Beyer with the milking at the Beyer dairy farm northwest of Red Lake Falls. Susy, her nine-year-old brother Steven and cousin Paula Peterson of Dilworth were in the Beyer barn with their grandfather when a tornado destroyed the building July 11.

EAGER EATER is this cat in the Irv Beyer dairy barn as it ignores the tickle of the trickle to lap up its lunch. Removal of the hose connecting the pipeline milk transfer system to the bulk tank allows the small quantity of milk to escape.

HAPPY TO BE BACK in his own barn where his cattle feel at home is dairyman Irv Beyer of rural Red Lake Falls. Beyer decided to rebuild his dairy barn after a July 11 tornado largely because of the encouragement he received from family and friends. Somewhat overwhelmed by the extent and volume of support and assistance the family received, Beyer says the tragedy of the tornado turned out to be a blessing.

AUTOMATION makes handling 55 dairy cows a lot easier on the Irv Beyer dairy farm. Julie Beyer is shown at the controls of the automatic door opener which permits cattle to enter the milking parlor from the loose housing area.

MN. Tax Burden Rises 9.5 Per Cent In 1979

Minnesota's per capita state and local tax burden increased 9.5 per cent in fiscal year 1979, which is lower than the 11.9 per cent inflation rate, but still higher than the average increase of 5.2 per cent witnessed in the rest of the nation.

The $1,096 per capita burden places the state eighth highest in the nation — one rank higher than our ninth position in 1978. Minnesotans retain their position as the highest taxed people in the Midwest. Michigan had the second highest burden in the region with $1,050 per capita, placing that state 12th highest in the national rankings. Neighboring Wisconsin ranks 14th highest with $1,021 per capita.

The lower, national average increase in 1979 widens the tax burden gap between Minnesota and the rest of the nation. Minnesota's per capita burden was 13 per cent higher than the average in 1978, compared with 17 per cent higher than the $933.74 average in 1979.

According to Don Paterick, executive director of the Minnesota Taxpayers association, (MTA), "Minnesota's advance from ninth to eighth highest position in the overall tax rankings is due to California's implementation of Proposition 13. California dropped from fourth highest in 1978 to 10th highest in 1979, which pushed Minnesota and four other states up one rank. California was the only state to show a drop in the total tax burden. The per capita amount dropped 14 per cent."

State-by-state tax burden figures, based on U.S. department of commerce data, are for tax collections for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1979. The data is included in a brochure which will be sent to the MTA's members. The brochure breaks down the tax burden according to type of tax, both on a per capita basis and per $1,000 of personal income, and includes data on total state and local expenditures.

In specific areas of taxation, Minnesota's property tax ranking remained at 23rd highest. The per capita burden was $311.10 in 1979 which was only a 3.4 per cent rise since 1978, however, the national average decreased 3.1 per cent.

Paterick again emphasized the Proposition 13 effect on the rankings. "California literally plummeted in property taxes; the state fell from third highest to 28th; the per capita burden dropped 46 per cent. Maryland was the only other state that showed a decline in the dollar amount. Statistics clearly show California's impact on the national average. This average has increased every year for at least the last 20 years.

"We would have expected Minnesota's ranking to edge below the 23rd spot," Paterick continued, "based on the $165 million property tax relief package passed by the 1977 Legislative Session. However, the bulk of this relief was in the property tax refund (circuit breaker) program. Department of commerce does not include circuit breaker payments in their definition of "net" property taxes. If the $79.5 million in homeowner relief had been included, Minnesota's per capita amount would have been $295, as opposed to the reported $311 per capita. All other factors remaining constant, Minnesota's ranking would have dropped from 23rd to 25th."

In other areas of taxation, Minnesota's individual income tax ranking moved from fifth to third highest. The $309.36 per capita burden compares with a $170.41 U.S. average per capita. It should be noted that the 15 per cent rise in the per capita individual income tax collections does not reflect Minnesota's enactment of indexing, which became effective for income earned in calendar year 1979. The corporate income tax ranking moved from fifth to fourth highest in 1979. The $87.87 per capita burden compares with a $60.34 national average per capita, and represents a 20 per cent rise from $73.07 per capita in 1978.

Not to be outdone, the sales ranking edged up from 37th to 35th. The per capita amount increased 12 per cent which reflects inflation and increased sales. Minnesota's $149.75 per capita burden compares with a national average of $184.39.

Per capita spending by the state and local governments showed a 6.8 per cent rise. This places the state 12th highest in spending, which is a drop from ninth highest in 1978. The state's per capita government spending of $1,651.09 is 11 per cent above the $1,481.26 per capita national average.

Expenditures for education account for 36 per cent of the total or $591 per capita. Minnesota ranks 17th highest in spending for total education, and 16th highest in the nation in expenditures for local schools. In 1978 Minnesota ranked eighth highest in local school expenditures. Public welfare is the second largest expenditure item with $232.26 per capita. This is 26 per cent above the national average and 10th highest in the nation. Expenditures for highways was third highest with $190.35 per capita. This is 13th highest in the nation and 47 per cent above the U.S. average. State and local expenditure areas where Minnesota ranked below the national average were in airports, police and fire protection, and corrections. State ranked "average" in expenditures for public buildings, health, and hospitals.

CHARCOAL PORTRAITS by Marvin Espe of Roseau, attracted many "models" as well as spectators to his display area Saturday in the Thief River Falls city auditorium during the fourth annual Holiday fair. Born near Roseau, Espe was an artist for Josten's at Owatonna for 12 years.

CLIFFORD MATHY'S ORIGINALS described the work of Clifford and Joan Mathy's original wood furniture and home accessories displayed at the city auditorium Saturday during the fourth annual Holiday fair. "I've always liked working with wood," Mathy exclaimed during a short interview Saturday. In 1936 Mathy received $25 for drawing the plans for the first sectional davenport in the United States, he said. At that time, a family in Indiana built a circular home and discovered they could not find living room furniture to fit into it, he said. It was at that time that Mathy's skill came into use. "When I die, I want our kids to have my furniture in their homes," the retired special education instructor from Ray, MN said. "I've made them something every year. I'm scratching my head now as to what to make them next year. Just the other day my granddaughter came up to me and suggested that a set of bunk beds would be nice — for her and her brother. 'And Grandpa,' she said, 'do you think you could throw in a ladder too so that I can get up to my bed'?"

Northland Teams Improved

Basketball and hockey teams at Northland community college may present some of the best entertainment of the 1980-81 season for Thief River Falls sports fans.

Northland basketball team, which hasn't had a losing season since 1972-73, will be in position to win its sixth Northwest Division title in the past eight years. The Northmen, led by 6-6 sophomore Terry Harris, figure to improve on last year's 17-9 finish.

And Harris figures to improve on a superb 1979-80 season that saw him average 27.8 points and 14.4 rebounds per game. The Dearborne Heights, Mich. product was named Northland's most valuable player; earned all-division honors; was named to the MJCAA all-state team; and was selected as an NJCAA all-Region 13 pick. He is being touted as an NJCAA All-American in 1980-81, status given to Northland's legendary David Dickey in both 1974 and 1975.

Northland hockey team hasn't had near the kind of success enjoyed by the school's basketball team, struggling through seven straight losing seasons, including an 0-18 finish in 1979-80.

But interest in the Northland hockey program has picked up and first-year head coach Tom Goddard might be able to come up close to matching a 14-9-1 mark by the 1972-73 Northmen that stands as the school's best hockey record.

Like the basketball team, the Northland hockey team has an All-American candidate this winter in Bruce Salmela of Warroad, who had a WCHA career at Michigan Tech interrupted last winter because of an injury.

The Northmen could be the surprise team in the MJCAA hockey conference this winter.

Miscellaneous

+Pat Surface, a former Grand Rapids high school basketball star, has been named head basketball coach at Itasca community college in that city. Surface was an all-conference high school player, an MJCAA all-state performer at Itasca and an all-conference selection the past two years at Mayville State.

+Junior ends Mike Hutchinson and Todd Jorgenson have been elected co-captains of the 1981 Detroit Lakes high school football team. Senior Greg Johnson was named the most valuable offensive back and most improved player on the 1980 Detroit Lakes team that dropped a 32-21 decision to Thief River Falls.

+Troy Hendricks, Eric Bakke and Steve Zachman were named Tri-captains of the 1981 Bemidji high school football team. Jim Cleveland, an offensive lineman, was named the most valuable player on the 1980 Bemidji team at the Lumberjacks' post-season banquet.

+Twenty-one of the 22 starting positions on the 1980 Crookston high school football team were manned by seniors who posted a 43-4 record since the group first started playing together as eighth graders. This year's Crookston seniors were unbeaten. Eighth graders, freshmen and sophomores, went 7-4 as juniors when they reached the 1979 Class A state playoff semifinals and finished 13-0 this year, climaxed by Friday's 32-6 Class A state playoff championship game victory over Pipestone.

+Southern Division champion Rochester defeated Northern Division winner Golden Valley Lutheran 25-14 Saturday in the 1980 Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) state football playoff game at Macalester college in St. Paul. The Royals, who defeated Northland community college 43-0 in the final game of the 1980 regular season to clinch the Northern Division pennant, have won 25 straight regular season games and have come up with three division titles in the past four years. But they've never won a post-season playoff game. Southern Division teams have a decided 9-3 edge over the Northern Division in the 12-year history of the series.

Arctic Cat Beginning 15th Year Of Snowmobile Racing

Arctic Cat will celebrate its 15th year of snowmobile racing when the world snowmobile racing federation begins the 1980-81 Sno Pro racing season Dec. 6-7 in Winnipeg.

Fifteen consecutive years of commitment to the sport — unmatched by any other snowmobile manufacturer — underscores the importance Arctic places on racing to promote the company and, more importantly, to lead the industry in snowmobile technology, according to company officials.

Dave Rieke, Arctic's vice president of marketing and sales, says snowmobile racing has generated many significant technological innovations at Arctic.

"Despite the ups and downs of Team Arctic throughout the years and the significant cost factor associated with snowmobile racing today, it remains one of the most significant sources of product innovations and continues to be one of Arctic's most important investments," Rieke noted. "On the test track and at the races, under the most grueling conditions imaginable for a snowmobile, you find the keys to perfect performance — engine, clutching, suspension, handling and ride.

"The concepts and innovations that have led to a better Sno Pro sled are often adapted to our standard model line. Racing is a giant laboratory-testing arena where the will and pressure to win results in startling innovations for our company and the industry itself."

"It's important to realize that up until a few years ago, actual production models — available to the consumer — were used in racing as well," explained Roger Skime, vice president of Arctic engineering and the winner of the first Eagle River World Championship race in 1964. "The ability to win races depended on producing the fastest, most responsive snowmobile in existence. And because a sled with those characteristics came directly off the assembly line and were made available to every snowmobiling enthusiast, the entire industry benefited. Though racing machines are very specialized today, most breakthrough in design and technology of standard sleds continue to originate on the track."

Arctic's "Z" model sleds, developed in the mid-1970s, were the first snowmobiles to be produced strictly for oval use. Dennis Zulawski, Team Arctic's current manager, was instrumental in the design of the "Z" sleds.

"As a result of the 'Z' sleds," Zulawski said, "the changes and improvements in engine design and chassis development that went into our production models included a liquid-cooled engine, new drive systems such as the Arctic drive clutch, as well as increased effectiveness in the power transmission of the drive belt. Engine power development pioneered by this model include improvements in port timing, cylinder head volume and shape, exhaust systems, ignition timing and intake silencing.

"Lightweight track construction and the development of an internal drive system that reduced the rivet load on cleats were benefits that were transferred to our production sleds for a faster, safer and more maneuverable machine," Zulawski added. "A rear suspension system was designed that gave the snowmobile chassis better balance control."

The "Z" racers of the seventies eventually made way for the Sno Pro sled that is used on today's racing circuit. This design led to development of a more refined Sno Pro racer that powered Bob Elsner to victory at Eagle River in January, 1979, when he captured the World Championship, snowmobiling's most coveted title. Teammate Jim Dimmerman, driving a sled of the same design, completed Arctic Cat's clean sweep that day, winning the 250, 340 and 440 cc classes.

The Eagle River World Championship has always been the premier race on the Sno Pro circuit. Arctic Cat has won the race three times: in 1979, when Elsner claimed victory and Dimmerman swept all remaining classes; in 1969 when Roger Janssen scored a record-setting victory; and in the very first race at Eagle River in 1964 when Skime, riding a red and white Arctic Cat Model 100 Deluxe, took off across Silver Dollar Lake and left his competition in the nine horsepower and under class behind in a spray of snow and ice.

Actually, Arctic engineering proved so formidable even in the early days, that after Skime's victory, his competition demanded a fuel sample be taken to see if he was using ether in the gasoline. They simply could not believe that a snowmobile could go that fast when Skime's Arctic Cat reached speeds of over 40 miles per hour. The results of the sample created some red faces when it turned out to be 100 per cent gasoline.

When Skime sits back in his chair today and thinks of days gone by, it is the amazing advancements that have been made on the sleds of today as a result of racing that gives him the most satisfaction.

"The consumer has always benefited the most from racing," he explained. "Of course, the factories get a lot of publicity and the racers get the glory and sense of accomplishment, but every time we work to make a racing sled faster, safer or more responsive, that engineering principle behind the change will eventually show up in our production sleds. In the mid 1960s, when snowmobiles moved from larger utility machines to smaller, more maneuverable recreation vehicles, it was the desire to beat the competitive brands that prompted many design changes.

"Over the years racing has been regarded as the competitive driving spirit of Arctic Enterprises, Inc. Because of its competitiveness, many ideas have evolved out of sheer necessity to out do the other snowmobile manufacturers."

The changes in modern snowmobile design are subtle, geared towards performance; but when the industry was in its infancy, more often than not, a change meant a radical departure from accepted theory.

In 1965 the quest for speed resulted in engines producing up to 13 horsepower that were literally too powerful for the chassis. Two-cycle engines were being developed that could propel a snowmobile faster than the suspension system would allow to stay upright. Consequently, Skime and his fellow Arctic engineers began the design of a snowmobile chassis that could accept and complement this kind of power.

The snowmobile designed by Arctic that year had three innovations that proved immensely successful. The engine was mounted in the front instead of in the rear, giving the sled a low center of gravity for stability on both the snow and ice. A lightweight aluminum chassis was developed to improve performance through weight reduction while maintaining better stability. Finally, a rear slide rail suspension system was introduced to give the machine better handling and smoother ride than was believed possible on a snowmobile.

It was the slide rail suspension that set the snowmobile world on its ear. Up until that point, the industry felt the traditional bogey wheels were the only suspension system that would hold up under punishment. Arctic was able to provide a durable, comfortable and performance-oriented suspension that kept the track flat against the ground by using a set of springs, roller wheels and shock absorbing arms from the suspension shafts to the rails.

By late 1966 this new snowmobile was ready to be introduced to the public. Arctic called it the Panther, and it was as different in appearance as it was in design. The sled was dressed in black, the first of a long line of Arctic black, and the Panther looked a lot more serious than the cheerful red and white models it succeeded.

There were 3,500 Panthers produced by Arctic in 1966. One year later that figure skyrocketed to 12,000. The innovations were a spectacular success.

A notice on the bulletin board in 1967 asked that any Arctic employee interested in racing the new Panther to please sign below. From this rather informal beginning, one of the greatest drivers in snowmobile history got his start.

Larry Coltom went on to ride the Panther to victories throughout the 1960's. Coltom took the coveted Kawartha Cup Championships at Peterborough, Ontario during the 1968-69 racing season, and went on to continue his racing career into the seventies. Janssen won the biggest race of all in 1969 — the Eagle River World Championship — with another Arctic Cat driven by Charlie Lofton right behind him.

ARCTIC-CAT sled designs have changed considerably during the company's 15 years of snowmobile racing. Roger Skime piloted Arctic's Model 100 Deluxe (top photo) to victory at the first Eagle River World Championship in 1964. Competing in the nine-horsepower and under class, Skime's red and white racer exceeded speeds of 40 miles per hour. The low slung 1980-81 Black Magic Sno Pro sled (bottom photo) is jet black and dark green, with a metal-flake trim. Team Arctic drivers Bob Elsner and Jim Dimmerman will handle the sleds during the 1980-81 Sno Pro racing season that gets underway Dec. 6-7 in Winnipeg.

Prowlers Second In Grand Rapids Meet

Lincoln high school girls swimming team completed its 1980 regular season schedule Saturday with a second place finish to the host Indians in a 12-team invitational meet at Grand Rapids.

The Indians out-scored the Prowlers 395-345, followed by International Falls 288, Aurora-Hoyt Lakes 323, Bemidji 225, Virginia 173, Hibbing 116, Eveleth 83, Biwabik 62, Ely 41, Greenway 38 and Babbitt 8.

Complete results were unavailable, but Thief River Falls coach John Hustad reported, "we were led by our divers," as Brenda Lund, Lisa Desrocher and Lori Swanson collected 45 team points with a 1-2-7 finish in the finals.

Lund set a new Grand Rapids pool record with a first place 367.2 point performance on her 11 dives. Desrocher was second with 316 points and Swanson was seventh with 285.

Best swimming performance of the day for the Prowlers was a second place 26.7 by Betsie Hallstrom in the 50-yard freestyle.

"It was a good day for us. We had a good time," mentioned Hustad, who was particularly happy with the performances of the younger members of the Thief River Falls squad. "The younger kids made some good improvements," he said.

Nineteen Thief River Falls swimmers will continue their season Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 25-26, in the 1980 Section 3 swimming and diving championships at Bemidji State University.

Pirates Win Title Friday In Class A

Steve Johnson rushed for 200 yards Friday night and the Crookston defense shut out Pipestone until the final seconds as the Northwest Athletic Conference champion Pirates defeated the Arrows 32-6 in the 1980 Minnesota State High School League Class A state football playoff championship game at Crookston.

The Pirates finished the 1980 season with a perfect 13-0 record.

In other state playoff finals Friday, Burnsville handled the Cambridge 23-6 in Class AA; Mahnomen blanked Austin Pacelli 34-0 in Class B; Bird Island-Lake Lillian knocked off Mountain Iron 20-7 in Class C; and Hoffman-Kensington edged Toivola-Meadowlands 18-14 in nine-man play.

Northland Hockey Team Is Looking For Improvement

Winless through an 18-game season a year ago, the Northland community college hockey team has no where to go but up in 1980-81 under first-year head coach Tom Goddard, who says only, "We expect to be improved over last year."

Just four players return from a year ago, including goalies Jeff Reese (Hallock) and Charlie Sehler (East Grand Forks), who shared the Northland netminding chores (and it was a chore).

Howard Beito (Hallock), a top flight defenseman and Kurt Klosterman (Thief River Falls), a forward, are back again this winter. Beito ranked third in Northland's 1979-80 scoring charts with 16 goals, 23 assists and 39 points in 17 games. Klosterman collected 16 points in 18 games, scoring seven goals and adding nine assists for the offensive-minded Northmen.

Another sophomore on this year's roster is Bruce Salmela, a forward who may rank with the best in the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA). A standout performer at Warroad high school, Salmela played a year of amateur hockey with the Warroad Lakers and was recruited by Michigan Tech. But an injury kept him out of WCHA action. A strong year with the Northmen will likely gain him additional collegiate interest.

Another ex-Laker on the Northland roster is Gary Usitalo (Laurim, Mich.), who leads the list of freshman forwards that includes Jim Thompson (TRF), Darin Olimb (warroad), Myles Lund (TRF, Roger Olimb (Warroad), Dusty Krohn (Lake of the Woods), David Lansing (Park River, N.D.), Mike Punton (Lake of the Woods) and Mike Schmidt (Minot, N.D.)

New defensemen include Terry Mishler (East Grand Forks), Jeff Hockin (Aurora-Hoyt Lakes) and Pat Murray (Grand Forks, N.D.), who played junior hockey with the Austin Mavericks.

Mark Tangen (Roseau) joins Reese and Sehler in the Northland nets.

The 1980-81 season, which begins Wednesday, Dec. 3, when Northland hosts the Bemidji State University junior varsity, will mark the 11th year of intercollegiate hockey for the Northmen.

Brad Rosten Is Named MVP For 1980 Cardinals

Brad Rosten, who was earlier named to the North Tri County all-conference team, has been named the most valuable player award winner on the 1980 Plummer High school football team, it was announced by Coach Gary Brantl of the Cardinals.

Rosten, a 5-7, 137-pound senior led the team offensively this fall when he rushed for 416 yards on 97 carries; picked up 302 yards on 17 kick returns, added 61 yards in pass receptions and passed for 68 more for 847 total yards.

In addition to his all-conference and team MVP honors, Rosten was also selected as the recipient of the Cardinals' offensive award.

Other Plummer team awards went to Dean Sletten, defensive award; Mike Konickson, rookie of the year; and Bryan Delage, the Cardinal award for hard work, hustle and desire.

Sletten and Pete Gerardy were named captains of the 1981 Plummer football team.

The youthful, small and inexperienced Cardinals struggled through a 0-9 campaign in 1980, losing to Erskine 28-0, Mentor 38-12, McIntosh-Winger 52-0, Middle River 60-0, Oklee 38-0, Clearbrook 38-0, Gonvick 53-6, Goodridge 41-6 and Grygla 40-8.

However, Brantl said the season wasn't a nightmare. "The season, although 0-9, seemed very short," noted Brantl. "It went by fast because of the young men and their willingness to work. They always worked hard; they had desire; and they liked to play the game. We all learned a lot and we're waiting for next year."

Sletten, a sophomore, will be one of the top returning players in 1981. He led the Cardinals with 64 tackles on defense; was the team's top pass receiver with 11 catches for 140 yards and finished second to Rosten with 634 total offensive yards by rushing for 398 and adding 96 on kickoff returns to go along with his pass reception yardage.

Delage, a 5-3, 112-pound senior, ranked second behind Sletten in the tackle department with 58, followed by Karl Sorenson with 47, Ken Fisher 43 and Rosten 41. Freshman Troy Gustafson came up with a team-high three fumble recoveries and Fisher led the Cardinals with three pass interceptions.

Delage was also the team's second-leading pass receiver with 10 catches for 97 yards. Sorenson caught nine for 117 yards.

Four different Cardinals had a hand in the Plummer passing attack, but it was Fisher, a senior, and Tim Gagner, a freshman, who did most of the quarterbacking. Fisher was 18-for-64 passing for 285 yards, while Gagner was 19-for-45 for 164 yards.

FIRST LINE of Arctic Cat Sno Pro snowmobile racing sleds was introduced in 1974 when Larry Coltom drove the machine at Ironwood, Mich. Coltom was Arctic's first factory paid driver in 1967. The 1980-81 Sno Pro racing season, which will be Arctic's 15th year of snowmobile racing, will begin for Team Arctic drivers Bob Elsner and Jim Dimmerman Dec. 6-7 in Winnipeg.

Arctic Entering 15th Race Season In 1980-81

Panthers were proven to be winners on the cross-country circuit as well. In 1968, Arctic newcomer Dale Cormican entered the Winnipeg to St. Paul International 500 cross country race and finished as minutes ahead of the second place driver. Roger Hible, driving another Panther, was third. Cormican repeated his victory in 1969.

During the early 1970's, the Arctic race shop was manufacturing a production sled known as the EXT. Innovative features of this sled included an even lower center of gravity, and a wider spindle stance. Instead of a center-mounted power plant the engine was mounted to the left for better handling, and a lowered driven clutch and lowered suspension in the front and rear was developed for precision handling.

The EXT was tested and driven to victory repeatedly by Coltom, Lofton and Dave Thompson. It proved itself with wins or high finishes on the racing circuit at West Yellowstone, Ironwood, Peterborough, Boonville, Spokane, Eagle River, Beausejour and Forest Lake. With each race, with each season, changes, adjustments and improvements were made constantly. The chassis design eventually became the basis for the production models of the Arctic's El Tigre, Pantera, Panther and Jag models.

Arctic Cat has kept its place at the top from the Arctic Cat Model 100 Deluxe to this year's jet black and metal-flake green, low slung Sno Pro sled that looks as quick and mysterious as the name "Black Magic" implies.

Again this winter Elsner and Dimmerman will form Team Arctic's Sno Pro racing tandem that will make stops in Manitoba, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ontario, Michigan, Quebec, New York, Maine, Wyoming, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Fifteen years of Team Arctic racing history—

—1964: Roger Skime wins the first Eagle River, Wisconsin World Championship on Dollar Lake on an Arctic Cat Model 100 Deluxe.

—1965: Arctic Cat introduces the Model 141 Deluxe, featuring a cleated track and improved rear suspension travel; Roger Skime rides the 141 Deluxe with a modified Hirth engine to victory in Roseau's Sno-Mo-Cade, scoring Arctic's first major win on a closed track.

—1966: Arctic Cat unveils the Panther. A radical departure from accepted theory for its time, it eventually leads the industry with refined slide rail suspension and a lower center-of-gravity engine mounting as well as racing wins.

—1967: Larry Coltom begins his racing career as Arctic Cat's first paid factory driver.

—1968: Dale Cormican wins the Winnipeg to St. Paul I-500 cross country race and Coltom clinches the Adirondack Cup at Boonville, N.Y.

—1969: Roger Janssen wins the World Championship at Eagle River; Cormican wins his second consecutive Winnipeg to St. Paul cross country race; Charlie Lofton wins all four classes and the Adirondack Cup at Boonville; Coltom wins every heat, semifinal and class title for both oval and cross country racing at Peterborough, Ontario and is awarded the Kawartha Cup.

—1970: Arctic Cat's new Puma is introduced. Recognized as a radical departure from the Panther, it is quicker, lighter and smaller than all previous Arctic Cats; Coltom drives the Puma to victory at King's Castle, Lake Tahoe, Calif.

—1971: Janssen wins the Kawartha Cup in Peterborough; Cormican sets the world speed record for snowmobiles by driving his Boss Cat past the timing lights at 125.87 miles per hour in Boonville.

—1972: Lofton, driving Arctic Cat's Boss Cat II, hits the final timing lights at a speed of 139.2 miles per hour in Boonville during a time trial; The EXT is introduced, becoming the front-runner of chassis design from which the El Tigre, Pantera, Panther and Jag are developed.

—1973: Dave Thompson wins the Bosch 40-40 in Milwaukee, Wisc. while Team Arctic captures the high point trophy for manufacturers at the same race.

—1974: Arctic's first Sno Pro racer is unveiled at Ironwood, Mich.; Lofton wins the Bosch 40-40 in Milwaukee.

—1975: Coltom wins the Hetteen Cup at Alexandria, a total of $13,500 of prize winnings — the largest purse ever in a snowmobile race at the time; Arctic "Z" is brought out, emerging from a highly refined competitive field, the "Z" pioneers a new liquid-cooled engine, engine power development, Mikuni carburetion and internal track drive.

—1976: Coltom earns the title "Sno Pro Driver of the Year".

—1977: Arctic Cat's first independent front suspension Sno Pro racer is unveiled at Hartford, Mich.

—1978: Jim Dimmerman sweeps all three Sno Pro classes at Hales Corner, Wisc. in his first year as a Team Arctic driver; Bob Elsner wins honors as "Sno Pro Driver of the Year".

—1979: Elsner handily wins the World Championship at Eagle River, while Dimmerman scores impressive victories in the 250, 340 and 440 cc Sno Pro classes the same day.

—1980: Dimmerman wins the Hetteen Cup in Alexandria; Elsner grabs first place victories in both 340 and 440 cc classes at Peterborough; Team Arctic amasses a total of 22 first place finishes aboard their "Black Magic" racers.

Wildlife Group Offers Animal Habitat Booklet

There's no use looking for moose on a desert, or brook trout in an ocean, or prairie chickens in the forest. Each of these animals is found "only where its preferred kinds of food and shelter are present," explains a free publication available from the National Wildlife Federation (NWF).

"Wildlife of Forests and Rangelands," a 12-page illustrated booklet, takes a look at what animals you can expect to find roaming the nation's vast ranges and wooded areas.

The NWF publication also explains how human encroachment has changed the habitats of many animals. "One of the most fascinating wildlife stories on the entire continent concerns the changes in the habitat of wildlife which have accompanied the progress of civilization," the pamphlet notes.

As an example, the booklet notes that as pioneers moved westward and began to farm, the deer, elk and bear which once inhabited the rangelands were forced to spend more of their time in and near the mountains and forested areas.

The grizzly bear once roamed the entire West but is now confined to a limited area in the northern Rocky Mountains, with Yellowstone National Park a last stronghold. Because the prairie dog was non-migratory and unable to move to another terrain, it was virtually destroyed. The prairie dog "towns" that once stretched across the rangelands are now rarely seen.

The NWF publication described not only the wildlife of rangelands and forests, but also those animals which can live almost anywhere, such as the coyote and white-tailed deer. The pamphlet explains why each animal is well-suited to its chosen habitat. Moose, for example, "need wet meadows where water plants, willows, alder and other preferred foods are available." Alaska, Idaho, Maine, Michigan, Montana, Utah and Wyoming have such "moose country."

"Wildlife of Forests and Rangelands" is one of a special series of four publications from NWF, the nation's largest conservation education organization. The others describe wildlife of farm and field, wildlife found in lakes, streams and marshes, and wildlife found along the seacoast and in coastal waters.

Single copies of "Wildlife of Forests and Rangelands" are free; additional copies are 10 cents each. To order write the National Wildlife Federation, Dept. 9, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Fake Snakes Scare Away Pest Birds

Are you bothered by pest birds in your garden? Do feathered mauraunders feast on your strawberries, blueberries and cherries before you can pluck them?

There's an answer to this problem, according to Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine. It consists of fake snakes purchased at novelty stores or fashioned from black rubber hoses.

Birds are afraid of snakes — which eat their eggs and their young — and so "they recognize the snake shape — and stay away," according to the National Wildlife Federation's monthly magazine for children.

One family with a lakeside home found that a pair of feisty Canada geese were terrorizing their children and pets, Ranger Rick reports. After they cut a black rubber hose into four-foot lengths and placed them around the property, "the geese disappeared over the lake, never to be seen in that yard again."

Fake snakes can also be used to protect other property, according to Ranger Rick, who cites the owner of a sports airplane who drapes a make-believe rattlesnake over the air intakes of his engine to keep birds out.

Expandable skin of the saguaro cactus can soak up as much as 200 gallons of water during a single desert rainstorm, according to the National Wildlife Federation. Below ground, a network of shallow saguaro roots may sprawl over an area almost 100 feet in diameter. This plant king of U.S. deserts can live for nearly two centuries, weigh almost ten tons, and grow up to 50 feet high.

Thief River Falls Holiday Fair

ART OF CALLIGRAPHY was demonstrated Saturday during the fourth annual Holiday Fair conducted in the city auditorium. Polly Mathison, a calligraphy artist from Burnsville, emphasized the importance of practice associated with the art. "I find there's an extra hour in each day," she said. "I usually get up an hour earlier each day to practice my work."

ROSEMALING TECHNIQUES were demonstrated by LaVonne Forsberg of Thief River Falls Saturday in the city auditorium during the fourth annual Holiday Fair. Visitors to the fair were plentiful throughout the day — particularly during the morning hours, when shoppers visited the display booths in search of those special gifts.

Total Cost Of Auto Accidents Is In Millions

Traffic accidents in Minnesota continue to be a heavy financial burden for those involved, according to public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

In 1979 the estimated economic loss in Minnesota from accidents involving death, injury and property loss was more than $407 million is based on a 1978 National Safety council calculation of the average loss sustained in fatal, injury and property damage crashes.

Minnesota's 1979 loss is down from $425 million in 1978 but it still represents, Sopsic noted, " a tragic individual loss which often lasts for years."

State's 881 fatalities last year resulted in economic hardship valued at more than $132 million. Additional injury accidents caused more than $201 million in loss and other property damage crashes added another $73 million to the total.

Sopsic stressed the influence of drinking drivers on statistics. More than half of the drivers involved in fatal accidents who were tested were considered intoxicated. "The drinking driver is costing Minnesota not only lives, but tens of millions of dollars annually," Sopsic said.

Inflation, too, has steadily driven up the cost of accidents. In 1973 the economic loss from accidents was more than $315 million. Figure dropped to $280 million the following year when the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit went into effect. Despite a lower fatality count in subsequent years, the total cost of accidents has risen by nearly $100 million. "This is just one of many reasons to obey the 55 mph limit and exercise caution at all times," Sopsic said.

Sheriff Invites Citizens To Join Ass'n.

Pennington county sheriff Charles Richards recently announced that Pennington county citizens who would like to join him in the fight against crime are invited to become honorary members of the Minnesota state sheriffs' association.

Founded in 1886, the association is a non-profit, educational organization dedicated to provide training and technical assistance to help local sheriffs protect the lives and property of citizens of this state, Sheriff Richards said.

Honorary membership program was started to provide citizens with an opportunity to lend their support to more effective law enforcement.

The association conducts training seminars for sheriffs and their deputies, conducts annual conferences for all elements of law enforcement (local, state and federal) to get together and discuss issues of concern, works in the legislature to improve laws, and distributes educational material to help citizens better understand the law enforcement profession.

"Membership dues are used to upgrade, professionalize and train our officers to better protect the men, women and children of Pennington county, " the Sheriff added.

Pennington county residents should be receiving membership applications in the mail. "One problem we have is getting an application to everyone who might want to join," Sheriff Richards said. "If you don't receive an application by mail, you can pick one up at the sheriff's department, or you can send your name, ddress and check — $20 for an individual membership — to Minnesota State Sheriffs' Association, P.O. Box 623, South St. Paul, Minnesota 55075."

The sheriff said all new members will receive a membership card, a membership sticker for the car and a year's subscription to the quarterly magazine, "The North Star Sheriff."

"I hope that every law abiding citizen in the county will take advantage of this opportunity to become involved in the fight for good law enforcement by joining the Minnesota state sheriffs' association when the membership letter is received," Sheriff Richards said.

Children Often Victims Of Various Abuse

Children are impressionable. Their minds are open, sensitive to their environment and very fragile. Constant fault finding and belittling can convince a child that he is somehow inferior. It's a form of emotional abuse and it is much more severe than it sounds. It warps children's minds and creates mental problems that will affect them the rest of their lives.

Thousands of children are emotionally abused every year. Unfortunately, that's only part of the whole child abuse problem. Physical harm is most commonly associated with child abuse.

Sexual abuse is the molestation of children, usually by a trusted friend or member of the family. And neglect is the failure to provide a child with the basic necessities of life. Number of cases reaches into the millions each year, when you put them together.

Today, five children will die from one of these abuses . . . five more will survive until tomorrow. Add up all the yesterdays and tomorrows and you'll begin to realize how desperate the problem really is. But, it's not hopeless. Over 80 per cent of them can be helped. We know what to do. But we need your help. For information on child abuse write: Minnesota Chapter of the NCPCA, 919 Lafond Ave., St. Paul 55104.

Persons with inquiries about child protection services in their area may call their county social service or welfare agencies. If you are aware of a child who might be abused or neglected call the local hotline number, 681-5869.

Criticism Of Arts Board Is Topic Of Study

In a report on the state arts board, the Minnesota program evaluation division concludes that the arts board has corrected many of the management problems identified in the past but still has deficiencies that need attention. Resulting from a four-month investigation authorized by the legislative audit commission, the report focuses on the individual artists grants program.

The arts board has been criticized over the past five years by unsuccessful grant applicants, the press and various public agencies which have monitored the board. Criticisms have focused on inconsistencies in the application review process and poor management practices, the evaluation division said.

Study by the division finds that numerous improvements have been made in the overall management of the arts board programs. For example, it notes that the board has recently taken steps to obtain delinquent final reports from grantees and has established an audit program to verify grant spending.

Nevertheless, the report notes shortcomings in the program which awards grants to individual artists, and concludes that the board can do more to clarify its policies, improve its methods of processing applicant information, and encourage the timely submission of final reports by grant recipients. Specifically, the report finds that:

+ The arts board does not give adequate policy guidance to the panels which screen and review grant applications;

+ Grant application materials and information are, in some cases, inconsistent with the board's formal administrative rules;

+ There have been variations in the voting procedures used by application review committees to arrive at recommendations for awards; and

+ 60 per cent of the final reports filed by grantees in the last year were submitted late.

During the study, evaluation staff also found that the board allows spending for regional arts council staff salaries although the law prohibits the use of state money for the administrative costs of regional councils.

The arts board, whose 11 members are appointed by the governor, received its first state appropriation in 1966. In 1980, the board provided $1.5 million to Minnesota arts organizations for general operating expenses and special projects, $690,000 to regional arts councils for subgrants, and $190,000 to individual artists for projects and fellowships.

The full report on the arts board can be obtained from the program evaluation division. Contact Thomas Sims at (612) 296-8503.

Hog Wrestling Charges To Get Hearing Nov. 26

Four directors of the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association who were charged August 17 with wrestling a hog in violation of state statute 346.34 may get their day in court soon or have the case hanging over their heads dismissed.

A hearing has been set for 11 a.m. on Wednesday, November 26, in Pennington county court in an effort to determine if the case will come to trial. Kurt Marben of Thief River Falls, attorney for the pork producers, has introduced a motion to have the complaint dismissed on a number of grounds, including that the type of activity engaged in by the defendants is not the type of activity covered in the intent of the legislation, and that the language of the statute is unconstitutionally vague.

John Novacek, Thief River Falls attorney, has been retained by the city of Thief River Falls to prosecute the case. The city attorney firm of Wurst, McDowell and Ihle has declined to prosecute because one of the defendants is a client of the firm.

An attempt by the city attorney's office to have the case prosecuted by the state attorney general's office has met with apparent disinterest in that department of the government in St. Paul.

A hearing had been scheduled for county court on Monday of this week but was re-scheduled for November 26 to give Novacek time to prepare his case.

Charged with violating the state statute are Bob Fincher of Viking, John Peoples of Brooks, Dalton Anderson of Grygla and Rodney Wayne of Goodridge. On August 17 at about 7 p.m. they jumped into a pen of ankle deep mud at the Pennington county fairgrounds, caught a muddy 250-pound hog, slid it tail end first into an upright 55-gallon drum, then tipped the barrel to release it. The act took less than half a minute. They were then cited by Thief River Falls police officers who witnessed the event.

It had been the intent of the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association to have a number of four-member teams compete at hog wrestling that evening. Entry fees were to be charged to competing teams, admission collected from those who wanted to watch the struggles, and cash prizes given to the teams recording the best time. The event was previously promoted as a highlight of the association's first feeder pig show and sale (which was held earlier in the day) and was expected to help finance the event.

Objection to the event was raised by the Minnesota humane society, which notified the pork producers and local law enforcement of state statute 346.34 which states:

"GREASED PIG CONTESTS AND TURKEY SCRAMBLES. No person shall operate, run or participate in a contest, game or other like activity in which a pig, greased, oiled or otherwise is released and wherein the object is the capture of such pig, in which a chicken or turkey is released or thrown into the air and wherein the object is the capture of such chicken or turkey. Any violation of this section shall be a misdemeanor."

A misdemeanor is punishable by a fine of up to $500 and-or a jail sentence of 90 days.

Fincher told the Times Monday that the pork producers are pleased that the question appears headed toward a decision after a considerable period of inactivity. In the event that the motion for dismissal is denied next Wednesday, it is expected that a trial date would be set. Pleas of not guilty had been filed with the court at a first appearance August 21.

Barbershop Concert Will Benefit ODC

Greater Grand Forks "Valley Chordsmen," a barbershop chorus and quartets will be performing at Lincoln high school auditorium Thursday at 8:15 p.m. The Chordsmen, under the direction of Ken Stennes, will be singing a variety of barbershop music, including such titles as "Chordbusters March", "Sweet and Lovely," and "If There'd Never Been an Ireland".

Valley Chordsmen are men of varied backgrounds who love to sing, and who benefit others with their talents, focusing on fund raisers and their primary beneficiary, the Institute of Logopedics, in Wichita, Kans.

In Grand Forks, the Chordsmen help support the LISTEN drop-in center, a place for the mentally handicapped to enjoy a social atmosphere. The Chordsmen have quartets as well as the full chorus and are available for fund raisers for any organization. Call 701-746-5441 and ask for Rex Rupert for further information.

Barbershop harmony is three parts of harmony around a melody; however, the tenor is sung above the melody or lead, the bass below as usual, and the baritone above and below the lead. It began around the turn of the century.

The ODC is a private, non-profit corporation serving the vocationally handicapped in a sheltered work setting since 1971. With workshops in Crookston and Bemidji as well as in Thief River Falls, the ODC strives to bring real, productive work to handicapped persons of all kinds — physical, mental and emotional.

Each client at the ODC has specific goals to work toward, and the emphasis of the program is on work, with some clients ultimately achieving competitive employment.

This is accomplished primarily through two programs, work adjustment training and — for longer time periods — extended employment, in which clients earn paid vacation and sick leave benefits.

Real pay for real work is the therapeutic method for accomplishing rehabilitation at the ODC. Sub-contract work and prime manufacturing are

Norma Hanson Honored As BPW Woman Of The Year

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

"You're just a person in your own little community who never really stops to think of what you've done until someone points it out for you," stated Norma Hanson as she described her feelings toward being selected woman of the year by the Thief River Falls Business and Professional Women's (BPW) club.

"I feel proud that someone has made the effort to recognize me," she added.

In recognition of her newly attained title, Norma was presented a plaque Monday evening on behalf of the BPW club and two bouquets of flowers from her family. Announcement was made at the regular BPW meeting.

"It can't be — he never sends me roses!" she exclaimed as she carefully examined the bright red roses her husband Lynn had sent her. A second bouquet from their son Mike and his wife Bev drew further expressions of delight from her.

"They never said a thing about this to me!" she uttered in surprise.

Norma's involvement in community and state functions throughout her lifetime illustrate a determined active woman who will not "give up."

"I came from a community where there was not much for young people to do," she began. "Money was scarce and when students completed high school they usually went on to work."

Norma's first place of employment was Investors Diversified Services — a job which confined her to the city for eight years and which isolated her from the farm life she often dreamed of living.

And for a country girl, the move from a rural setting to a bustling, crowded atmosphere created the most difficult transition in Norma's life.

Following her work in the city, during which time she was married, she followed her dreams and came back to a rural community. It was at that time that she worked away from home, while her husband continued farming.

"We both contributed much to building our farming operation," she said. "We had a close partnership.

"But when I first came back to the farm from the city I considered myself an outsider," she said. "I saw nothing for people to do. I attended a community club two times. . . . before it dissolved. I became interested in the church and became a Sunday school teacher — because I was asked."

"Because I was asked". . . these four words provide the backdrop against which many of the activities have been performed in Norma Hanson's

Meet On Drug Paraphernalia Gets Response

An estimated 250 people attended the meeting called for Monday evening at St. John Lutheran church to discuss the sale of drug use paraphernalia in Thief River Falls retail outlets, and the meeting has drawn a response from the owner of one of the stores in question.

Mrs. Ronald (Jackie) Schwietz moderated the meeting at which a committee of concerned citizens was formed. Arrangements were made to circulate a petition protesting the display and sale of drug paraphernalia and literature and it is expected an appearance by the group will be made before the Thief River Falls city council at a future date.

A committee was also formed to visit the stores where items associated with drug use are sold, Mrs. Schwietz said. At the Monday evening meeting, Police Chief Ken Froschheiser discussed and displayed types of paraphernalia available locally and Tim Faver, local attorney, discussed legal questions about such display and sale.

Petition being circulated by the committee states the following: "We, the undersigned, protest the display and selling of drug paraphernalia and literature in stores in Thief River Falls, Minnesota. Further, we request the city council to take action to prohibit said sale and display of drug paraphernalia and literature."

In response to the meeting, Marty Collins, operator of "The Record Barn" which has been in business for one month at 312 Third st. E., brought a public statement to the Times this morning. Collins' business is one of those mentioned at the Monday meeting as having such items for sale. Collins' letter is as follows:

"Do you remember when we were all small children and we used to play the game where someone would make up a story and pass it down the line of children to see how much the story changed at the end of the line?

"I have been falsely accused of selling in my store everything from drug paraphernalia to pornography. This store is not selling anything that can not be bought at any local grocery or drug store. It does not, and will not, sell drug paraphernalia or any form of pornography.

"I was not shown even the slightest bit of consideration, as to be asked to this selected meeting. I haven't met any member of this council and I haven't seen them in my store.

"If your child comes into my, or any other merchant's, store to buy a pipe to put marijuana in, there is a problem started at home well before they enter our stores. Anyone who wishes to visit my store is more than welcome. I am open 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and Thursday nights 'til 9."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Henrickson of Grand Forks, N.D. Parents of the groom are Ed Holmes, South St. Paul, and Mrs. Signe Holmes, Thief River Falls.

Rev. Keith Prekker officiated at the double ring ceremony. At the organ was David Henrickson, a brother of the bride. Alice Wohlwend sang "The Lord's Prayer," and together with David Henrickson sang "God, Woman, and a Man," and "One Hand, One Heart."

Black wrought iron candelabra, accented with greenery and a large yellow bow, created the chancel setting.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, was attired in a white organza gown styled with a molded bodice with Queen Anne neckline and sheer bishop sleeves. Lace enhanced the fitted waistline and complemented the double tiered flounce that edged the A-line skirt and chapel-length train. Her veil of bridal illusion, edged with lace, fell from a coordinating headpiece. She carried a cascade of yellow open-blown roses tipped in orange, white daisies, yellow mums and babies' breath.

Kim Brekke of Warren, a friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Charlotte Larson, St. Hilaire, sister of the groom; Bernadette Henrickson, Thief River Falls, sister-in-law of the bride; Barb Berggren and Sue Chwialkowski, Strandquist, cousins of the bride. The guests were ushered in by Barry Henrickson, brother of the bride, and Rick Reierson, a friend of the couple.

The mother of the bride was attired in a natural colored floor-length gown topped by a light brown sheer cape. The mother of the groom wore a blue floor-length gown with a blue eyelet jacket. Their corsages were of white daisies and yellow roses, tipped in orange.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Owen served as host and hostess at the reception that followed. Kathy Holmes presided at the guest book as Janeen Borowicz and Vanette Lefrooth served the punch.

The wedding cake was cut and served by Mrs. Betty Graff and Mrs. Ted Hegtvedt. At the coffee service were Mrs. Tillie Sevre and Mrs. Nina Bakke. Avoid Hazards In Preparing Holiday Meals

It's hard to separate Thanksgiving from the savory aroma of turkey, sweet potatoes and pumpkin pie. While you're cooking this year's holiday feast, the Minnesota safety council urges you to keep the following tips in mind:

(1) Don't wear loose sleeves around a kitchen range. Sleeves ignite easily by both gas and electric range burners.

(2) Use potholders, not towels, to move pans on the range. Towels may come close to the burner and catch fire.

(3) Use the proper sized burner for each pan. Small pans on large burners leave exposed sources of heat which may ignite clothing.

(4) Learn how to light a gas stove properly. If you smell gas, turn off all controls and open a window or door — then call the gas company right away.

(5) If you have a grease fire in a pan, turn off the burner, cover the pan with a lid — don't try to carry the grease to the sink. If you use a fire extinguisher for a grease fire, be sure that it's a dry chemical model.

Bergland To Address MFU Convention

Secretary of agriculture Bob Bergland will return to his home state to be the featured speaker at the 39th annual convention of the Minnesota Farmers Union (MFU) to be held November 23-25 at the Radisson south hotel in Bloomington.

Bergland is expected to address the major topic of the 1980 MFU annual meeting — the rewriting of the nation's farm legislation to be carried out by Congress next year. It is also expected that Secretary Bergland will outline what he believes to be the accomplishments in agricultural programs and policies achieved under his direction in the Carter administration, so they can be measured against the future efforts of the Reagan administration.

In addition to hearing from Bergland, Farmers Union delegates from throughout the state will form the policy their organization will pursue in the coming year and to hear other prominent speakers and panel members on issues of importance to agriculture, Minnesota's number one industry.

"With agriculture increasing its role of prominence in the world economy and U.S. trade balance . . . and with the current grain supply shortfall accentuating the Upper Midwest as the breadbasket of the world, it is clear that this convention on directions for American farm policy is of the utmost importance for the farm family participants and people around the world," MFU president Cy Carpenter said.

Prospects for the 1981 farm bill will also be the subject of addresses by Minnesota Congressmen Arlen Erdahl and Bruce Vento, Monday afternoon, November 24. A panel discussion by MFU farmer-members Allen Sanow, Minnesota; Mary Reitmeier, Crookston; Eugene Smallidge, Hastings; and Harold Johnson, Elbow Lake will follow.

National Farmers Union president George W. Stone and Minnesota Farmers Union president Cy Carpenter will speak to the convention during the annual "President's Night" activities, Sunday, Nov. 23.

Safety Council Offers Holiday Host Pamphlet

Minnesota safety council is offering a pamphlet entitled "How To Be a Good Host" just in time for the upcoming holiday season.

The pamphlet was published to help people be the kind of hosts who will not contribute to the drinking problems of friends and relatives, and to serve as a guide to responsible drinking.

It is an easy to read, easy to understand guide to why people drink, how to accent food with spirits, how to give a good party, how to use caution when serving alcohol, how to be a good (and sensible) host, why some people don't want to drink, how the host sets the scene, what to serve guests, how to drink responsibly and how to sober up a guest.

The 16-page pamphlet may be purchased from the Minnesota safety council, 145 Hamm Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102. Prices (each) are: single copy — 25 cents (please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope); 10-99 copies — 20 cents; 100-499 copies — 18 cents; 500-999 copies — 16 cents. Larger quantity prices are available on request.

Safety council suggests that companies consider copies of the publication for all their employees, to help them be good hosts this holiday season.

Missionaries At Assembly Of God Sunday

He also served as treasurer of the Zairean Assemblies of God during the last four years, and was active in helping several congregations to build new churches and in the building of the Bible school.

In this missions service Rev. and Mrs. Blue will share experiences from their missionary work.

Reduction In Homestead Tax Is Foreseen

Gov. Al Quie told Minnesota senior citizens last week that residential homestead property taxes, on an average, will be reduced next year.

Speaking before the annual convention of the Minnesota senior federation in Minneapolis November 12, Quie said:

"Income and property taxes will not increase as a result of the state revenue shortfall, since this would do no more than cover the superficial cracks. We must get to the root of the problem, which is government overspending."

Department of revenue has indicated that the average tax on homes next year will drop by about seven per cent.

Quie also told the seniors that they should not worry about the availability of home heating fuel assistance funds this winter.

"The one thing we can be sure of is that you'll be warm this winter," he said. "Adequate funds have been secured to provide fuel assistance to all eligible persons this winter."

Minnesota department of economic security has said that $72.4 million in federal funds for heating assistance will be available for low income and elderly families this winter. This is an increase of $51 million from last winter. In addition, the state has provided $3 million to help buy fuel for those in need who do not qualify for federal assistance.

Quie also reminded seniors of the tax changes that were enacted by the 1979 legislature that are continuing to benefit senior citizens. He credited the Federation for working with the Legislature to improve pension tax laws, repeal Minnesota's inheritance tax law and to provide a one-time $100,000 capital gains tax exemption for persons over age 55 who sell their home.

One Out Of Five Amendments Was Approved

Final results of statewide balloting on five constitutional amendments at the November 4 general election show that only one of the five was passed and the other four failed — one by less than 3,000 votes with 2,078,502 votes cast.

Total number of votes cast was equal to 71.87 per cent of the qualified voters in Minnesota and was the largest number of people ever to vote in an election in the state, according to Joan Growe, secretary of state.

Totals announced as unofficial were to be certified by the state canvassing board which was to meet Tuesday. The unofficial results were obtained by totaling reports by the 87 county canvassing boards in the state.

Only proposed amendment to pass was Amendment No. 2 which would limit campaign spending. With 1,039,252 yes votes required for passage, the amendment received 1,457,454 yes votes.

Coming close to being passed was Amendment No. 1 which would have established a special reapportionment commission to accomplish state redistricting. That amendment received 1,036,481 votes — only 2,771 fewer than required for passage. Since only yes votes were counted in favor of the amendments, persons not voting on them were counted as votes against passage.

Much promoted and publicized amendment which would have established initiative and referendum received the third highest number of yes votes with 970,387. That proposal was Amendment No. 4 on the ballot.

Amendment No. 3, which would have permitted the state to increase the interest rate it could pay for bonds from the five per cent figure established in 1920, received 963,912 yes votes. That amendment would also have raised the bonding limit, permitting the department of transportation to borrow money needed for highway construction and maintenance in the state.

Receiving only 944,883 yes votes was Amendment No. 5, which would have eliminated the requirement that appointment of notaries public be approved by the state senate.

Minn.-Canada Boundary Is Topic Of Book

Colorful and complex history of the international boundary separating Minnesota and Canada — a tale of diplomatic intrigue, faulty maps, controversies and compromise — is told in a new book published November 10 by the Minnesota historical society press.

Written by William E. Lass, professor of history at Mankato state university, "Minnesota's Boundary With Canada: Its Evolution Since 1783" takes the reader from the waning days of the American Revolution to 1925, when the final disagreements over the route of the boundary were comprised by the United States and Canada. During those 142 years diplomats, fur traders, surveyors, politicians, lumbermen, miners, farmers and visionaries contended for advantage in the creation of the Minnesota-Canadian portion of what is now the longest unguarded and peaceful frontier in the world.

Lass begins his book with 1782, when Great Britain and the infant United States negotiated a common border in North America based upon a faulty map. He describes how misinformation on the map led to a 60-year controversy, as British and American diplomats attempted to agree on a boundary that conformed to geographic realities. He tells how the Northwest Angle, that "seeming aberration of man's rationality," was made permanent by the Webster-Ashburton treaty of 1842. This treaty finally set the line along the historic voyageur canoe route from the Pigeon river to Lake of the Woods and along the 49th parallel to the Red river.

The problems of intrepid surveyors and determined boundary commissioners are traced as the men defined a border running through vast expanses of previously unmapped land and water. The author also describes the herculean labor of erecting monuments along the course — a task begun in 1822 and not completed for over a century.

Minnesotans' efforts to annex Canadian Territory are explained in detail. A final chapter tells of disputes that arose when miners, lumbermen, farmers and fishermen flocked to the unsettled lands along the unmarked border late in the 19th century.

The book concludes with the treaty of 1925, which capped decades of disagreements and uncertainties. With the establishment of the international boundary commission, the United States and Canada undertook the program of cooperative maintenance of the line that exists today.

Lass, 52, is the author of four other books and numerous articles about the history of the Midwest. Currently on leave from Mankato state university, he is one of three authors selected to write a new one-volume history of Minnesota to be published by the MHS Press.

Plan Energy Workshops At Fosston

"Renewable Energy and Your Future" is the subject of two days of workshops to be held Friday and Saturday in the Fosston civic center. The value of solar energy and fuel alcohol to farm and rural residents are the chief topics.

The workshops are part of a statewide series being sponsored by the PIRG-VISTA energy project and the citizen's energy coalition. The Bi-County community action council and the Inter-County community council are providing financial assistance.

Solar energy is the subject for Friday. John Weber, an experienced solar engineer from Long Prairie, will lead the day's workshop. He will concentrate on: Conservation, the preliminary and necessary step toward effective solar space heating; south facing walls or "making the most of what you have"; solar technologies to fit your budget; solar water heaters; and principles of solar grain drying.

Fuel alcohol is the topic for Saturday, November 22. This workshop will be conducted by Dennis Jackson and Paul Gorman who teach agribusiness mechanics and farm management at the area vocational technical institute in Mankato. Neither are salesmen. Over the past few years Jackson and Gorman have designed one of the most efficient stills in the state.

The information they will share includes: Basics on how a still works; how alcohol is made with corn (a step by step procedure); tractor modifications; how to build the Mankato AVTI vacuum distillation unit; stillage as a livestock feed; and the true economics of alcohol production.

Registration is $3 and the workshops will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. both days.

To preregister write Tom or Marsha Murphy, Fosston, MN 56542 or call 435-1309.

Danger Great For Driving On Thanksgiving

More Minnesotans are killed and injured during the Thanksgiving holiday period than during any other major holiday, according to the Minnesota safety council. Death toll in 1979 was 13, the highest since 1973.

Total traffic accidents and injuries resulting from those accidents also escalated last year, with 892 injuries resulting from 2049 crashes. Hazards of driving in early winter snow, heavy travel, early darkness hours and the effects of drinking and driving are some possible reasons for the increases. Safety council estimates that between eight and 11 Minnesotans will die in automobile accidents this Thanksgiving holiday.

Safety council offers some common-sense precautions to help make your Thanksgiving a safer one. Make sure your car is ready for winter driving. A winter checkup, including snow tires, battery check, windshield wipers fully operative, headlights and taillights in working order, an engine tune-up to ensure that your car runs safely and efficiently should be as much a part of your holiday plans as baking that pumpkin pie.

It's not a good idea to drink and drive. But, if you do, allow one hour to pass for each ounce of alcohol consumed before getting behind the wheel. It's best to ask one person to refrain from drinking to do the driving home after your celebration.

Other defensive driving tactics to avoid auto crashes include turning on headlights at dusk or whenever visibility is limited, driving according to road and weather conditions, starting your trip early to avoid heavy traffic and giving yourself plenty of time to arrive safely, fastening your safety belts and insisting that your passengers do, too.

Workshop For Nurses Set At TRF AVTI

Two-day workshop entitled "First Line Patient Care Management" is scheduled for Monday, December 1 and Tuesday, December 2, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day with registration at 8:30 a.m. the first day. A $40 fee includes materials, coffee, rolls and noon lunch for both days. Worshop will be held at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute, room 120.

Workshop leader, Alice S. Packer, is a nurse consultant for Marian health systems, Inc., a private consulting firm in Minneapolis. In addition to experience in education, Packer has had experience and advanced degree work in nursing management.

This workshop is designed to assist those responsible for supervising other nursing personnel in applying the basic concepts of management to the daily management activities of their unit. At the completion of the workshop, participants will be given the necessary supporting documentation to apply for 12 hours continuing education credit. This workshop addresses the component of professional nursing specified as "providing nursing care supportive or restorative of life by functions as: supervision nursing personnel". A detailed brochure is available.

Enrollment is limited. Persons should pre-register to insure a place in the workshop by contacting Adult Education, AVTI, Highway One East, Thief River Falls, MN 56701; 681-5424.

Thanksgiving Holiday Holds Highway Hazard

Thanksgiving weekend is the longest holiday period of the year and the most dangerous in terms of motor vehicle accidents, warns Minnesota public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

In 1979 there were 2,049 crashes resulting in 13 fatilities and 568 injuries, Sopsic said. These totals are higher than any recorded in the 1970s. During the past seven years, Minnesota has averaged 1,670 accidents and nine deaths on Thanksgiving weekends. The period lasts 102 hours, this year starting at 6 p.m. November 26, and ending at midnight, November 29.

"The Minnesota state patrol will be aided by a force of extra troopers on Thanksgiving weekend," said Col. D. Roger Ledding, patrol chief.

"The department reminds motorists to practice defensive driving and to obey the 55 mph speed limit," said Sopsic. "We also urge everyone to fasten their safety belts and check weather reports before departing on their trip. Early winter storms develop about the end of November and cause poor visibility and hazardous road conditions."

Ekelund Church To Dedicate New Entry Sun.

Dedication of the new entry and remodeling at Ekelund Lutheran church located about nine miles southeast of Goodridge will take place Sunday with Bishop Cecil Johnson, Moorhead, president of the Northern Minnesota district of the American Lutheran church, as a special guest.

Morning worship at 11 a.m. will have Bishop Johnson as speaker. At 2 p.m., following a fellowship dinner, the dedication service will be held with Rev. Gene Broughton, pastor of the Goodridge parish, delivering the sermon. Rites of dedication will be performed by Bishop Johnson and Rev. Bruce Anderson of Duluth, former pastor at Ekelund. Several musical numbers will be presented, including songs by the Sunday school.

The congregation has added a 16x44 entry way and has refinished the furniture and carpeted the interior of the church. All friends and members of the congregation are invited to participate in the festivities.

Timber Study Report Will Be Given Dec. 4-5

Results of a study of state timber resources will be the subject of a conference sponsored by the legislative commission on Minnesota resources in Bloomington Dec. 4-5.

In addition to hearing a detailed presentation on the results of the study there will be a panel discussion and audience participation.

Persons wishing to attend the conference are asked to register by contacting Sherry Brother, Office of Special Programs, 405 Coffey Hall, 1420 Eckles Avenue, University of Minnesota, St. Paul.

The LCMR said a fee of $20 is being charged to attend the conference for those registering by Nov. 21. After that date the fee will be $22.

LHS Grads In UND Concert

Four Lincoln high school graduates participated recently at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks when the university women's chorus and Varsity Bards were presented in concert.

Debra Panek of Goodridge, soprano, sang with the women's chorus and Roger Olson, bass, Wayne Krueger and Steve Wigness, tenors, were members of the Varsity Bards. Both groups performed selections from Randall Thompson's "Frostiana".

Land O'Lakes To Merge With Lake To Lake

Two major farmer cooperatives, Land O'Lakes, Inc., Minneapolis and Lake to Lake dairy cooperative, Manitowoc, Wis., have announced jointly a plan of merger whereby Lake to Lake members would become members of Land O'Lakes. Both organizations have worked closely together in the past. Lake to Lake has marketed its butter through Land O'Lakes for over 30 years and is a member-owner of Land O'Lakes.

Under the unification plan, which requires approval by the membership of both organizations, Lake to Lake would become a division of Land O'Lakes, with responsibility for dairy operations in Lake to Lake's existing geographic area.

Lake to Lake is owned by approximately 1,300 dairy farmers in eastern Wisconsin. It has five processing plants and is a supplier of Grade A fluid milk to the Chicago market.

Lake to Lake has a strong consumer cheese franchise in its principal distribution areas. According to a spokesman, "its cheese program will complement very well the existing Land O'Lakes marketing programs in butter, cheese and other products."

"By working even more closely with one another than we have in the past," the spokesman said, "we expect to solidify and broaden the marketing areas and introduce new marketing programs for the benefit of all the farmers involved, and for their customers too."

The unification, if approved by the membership of both organizations, will be effective Jan. 1, 1981.

Once registered at the station site, persons can tour other sites in the Crookston community. Guides will drive the short trip into Crookston and owners and builders will be on hand to explain their experiences with solar.

Commercial solar interests and on-site builders with displays should contact the Northwest experiment station for space and hookups before Wednesday, November 19.

Beware Of Thin Ice, Says Safety Council

As Minnesota temperatures begin to fall, hearty folks begin to think of outdoor activities. And, although Minnesota lakes may begin to freeze, the ice won't be thick enough for travel for some time.

Minnesota safety council offers the following guidelines to help you judge whether ice is sufficiently thick:

+ Two inches of ice are needed to support one person, walking.

+ Three inches of ice will support a group of people walking single file, if spread out.

+ Four inches of ice are sufficient for fishing on foot.

+ Five inches of ice are needed to support the weight of a snowmobile and rider.

+ Seven and one-half inches of ice will support a two-ton auto.

Safety council reminds you that a snow cover on lakes acts as an insulation for water, slowing down freezing. Test the thickness of ice before venturing onto a lake to be sure that it is frozen over the entire surface. Be alert to patches of thin ice and to sections of the lake that have been covered with snow.

Remind children to wait until lakes have developed a thick cover of ice before skating, playing broomball or other ice-surface games. Ask them to check with you before stepping out onto Minnesota's frozen lakes.

PIONEER TALES

from the Pennington County Historical Society

by Inga Geving

What is more beautiful than our fall in Minnesota?

Each year the green foliage of our woods turns to red and yellow, the fields ripen and give up their crops to harvest. The days are warm, the nights are cool and pleasant. The woods are peaceful and quiet, and with fall colors Minnesota seems twice as beautiful as anywhere else.

The flowers were beautiful this summer at the Pioneer Village. The red, yellow and white colors were a beautiful picture. The sunsets through the trees were so restful and breathtaking.

Everything is put away until spring to be rearranged for another season. As we put things away we thought of all the visitors that had toured the village, their interest, remarks and being able to see how our pioneers really began this country. Visitors from Germany, Sweden, Norway, Ireland, England and Canada came to the Pioneer Village this summer.

It reminds us of our great heritage which brings us to the importance of a second volume to our history book. We must get the histories in. Have you sent yours in?

Several people asked us to do a second book so that their histories could be sent. Now is your chance to write about your families.

Many articles were brought in this summer. A threshing machine was donated by Edwin Helgeland, a double box wagon donated by Rev. Berton Hushagen. Several items were left on loan by Frank Armstrong, John Keck, Albert Koop, Catherine Simon and others.

We are busy almost every day at the museum doing the things that we cannot possibly do during the summer.

Coin, Antique, Stamp, Hobby Show This Week

Now in its 14th year of operation, the Thief River Falls free international coin, antique, stamp and hobby show will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Best Western Inn of Thief River Falls, according to Patrick L. Klemisch, show chairman.

On Saturday the show will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and on Sunday show hours will be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission and the public is invited to visit at any time during show hours either day of the event.

Klemisch said there will be 25 dealers on hand to buy and sell items and that requests for exhibit space have far exceeded the amount of space available. There will be a good opportunity for people with coins, stamps and antique items to sell or trade them with dealers in attendance as well as make purchases from items on display.

Over the past 11 years the sponsoring Thief River Falls coin club has contributed proceeds from the show for scholarships at Northland community college and the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute. The total through last year was more than $3,800.

Norma Hanson Is Named BPW Woman of Year

lifetime.

"I've never really been confronted with the decision of 'yes, I will' or 'no, I won't'," she stressed. "I'm the type of person who doesn't refuse to do things when asked."

When the Hanson's son Mike was born, Norma formed a 4-H club. Her love for horses inspired the Bit and Bridle club. When her position as BPW president terminated, she began to realize that women were not being recognized for their contributions to agriculture. As a result, she founded Minnesota Women for Agriculture, Inc.

"After all," she confirmed, "who can do a better job at promoting a farm product than the one who uses it?"

And, in 1970 when the Minnesota Farmers Union president asked Norma if she would be interested in working as a liaison in the state legislature, she weighed the possibility of accepting a position that would carry her 300 miles away from home and that would force her to leave a secure job.

"Then I got to thinking — what a challenge!," she said, "so I discussed it with my family who agreed and accepted the idea. I came home every weekend — except once when I was snowbound in St. Cloud — and did my housework, baking and ironing."

Norma's position as lobbyist with the Minnesota Farmers Union kept her in constant contact with legislators, and with bills flowing through the legislature. And, her personal interest in her work enabled her to pursue further aspects of the job.

"The word "president" is hardly a foreign word to this woman of the year. There was the position of president of the Deer Park garden club; president of the Bit and Bridle saddle club; president and secretary of the Pennington county 4-H council; president of the Goodridge parent teacher association; president of Faith Lutheran church women in Goodridge; president and founder of the Goodridge area historical society; president and founder of Minnesota Women for Agriculture, Inc.; and president of the Minnesota Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

"BPW has taught me how to be a leader and how to get along with all kinds of people," she emphasized.

"It has taught me how to plan a schedule for myself and how to be accountable for every minute of the day."

As a BPW member, Norma has been local president, secretary and legislative chairman; district chairman and vice chairman; and state past president, first and second vice president, legislative chairman and legislative task force chairman; member of the national board of directors and member of the national legislative platform committee.

"Everything you participate in you learn something from," she stated, "but a good leader doesn't do things for herself."

Since 1977, Norma has assumed the title of a self-employed farmer — something she is "very, very proud of", she said. Up until that time, she was employed as office manager of Kiewel products company in Thief River Falls (taking two years out of her 13 years with the firm to work as a lobbyist for the Minnesota Farmers Union, during which she also wrote a weekly column entitled, "Around the Country and in the Kitchen" for the publication "Minnesota Agriculture.")

I have always had a great interest in agriculture and a rural life," she stressed. "I think agriculture is the backbone of the economy of our country. I love the outdoors, I don't feel the pressure of an eight to five job, and we are our own bosses. I could never fit into the 'cement silo' atmosphere." (A term she has come to associate with the city).

Hobbies, besides work, have managed to slip themselves into the portfolio of episodes within Norma's life. She has a love for horses, writing, gardening, interior decorating and reading.

Norma is presently in the process of training her horses for driving, she said.

"I can't remember the time when I was young that I didn't like to play games with horses," she confessed. "I even imitated them!"

Lynn built her own greenhouse for her and she is in the process of writing three books.

"I love to express things," she said, "nature... colors... animals... I love animals."

The inquisitive examiner of such an active and varied life may ask, "How does one find time for so many activities?"

To which Norma simply replies, "I just plan how much I have to get done in a day; I schedule all my meetings for the beginning of the month; and I'm a person who doesn't need much sleep."

Norma speaks in anticipation of a future filled with dreams yet to come true.

"I'd like to see the Kentucky Derby, and visit Ireland, Scotland, England and Denmark. I'd like to have a tiny boutique shop of my own. I'd like to transform an old farm home into a restaurant specializing in meals prepared in a country style on a reservation only basis. I'd like to finish my books — something I haven't had time to do. And. . ." she added, "I'd like to be given the opportunity to study women's involvement in agriculture in China."

"I'll do as many things as time and health and money allows," she said.

Norma feels that she would have liked to do some things differently in her lifetime if given the chance.

"I'd probably take a second look at education," she said. "A business degree is different from a college degree. It all depends on what you want to do with you education. And I always wish I would have done more professional horse training. I've always wanted to train horses for the movies."

State Board Visits College Here Tuesday

Morning report session was highly complimentary of the local institution and its staff and program. A summary of the report points out that the college and the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute provide a comprehensive two-year post-secondary program for the people of the area and that opportunities are great for increased cooperation between the college and AVTI.

"There is evidence," the report states, "that the two institutions are planning to take increasing advantage of their proximity."

The report also noted that the college has developed a realistic long-range plan which reflects the feelings expressed by members of the college community in their responses to the community college goals inventory, a survey regarding ideas about objectives for the college in Thief River Falls.

"The college staff is well-qualified and works well as a unit," the report summary stated. "Instructional programs are of good quality. The college is becoming a cultural and educational center for the area."

The report did project that enrollment may be a problem in years ahead, and the suggestion was made that college personnel and the advisory committee must be imaginative in developing programs and courses that will serve a larger percentage of the people in the service area and perhaps bring in students from outside of the service area."

While a number of suggestions by the evaluation team concerning ways and means for improvement of the college were made in the report, the summary stated: "It is the feeling of the system staff, however, that the college is doing a good job of serving its area in the manner envisioned by the state board for community colleges."

Chairing the morning and afternoon board sessions was Dr. Joseph L. Norquist of St. Paul, a former resident of Thief River Falls. The entire board was in attendance and included Elna H. Ponto, Albert Lea, vice president; Nadine H. Chase, Bena, secretary; Dr. Sung Won Son, Minneapolis; Toyse A. Kyle, Minneapolis; Mrs. Arlene Nycklemoe, Fergus Falls; and Paul Brinkman, Minneapolis, student member of the board.

"We are naturally pleased with the very positive report which Northland received from the evaluation team," Dr. Easton stated following the meeting. "Our efforts as an administration and staff have been directed toward making the community college truly representative of and responsive to the area, and it is reassuring that the state staff and board concur in the direction and methods we have adopted."

Homeowners Property Taxes To Go Down

There has been a lot of talk recently about future property taxes in light of my actions to balance the state budget — but the fact is most homeowners will find that their next year's property tax bills will be lower than this year's.

Also, most farm owners, in predominantly rural areas, will see property tax decreases or only slight increases in their bills next year.

And owners of farms near urban areas and owners of business property will experience property tax increases next year that will be well below the rate of inflation.

Homeowners

Next year will be the second in a row that homeowners will see their property tax bills go down. This year the average homeowner's property tax bill decreased 15.4 per cent — a drop from $532 to $450. According to estimates prepared by the Department of Revenue, the average tax on homes next year will drop about 7 per cent — from $450 to $418.50.

The results of these decreases in homeowners tax bills mean that they will be paying about the same average amount of property tax next year as they paid in 1970.

The reduction or slight increases in property tax bills are a result of a commitment I have made not to neglect property tax relief measures in my effort to cut state taxes.

Summary of Property Tax Relief

Following is a list of accomplishments in my first two years as Governor to hold down property tax increases:

First, as a result of legislation I signed into law, the state is now paying a larger share of home and farm owners' property tax bills through the homestead credit program.

In 1979, the state paid 45 per cent of home and farm owners' tax bills, up to the maximum of $325. Starting with taxes property owners paid this year, the state pays 50 per cent of their property tax bill up to $550. For next year the credit will be raised so that the state will pay 58 per cent of a homeowner's property tax bill up $650.

Second, the state will be helping reduce farm owners' property tax bills by increasing the agricultural school credit. This is a special credit for owners of farm lands aimed at reducing the amount of property tax that goes to pay for public schools. In the past, the state paid $15 for each $1,000 of assessed value of farm homes and surrounding 160 acres of land. For this year, the amount of acres covered by the credit was increased to 240 acres. (The state will continue to pay $10 for each $1,000 of assessed value for each acre over 240 acres.)

Next year, the state will be paying $17 for each $1,000 of the assessed value of the farm home and surrounding 240 acres of land — a $2 increase over this year's amount of $15 for each $1,000 of assessed value.

Third, the state is sending additional state funds back to local communities to help pay for the expenses of schools and local governments. In addition to the billions of state aid already being sent, the state is now providing slightly more than $400 million extra for this purpose this year and next year.

Fourth, changes have been made in the formulas for determining the assessed value of homes and farms in order to reduce the percentage of a home or farm's value that is taxed.

Fifth, the maximum amounts the owners of farms and homes can obtain through the state's property tax refunding program have been increased from $475 to $1,000 — up a total of $525.

Last, there will be a special one-time property tax refund program in effect next year for homeowners whose property taxes have increased more than 10 per cent over last year's.

Under the program, homeowners can apply for a refund of one-half the amount of any property tax increase over 10 per cent up to a maximum refund of $300. The special one-time refund will be in addition to whatever refund homeowners receive through the property tax refund program. Homeowners will be able to apply for the special refund along with the property tax refund on the same yellow property tax refund form.

The actions I have described demonstrate that my administration's effort to reduce or hold the line on all taxes, and at the same time ensure that funding will be available to pay for services that local units of government provide to you.

MEMBERS OF the United Blood Services of Fargo, along with the area vocational-technical institute and Northland community college students, participated in a blood drive Monday and Tuesday. "We had a tremendous response from students," said Kay Anderson, accounting instructor at the AVTI and student senate adviser. "We only needed 80 donors and we got 160. It couldn't have been done without the cooperation of staff and students." Pictured working with some of the donors are Jan Falk (left) and Ronda Aitchison, both of Fargo.

Senior Citizens News

It was a lovely fall day, November 6 when the Senior Citizens met for the weekly meeting. There were 26 adults and 3 children present. Roy Dewas, Ella Thun and Clara Nelson from Karlstad, Vernice Thibads and Florence Stennes from Stephen. Bertha Fredrickson was here from Thief River Falls and Rickjeanna Kaiser came to spend the afternoon with us.

There was a jolly group in the fluffing circle who fluffed up Arctic filling while Amanda stuffed pillows and others sewed up ends to complete each pair of pillows. Ella, Polly and Anna Brekke sewed around a piece quilt also finishing that.

Seven door prices were given away on Thursday. Evelyn received Mabel's, Anna B. received her own, Anna R. received Louis Lofstrom's, Ella received Elsie's, Clara received Evelyn's, Ruth H. received Amanda's and Florence Stennes received Ruth Anderson's.

Friday we treated our members to a ham dinner at the cafe in town. Seventeen were present. Thanks Linda for a very delicious dinner. Table grace was sang before lunch Thursday and Mabel Borsvold was hostess.

A Lutheran Youth encounter group called "Winds of Peace", ministering in this area were at the Westaker Free Lutheran church at Newfolden, Friday evening. This ministering group of six will be traveling to Brazil in the very near future. Four of this group, including Mr. and Mrs. Paul Abel were breakfast guests at the Paul Flaten home Saturday morning.

One of the group was a Friday overnight guest at the Ingvald Rokke home.

Senior Citizens

Fourteen signed the record book on Thursday, November 13. Some of our regular members were absent due perhaps to the snow and ice on the roads. Those who came kept busy. Anna B. was alone on sewing around the piece quilt so it will be finished next week. Some were fluffing up stuffing and some started to make the Christmas tree hot pad from the pattern loaned to us some weeks ago. It will be pretty if and when we get it finished. There is lots of slow tedious work on this and we could perhaps be working on something that could be finished sooner, but we like a challenge, too, to see what we really can accomplish.

Four door prizes were given away. Gust received Anna Rud's, Mabel Stromberg received Evelyn's, Lee Wernberg received Anna Brekke's, Anna Rud received Mabel Borsvold's.

We sang the table grace and Ida Bruce was our hostess Thursday.

The way to identify a tree or a person is by the kind of fruit produced.

Thursday visitors and dinner guests at the Ben Kleinwachter home were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thompson and Andrew. Friday supper guests and visitors at Ben's were Mr. and Mrs. Herb Goethe of Goodridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Koland, Ted and Todd of Bloomington arrived on Friday and spent the weekend at the Elsie and Ivan Kimbrough home. Roger did some hunting and they returned home Monday.

Algoth Peterson and Clifford Johnson of Karlstad visited with Rudy Lindgren Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Thun visited at Karlstad Sunday evening with Mrs. Ella Thun.

Supper guests and visitors on Sunday at the Eugene Kleinwachter home were Sidney Dolden of Worthington, Delmore Strussburg and Mathew of Redings, Wallace Kleinwachter of Pace, Fla., Clare and Carmen Kleinwachter of Thief River Falls, Leonard Jacobson, Laures and Theresa Kleinwachter, Alan, Jim and Tammi, all of Stephen, Harvey Kleinwachter of Redwood Falls and Art and Selma Kleinwachter. Joining the group later were Mrs. Harvey Kleinwachter and Nicholas, Tom Kleinwachter and Tammi Bolduc, both of Stephen. Also callers during the day were Leland and Michelle Kleinwachter of St. Paul.

NWAC Meeting Is Today

Annual fall meeting of the Northwest Athletic Conference will be held tonight (Wednesday) at 5 p.m. at Mahnomen, highlighted by the selection of the 1980 NWAC all-conference football team.

The meeting will also officially close out NWAC football membership for Crookston and East Grand Forks, both of whom announced long ago they planned to withdraw from the conference to avoid playing Class AA-size Bemidji and Fergus Falls. Ironically, Crookston leaves as the two-time defending NWAC champion and as the undefeated 1980 Minnesota Class A state playoff champion.

Crookston and East Grand Forks are apparently content to perform as Class A independents next fall. But the other three NWAC members — Thief River Falls, Bemidji and Fergus Falls would beg, borrow or steal for conference affiliation.

However, nothing in regards to reorganization of the NWAC football membership is expected to be accomplished tonight. All those involved in the shuffle are awaiting a Minnesota State High School League football playoff committee meeting January 21 in the Twin Cities to find out where they can fit into the MSHSL playoff picture.

But even without football, the Northwest Athletic Conference will sponsor sports for both boys and girls, including girls tennis, volleyball and cross country in the fall; basketball in the winter; boys tennis, golf, track and baseball in the spring.

Helley Starts Recruiting Efforts

Despite a last place 1-6-1 finish in the MJCAA Northern Division, Northland community college football coach John Helley said he wasn't disappointed with his first year results with the Northmen.

"The record is not disappointing to me at all," said Helley. "There were a lot of ball games we could have won that we let slip away, especially early in the season. Later in the season injuries and our lack of depth just caught up to us. But the team morale stayed up; the players all felt they played as well as they could have. I think all-in-all it was a good season."

Helley will now busy himself trying to recruit local players for the 1980-81 school year.

"My goals are the same as last year — get 45 players from the area who want to play football," explained Helley. "We fell short of that goal this year and it definitely hurt us. If we can get the support of the local athletes — get guys to come out and play for us — I think we can improve on the record."

Helley would like nothing more than to land a team full of area players from the Pine-to-Prairie, North Tri County, Top of the State and Northern Lights conferences, along with several Thief River Falls graduates. He's asking his 1980 freshmen to assist him in recruiting area performers, meaning people like Mike Busse and Mark Stock, who were just named defensive captains for next year, will be trying to persuade former teammates from Mahnomen, the 1980 Minnesota state Class B playoff champion, to attend school here.

Miscellaneous

+ Crookston high school football coach Les Drechsel, after watching his team defeat Pipestone 32-6 Friday for the 1980 Minnesota Class A state football title, told Lori Mateer of the Crookston Times, "We played simply super. Right now we've got one of the best teams in the state. I'd like to see a team that could beat us." A 200-yard rushing effort by Steve Johnson against the Arrows gave the Crookston senior 1,763 yards for the year. University of Minnesota assistant football coach Tony Dungy was on hand to watch the game, keeping a special eye on Johnson, who could be the area's top football recruit since Thief River Falls' Kent Smith, who went to Nebraska in 1973. Brent Weiss, Johnson's backfield mate this fall, finished 1980 with 942 yards rushing.

+Six Grand Rapids players were among the 25 named to the Northern Lakes all-conference football team this fall. The Indians, who will be in Thief River Falls next season to face the Prowlers, had all-conference picks in quarterback Tony Kellin, halfback Jim Malwitz, nose guard Marty Pirjevec, end Ron Renner and Tackles Jerry Heinrich and Pate Bowe. Kelling and Pirjevec are juniors, while the others are seniors.

+ Eveleth, a Thief River Falls football opponent in 1976 and 1977, suffered through a discouraging winless 1980 season in which the Bears were shut out eight times and scored just six points all year.

+Freshman Mike Selves of Thief River Falls began his collegiate wrestling career with Moorhead State University Saturday by participating in the 11th annual Bison Open at North Dakota State University.

Two Northmen Are Named As All-Conference

Post-season honors went out this week to members of the 1980 Northland community college football team, including the naming of Brian Hourigan and Duane Kjono to the Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) Northern Division all-conference team.

Hourigan, a 5-11, 227-pound sophomore from Rutherford, N.J., was named to the all-conference team as an offenseive tackle. Kjono, a 5-9, 202-pound sophomore from Mahnomen, was selected as a defensive end.

Gaining honorable mention Northern Division all-conference status were Dave Gorski, a freshman tight end from Lancaster; Todd Tangen, a freshman linebacker from Fosston; and Jeff Gobell, a sophomore place kicker from Thief River Falls.

Several team honors were also awarded. Hourigan and Bob Benson, a sophomore from Twin Valley, were named top offensive linemen; Mark Stock, a freshman from Mahnomen, and Kelly Turgeon, a sophomore from Warren, were named top defensive linemen; John Dillon, a freshman from Thief River Falls, and Mike Punton, a freshman from Baudette, were named top offensive backs; Tangen and Blair Spikes, a sophomore from Inkster, Mich., were named top defensive backs; while Kjono and Gobell were named top specialty team performers.

Dillon and Punton were named 1981 Northland offensive captains, while Stock and Mike Busse, a freshman from Mahnomen, were named next year's defensive captains.

Harris, Northmen Expect Good Season

Chet Engelman doesn't pull any punches. His 1980-81 Northland community college basketball team has talent, and he's telling people about it. Mostly he's talking about Terry Harris, a 6-6 scoring machine from Dearborn Heights, Mich., who was an MJCAA all-state and NJCAA all-region selection as a freshman a year ago when he averaged 27.8 points and 14.4 rebounds per game.

"I think, potentially, we could be as good as we've ever been," said Engelman matter-of-factly. And he's drawing comparison to his nationally-ranked 1974-75 ball club that went 24-1 behind David Dickey, a slick ball handler who was a two-time NJCAA All-American with the Northmen.

As good as Dickey was, however, Harris is bigger and stronger. He's ticketed for post-season honors and probable major college offers.

"I don't think there was any question in anybody's mind who saw him play in the state tournament last year that Terry was the best player in the state," explained Engelman. "And if anything, he's better this year. I expect most of the points to come from Harris," added Engelman, who wouldn't rule out a 35-to-45 point average for his prize performer.

And Harris will be playing a different position this winter. The arrival of Jeff Nolan, a 6-5 freshman from Thornridge high school in Harvey, Ill., has allowed Harris to move outside while the 220-pound Nolan fills the middle.

"We felt we needed one thing to make us a real strong team this year — a legitimate post man," pointed out Engelman. "And we got him in Jeff Nolan. He was the big key for us; a quality ball player."

Harris and Nolan are the only sure starters for the Northmen at this point. But there's plenty of talent to choose from in filling out the rest of the line-up.

Sophomores on hand include 6-2 Tony Smith (Inkster, Mich.) and 5-10 David Spilde (Karlstad), both at least part-time starters a year ago; 6-3 Lyndell Knight (Inkster), who began 1979-80 as a starter before being ruled ineligible because of an administration transfer problem; 5-9 Joe Kraska (Lancaster), a full-time performer in 1978-79 who missed all of last season because of a football injury; 6-0 Jeff Oseid (Thief River Falls), a transfer student from Bemidji State University; and 5-11 Darryl Robinson (Julian high school, Chicago).

Among the freshmen are 5-10 Kyle Hams (Thief River Falls); 6-3 Randy Harrison (Rosemount); 6-2 Jim Nyland (Thief River Falls); 6-0 Bob Dostal (Badger); 5-10 Marc Erby (Lehmann high school, Bronx, N.Y.); 5-9 Scott Kliner (Warren); and 6-6 Eddie Duckworth (Harvey, Ill.), a recent addition to the team.

Duckworth, Smith, Knight, Nyland, Harrison and Erby are top prospects to join Harris and Nolan in the front line. Kraska, Spilde, Hams and Kliner are all battling for the point guard position. Hams, an all-state selection with the Prowlers last winter, has been impressive in practice drills.

With the talent available, Engelman says "The pressure is on the coach. I think we would be disappointed if we don't win our division. I would expect to win it, but we always expect to have a lot of trouble in our division. Fergus Falls, Crookston and Brainerd will always be tough."

But Northland has won or shared the Northwest Division title five times in the past seven years. This year, in addition to the Northwest Division pennant, the Northmen have their sights set on the MJCAA state tournament title.

"I don't think there's any reason to say those goals are out of sight for us," offered Engelman. "I think we will be able to do all the things we need to do to win."

The public can watch the Northmen free of charge Tuesday during a 7:30 p.m. sophomore - freshman scrimmage, and again Saturday, Nov. 29, when the Northmen will host their annual alumni game. All former Northland basketball players in the area are invited to participate in the 7:30 p.m. game.

Northland finished 17-9 a year ago, losing to Golden Valley Lutheran 103-90 in the semifinals of the MJCAA state tournament.

PERSISTENCE PAID OFF for Murray Dicken Sunday when four miles worth of tracking produced this impressive rack on a deer hunt in the Fourtown area. The animal, hit in the leg earlier by another hunter, finally showed himself again about 3:30 p.m. after the long march. The 1980 firearms deer hunting season ended Sunday, with hunters reporting good success throughout northwestern Minnesota.

1980-81 Sno Pro Season Starts Dec. 6-7 . . .

Arctic Cat Drivers Have Experienced Support Crew

Over three quarters of a century of racing experience will back up drivers Bob Elsner and Jim Dimmerman when Team Arctic hits the Sno Pro snowmobile racing circuit for the 1980-81 season, beginning Dec. 6-7 in Winnipeg, Man. Headed by crew chief Dave Thompson and team manager Dennis Zulawski, Team Arctic competitiveness will again be produced by mechanic Durmont Wahl in the pits, while Glen Follett and Larry Coltom coordinate engine and clutching functions in Thief River Falls.

Traditions are not easily broken for these men, where at Arctic Cat, the tradition is winning. Last year meant 22 first place finishes in three racing classes. It also meant countless hours of working on scalding engines in the frost-bitten trenches of Beausejour, Alexandria, Superior, Portland, Eagle River, Peterborough and many more racing sites.

Winning keeps the support team working in late-night sessions at the race shop, making sure the clutching is matched exactly for the track and temperature, the carburetor properly jetted and the suspension set just right. Over the years, each one of these men have gone through the test of fire and ice on the Sno Pro circuit. Above all, they know winning does not come easy.

"The Arctic support team is invaluable," says Dimmerman. "Winning races is a fifty-fifty effort. I'm only as good as my mechanic and crew."

According to Dimmerman, minimizing breakdowns on the track is particularly important this year with only one racing class. "The inability to finish a race is generally caused by an engine failure or burn down. The support team's ability to keep the machine in good condition is crucial.

"If you lose your sled this year, there won't be a 250 or 440 class to compensate for it. Fortunately, my breakdown rate is very low compared to most. My support team can take credit for that!"

Preparation for the racing season begins long before the first snowfall. In early spring, Thompson, Zulawski and the others gather with Elsner and Dimmerman to discuss the problems of the past season and ideas for the next. A design concept is worked out for the new year's Sno Pro sled. Materials are ordered, and work begins on a prototype. A great deal of the work in the summer months is done on an engine dynomometer, with Coltom and Follett matching clutching to engine power.

With the first ground freeze winter testing begins. This affords a step-by-step analysis of each component-system in an attempt to eliminate problems. It also forms the basis for design development of new systems and adjustments.

Once the racing season begins, efforts of the entire crew are directed to putting the drivers out in front — and keeping them there. The week before a race, the sled is field tested constantly; Elsner runs 75 laps daily. Adjustments and fine tuning completed, the machine is loaded on the truck and transported to the race site. The crew rejoins the effort on the day before the race. "Hot laps" are run right before race time to iron out any last minute problems.

Winning is not new to the Team Arctic support crew, but to some, it has come in different ways over the years.

Dave Thompson

Even a bone-shattering accident at Eagle River in 1976 could not keep Dave Thompson off the track. As one of snowmobiling's most avid and successful racers, Thompson shook off a wheelchair and 72 days in the hospital to resume his racing career the following season. Beginning his career with Arctic in 1968 as a racer-mechanic, he quickly made a name for himself with impressive victories in Canada and the United States, including Peterborough, West Yellowstone and Rhinelander.

Today, the Greenbush native devotes full time to the behind the scenes efforts for Team Arctic. As crew chief, he is responsible for budgeting and travel, ordering of parts and materials, and is an advisor on design input for the Sno Pro racers.

Dennis Zulawski

From his original home in Foley, Dennis Zulawski joined Arctic as a research and development technician in 1971. He has served a hitch in the Navy and has studied engineering at St. Cloud State University.

As team manager, Zulawski's responsibilities include working out the basic design of each Sno Pro sled, and following its progress from prototype through production. He uses three criteria for this: (1) input data from testing procedures; (2) comments from the drivers and mechanics; and (3) direct observation of working models on the test track. He is also involved in performance engineering on consumer models in the off season.

Larry Coltom

After joining Arctic in 1967, Larry Coltom began his competitive career by signing a company notice for employees interested in racing. From there, he went on to become one of Arctic's most successful drivers before retiring in 1977. Victories amassed include the West Yellowstone Round-Up; the Kawartha Cup Championships at Peterborough, Ontario; and the Hetteen Cup in Alexandria. Coltom was "Sno Pro Driver of the Year" in 1976.

As the clutching expert for this year's effort, he is gearing up to be an integral part in the Arctic Cat quest for increased acceleration and maximum performance as the performance evaluation engineer.

Glen Follett

Glen Follett is Team Arctic's engine development expert. Working closely with Larry Coltom, Follett, who hails from Moorhead, will be on call all season for major overhauls or design changes.

Follett, who started with Arctic in 1970 as an engine mechanic and test driver, has also done some racing on his own. He cites the competitiveness of the entire crew as a major factor in its consistent performance and winning attitude.

Duane Gram

Jim Dimmerman's ability to finish nearly all Sno Pro races is due in large part to his meticulous mechanic Duane Gram. Gram's attention to detail and his all-out dedication to Team Arctic has resulted in innumerable racing victories for company drivers over the years. As a Team Arctic mechanic for 14 years, Gram knows the oval track and Sno Pro sleds inside and out. Because of his expertise, it will continue to be a rare happening when Dimmerman's sled does not perform to maximum levels.

When not working on Team Arctic sleds, Gram retires to his farm north of Thief River Falls.

Durmont Wahl

Primary changes in racing sleds over the last ten years are the result of the increased role handling plays in winning races. Durmont Wahl, a veteran mechanic and one of the best in the business, checks all crucial systems between heats making sure that the driver has the fine edge he needs to maneuver his sled across the finish line first. During the week in Thief River Falls, Wahl spends his time building and rebuilding the sleds until optimum performance is achieved.

Born in Greenbush and a boyhood friend of Dave Thompson, Wahl joined Arctic Cat ten years ago as a mechanic, where he has been perfecting his trade over since.

OVER THREE QUARTERS of a century of racing experience will back up Team Arctic drivers Bob Elsner and Jim Dimmerman when Arctic Cat hits the Sno Pro racing circuit in 1980-81. The company's 15th year of racing begins Dec. 6-7 in Winnipeg, Man. Team Arctic's crew members include, left to right, crew chief Dave Thompson, Dimmerman and Elsner, team manager Dennis Zulawski and mechanic Durmont Wahl. Not pictured is mechanic Duane Gram.

1981 Duck Stamp To Feature Ruddy Ducks

South Dakota artist John A. Wilson's tempera painting of male and female ruddy ducks sitting on the water won the 1981-82 federal duck stamp competition November 6 at the Department of the Interior in Washington, D.C.

Wilson's entry topped a record 1,507 paintings in the federal government's only regularly sponsored art contest. The 51-year-old sign painter and designer from Watertown, joins the prestigious circle of duck stamp winners in the art world.

The design will be reproduced on next year's migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp which must be purchased by waterfowl hunters 16 years of age or older. Many stamps are also bought by other conservationists interested in habitat preservation and by a growing number of stamp collectors. Revenues from sales of this stamp, popularly called the "Duck Stamp," are used to buy additional wetlands and waterfowl habitat under a program administered by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Wilson, a self-taught artist, has worked for the Stein Sign Display company in Watertown for 25 years as a designer of plastic and neon signs. "I'm in a daze," he said when telephoned at his job and informed of his first-place win. "I'm just shaking like a leaf! I imagine the duck stamp is going to mean a big change in my life."

The first South Dakotan to win the contest, Wilson had competed unsuccessfully in the last two federal duck stamp showings with his designs of bufflehead ducks and blue geese. He chose to depict the drake and hen ruddies on a pool of still water "simply because it was a species that hadn't been on the stamp in a long time and I felt that there wouldn't be too many others to compete against. I strive for accuracy and for something that I think people will like."

The ruddy is a small species of duck, averaging 15 inches long and little more than a pound in weight. The ruddy duck often dives or swims away from danger rather than flying; when flying, its small wings beat so fast they resemble those of a bumblebee.

To produce his entry, the artist used a medium called "gouache," a premixture of opaque colors ground in water.

Wilson was the winner of the 1979 and 1981 South Dakota pheasant restoration stamp design contests. He also placed second and fourth in two recent state duck stamp contests.

A fisherman and hunter of ducks, geese and pheasants since his childhood, Wilson first became interested in wildlife art in the past five years, when the state contests attracted his attention. After graduating from high school in Sisseton, he spent eight years in the U.S. Air Force. He went on to complete a year of training in architectural drafting before becoming a sign painter, first in Aberdeen and later in Watertown.

Daniel S. Smith of Minneapolis, won second place this year, with his painting of lesser snow and blue geese and Ann D. Dohoney, of Shawnee, Kansas took third place with her depiction of a redhead duck.

Judges for this year's contest were Dr. Frank Bellrose, wildlife specialist with the Illinois natural history survey; Charles Cadieux, past president of the outdoor writers association of America, Inc., of Albuquerque, New Mexico; Billy Joe Cross, regional supervisor for Ducks Unlimited, Inc., and a former member of the Mississippi Game and Fish Commission; Cindy Dixon Connor, editor of Waterfowler's World, of Memphis, Tennessee; and Hugh Galbreath, wildlife manager of the Remington farms game management area in Chestertown, Maryland. Leonard Buckley of the bureau of engraving and printing served as technical advisor.

Prior to 1949, wildlife artists were commissioned to provide a design for the annual stamp. Since that time, the design has been chosen by a contest open to all artists who are residents or citizens of the United States. Contestants are allowed only one entry apiece.

The winner's financial reward is significant. The federal government offers no prize to the winner other than a sheet of the following year's duck stamps, but commercial wildlife art dealers in the past have been eager to market limited edition reprints of the design. The contest has also served to uncover the talent of previously unknown wildlife artists.

The colorful stamps constitute the longest running, annually issued series of stamps in U.S. revenue or postage stamp history.

Since 1934, when duck stamps first went on sale, nearly 2.5 million acres of prime waterfowl habitat have been acquired with over $367 million in revenue ($225 million from duck stamp receipts and $142 million from accelerated wetlands acquisition loan funds). By purchasing the stamps, more than 2.2 million conservationists provide over $16.5 million in revenue yearly.

Interior Department encourages non-hunters who also enjoy wildlife through photography, birdwatching, and other activities to contribute to the United States conservation effort by buying a duck stamp. Next year's $7.50 issue will go on sale at post offices on July 1, 1981.

State Hospital Seeks Gifts For Christmas

Through the generosity of many area organizations and individuals, the Christmas season was brightened last year for 562 residents of the Fergus Falls state hospital.

The state hospital volunteer council is again in need of support for its annual Christmas gift appeal, "Operation Merry Christmas — 1980". Many donors prefer to send a monetary contribution as their gift, thereby allowing the volunteer council to buy those gifts which would most help to brighten Christmas for each hospital resident. Monetary donations and gifts should be mailed by December 10 to the Fergus Falls State Hospital Volunteer Council, Box 157, Fergus Falls, MN 56537.

During 1979, the hospital provided residential care, treatment and educational services for over 2,100 handicapped persons from west central and northwestern Minnesota who suffer from disabilities caused by mental retardation, physical disabilities, emotional problems and chemical dependency problems.

Decisions? Decisions?

Many people refuse to make a decision. You know who they are, they keep on saying the same old thing.

"We should have bought 10 years ago."

Let me show you an ad for a farm that ran in the November 4, 1970 addition of the Thief River Falls times.

600 acres, 520 crop acres. $80 per acre, 15 year Contract for Deed.

You are now thinking the same thing. "We should have bought that 10 years ago. Just think, you could have bought a $48,000 farm with around a $10,000 down payment. The property would have carried itself all that time as the renter would have made the payments. Market value today on a 600 acre farm is right around $450,000-$500,000. That means you could sell the farm today with a gain of near $450,000! Imagine, a real genuine case right here in Thief River Falls where $10,000 approx. made a half million. Instead of saying: "I should have", you could now just retire on the interest dollars for the rest of your life, with no worries about whether or not the Social Security checks are going to keep coming.

Can you make a decision now? Or do you want to wait another 10 years?

We have farms in most areas.

Call and check our current farm inventory at any of our locations.

Proper Drug Use Depends On Care

by Ralph Heussner
University News Service

A 70-year-old woman whose husband had died of cancer was cleaning out the well-stocked medicine chest. She decided to keep one vial of pills, which, she recalled, the doctor said "worked just like a vitamin."

Fortunately, her daughter was a nurse who intervened before the woman began taking the medication. The daughter discovered it was not a vitamin but a potent male hormone.

An elderly man was taking five drugs, but he could identify only the one that was prescribed for sleeping. After suffering a heart attack, he was sent home with two new prescriptions. In order that he not "waste" the medications he had taken before, he began alternating the new pills with the old ones every other day so the combination "came out even." The combination also could have been fatal.

An elderly woman was taking an anticonvulsant for dizziness and hand tremors. One side-effect of the drug is depression. So she also was taking an antidepressant, the side-effects of which include unsteadiness and tremors.

Cases of drug misinformation and misuse are so widespread among elderly people that they appear to be the rule rather than the exception, according to a University of Minnesota study.

"Only 4.9 per cent of the persons from this study who were taking prescription medications were considered to have adequate information and instruction to ensure safe use of all of their prescribed medications," concluded Dorothy Lundin, who recently retired as an assistant professor of nursing to write a book on drugs and the elderly.

Lundin and her research team interviewed 61 men and women who were considered "independent elderly" — people 65 and older who were responsible for their own health care. Their research uncovered a "serious problem" in the way elderly people take their prescription drugs.

Such misuse causes economic as well as health problems.

"The consequences of noncompliance reach beyond the health and welfare of the individual patient and his family," Lundin said. "nonadherence results in the squandering of fiscal resources in wasted medication and inefficient use of hospital beds."

Studies of hospital records have shown that between 1.7 per cent and 4.5 per cent of all admissions are drug related, Lundin said. She cited the experience of one general hospital that reported that nearly 20 per cent of all patients entering the geriatric service displayed disorders directly attributable to the effects of prescribed drugs.

"The economic consequences of adverse drug effects in hospital days alone are staggering; the estimated annual cost is $3 billion," Lundin said. "If one per cent of hospitalizations under Medicare could be eliminated, there would be an annual savings of $60 million."

Efforts by doctors and pharmacists to educate the elderly on proper use of medication often are negated by the patient's age and illness, according to the study. "When an elderly person who is ill receives verbal instructions with even one medication, there is a fair chance the instructions will not be remembered," Lundin said.

Misuse also can be attributed in part to poor eyesight and hearing among the elderly. Researchers noted that 29 per cent of those 65 and older have a hearing problem and 10 per cent of the elderly population suffer from vision problems.

"Physicians and pharmacists can no longer assume the independent elderly know what they need to about their medications and know how to take them," Lundin said.

The study found elderly people generally were reluctant to ask their doctors about drug use. Interviewers repeatedly heard comments like, "The doctor had too many people waiting. I couldn't bother him," "He was too rushed," "He didn't seem interested," and "If he wanted me to know, he would have told me."

Lundin said the physician is the key to teaching the elderly about proper drug use. "Without his specific directions," she added, "there is a limit to what the pharmacist and the nurse can teach. If the physician cannot or will not educate, then let him delegate."

Lundin suggested using nurses more in teaching proper drug use. Nurses "have the potential to make the difference between patients who are properly prepared to take their medication and those who are left without adequate preparation," she said.

Lundin and researchers P. Albert Eros, Joanne Melich and Judy Sands found numerous problems with the methods by which drugs are prescribed. Doctors may omit such things as the specific hour a medication should be taken, the frequency, the regularity and what should or should not accompany the medication, such as water, orange juice or certain foods.

"For example, what does 'on an empty stomach' mean?" Lundin asked. "Will taking it after a four-hour fast meet that criterion even though it is immediately followed by a meal?"

The researchers said doctors sometimes are negligent in assigning the directions "as needed." They found one elderly citizen taking six prescription drugs, yet none of the labels gave even the prescribed number of tablets per day or any other directions. They all read "take as directed."

All health professionals share the responsibility for providing the elderly with thorough and accurate information on proper use of drugs, Lundin said. The study offers some specific suggestions:

—Post-instruction follow-up should be done whenever possible to ensure the elderly are adhering to the prescribed regimen.

—Verbal instructions should be reinforced with written specifics on when, how often and with which foods drugs should be taken.

—If the doctor is not totally familiar with the medication, then he should give the pharmacist relevant information, including the goal of the therapy, and delegate the pharmacist to complete and clarify the instructions.

—Nurses should be delegated to provide auxiliary instructions.

The study, financed by the Minnesota Health Research Program, was published in a recent edition of "Drug Intelligence and Clinical Pharmacy".

AUTOMOBILITY
Facts for Motorists

COURTESY CAN EQUAL SAFETY

Experts advise you to drive in the slower lane when traffic permits and let those who want to go faster do so.

You can get where you want to go in good time—and in a good state of mind, without abuse to yourself, your car or your ego, if you follow the Golden Rule. So say the experts at the Automobility Foundation, a nationwide non-profit organization intended to help preserve the driving public's freedom of mobility. The Foundation has some suggestions on how to drive courteously, safely and comfortably.

1. Pull over, when possible, for faster traffic that comes up behind you in the left lane. If someone refuses to move over for you, try to hold your temper and find a safe way around at the first opportunity.

2. Use your indicator, or give the proper hand signal whenever you're planning a turn.

3. Let people out, one or two at a time, from entrance ramps, side streets and even parking lots when it's practical to do so. Wave "thanks" when people do the same for you.

4. Try not to cut others off in traffic and don't let it bother you when someone does it to you. According to Wayne Gregory of the National Safety Council, "It's not just reducing speed or wearing seat belts that will reduce accidents . . . there's also 'driver behavior.'" Fully 85 percent of all accidents on America's roads involve driver error. A little care, courtesy and cooperation can help keep you out of such statistics.

Commend State For Nuclear Preparedness

"We are pleased with the constructive evaluation which the federal government has given our nuclear preparedness plan," said Minnesota public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic, following a successful test of the plan on October 14.

Summarizing reaction of the Federal emergency management agency which sent 34 inspectors to Minnesota for the exercise, Patrick H. McCollough, FEMA regional director of plans and preparedness, said, "Your people know what they are supposed to do and they did it quite well."

Mock test involved the Prairie Island nuclear power plant near Red Wing and "affected" residents of Red Wing and surrounding areas.

McCollough gave the state a passing grade, saying that its division of emergency services of the Department of Public Safety, Goodhue county and City of Red Wing officials "were interested in and capable of protecting the health and welfare of Minnesotans."

Within minutes of the 1:03 p.m. report of "trouble" at the power plant, during the exercise, Minnesota Gov. Albert H. Quie and Public Safety Commissioner Sopsic were at the Emergency Operations center at the Capitol. Subsequently, Gov. Quie was later called upon to simulate an emergency declaration.

Exercise was graded in the following categories: Accident assessment, general security, public information, communications, evacuation and direction-control. McCollough indicated that some "fine tuning" of procedures was recommended but he expressed confidence in the ability of everyone involved to make the necessary adjustments.

Plan was critiqued Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 15, in the Community Room of the Red Wing Public Library. A public meeting, held that evening, attracted about 50 people. Public session was held to allow comment on the plan.

Ralph Olmos, director of Emergency Services, chaired the evening meeting. Other speakers included: Dean Massett, Red Wing civil defense director; Dee Krause, Emergency Services nuclear planner; Alice Dolezal, State Department of Public Health; William Frederick, Northern States Power Co., and McCollough.

The entire series of events, including a pre-exercise drill October 2, attracted considerable media attention. All four Twin Cities television stations covered the critique session at Red Wing. More than 25 newspaper and broadcast representatives reported on the Oct. 2 and Oct. 14 activities.

Another round of exercises is planned for the Monticello Nuclear Power Plant early in 1981.

Dress Formal

Annoying, isn't it? We who love to think of ourselves as FREE are always being asked to conform. And if we show our spirit of independence by ignoring some stuffy convention — the shock wave registers on society's seismograph like an earthquake.

Despite manners and customs shouldn't each of us be making his own decisions?

Important decisions — moral and spiritual, should never be based on conformity. They must express our faith, always keeping God's purposes in focus.

Every one of us is free to search the Bible's truth. In God's Word we find foundations on which to build our lives. In His promises we discover our hope and destiny.

Decisions we base on the Bible's truth today will be an influence for good in society tomorrow.

The Growing Rewards Of Tennis

Jimmy Connors would love to win the $400,000 Volvo Masters. Borg and McEnroe may not let him.

One of the most important and financially rewarding titles in professional sports will be decided January 14-18 when 16 of the world's top tennis players compete in the Volvo Masters in Madison Square Garden in New York.

Look for defending champion Bjorn Borg, 1979 champion John McEnroe and 1978 champion Jimmy Connors to be vying for the $400,000 in prize money. Other top tennis personalities likely to be leading the action are Wojtek Fibak, Vitas Gerulaitis, Brian Gottfried, Ivan Lendl, Gene Mayer, Stan Smith, Harold Solomon, Roscoe Tanner, Eliot Teltscher and Guillermo Vilas.

Like Borg, McEnroe and Connors, they are expected to finish the tennis season among the top eight singles players and top four doubles teams in cumulative 1980 Volvo Grand Prix points standings, and thus qualify for a chance to become the champion of the year-long $12 million Volvo Grand Prix circuit encompassing 92 events in 28 countries.

Volvo, the International automobile company with headquarters in Gothenburg, Sweden, sponsors the Volvo Grand Prix and the Volvo Masters because market research shows that people who are interested in tennis are often the same people who buy Volvos.

Looking For Answers

Following comment is from "Washington Report".

We note that the issue of Social Security is receiving significant attention in the presidential campaign. That is a welcome development.

The subject is one of the most complex facing the government, and it is important that the public be aware of the candidates' views. A full-scale national debate on the future of the system could come as early as next year. Thus, the current discussion serves an important purpose by alerting everyone who has a stake in Social Security — which means nearly all Americans — to the forthcoming review.

Before that review is completed, major and difficult decisions will have to be made. Those decisions will likely set basic policy for Social Security well into the next century.

The major goal of the review will be to keep the system fiscally sound. The White House, Congress, the elderly who receive benefits and the taxpayers who finance them all will be involved.

Any comprehensive study of Social Security must begin with the understanding that the system cannot be kept sound by fiat or hope. It will remain sound only so long as wage-earners agree to accept the continuing tax increases needed to keep it so.

That agreement cannot be assumed. The Social Security tax rate will go to 6.65 per cent in January, which will cap a 58-per cent growth in that levy over the past 15 years. The wages subject to the tax rate, $6,600 in 1966, will go to $29,700 next year, a 350 per cent increase.

Both the tax rate and wage base will keep rising sharply during the 1980s. The maximum tax paid by workers — and matched by their employers — was $277 in 1966 but will be $1,975 next year.

In 1977, Congress passed the largest peacetime tax increase in the nation's history — $270 billion over 10 years — to shore up the finances of this sytem. But even that will not be enough to assure solvency over the long term.

By 1990, 7.65 per cent of each worker's pay is expected to be deducted for Social Security taxes. The maximum individual levy will be over $3,500 — a combined tax of more than $7,000 for employer and employee.

Some experts believe that basic reforms must be undertaken to keep costs from getting completely out of hand and generating a taxpayer revolt.

On proposed reform that has received significant attention already would be development of a price index tailored to the buying habits of the retired, rather than the present gearing of benefits to the general Consumer Price Index.

That approach should be considered seriously. It contains basic elements of fairness to both taxpayers and beneficiaries.

It is unlikely, however, that decisions taken ultimately to strengthen Social Security will find universal favor with both taxpayers and beneficiaries. The answers will be neither financially nor politically easy.

But those answers must be found if the retirement system is to be preserved to fulfill its basic purpose.

Comparative Numbers

Columnist William Loeb of the Manchester (N.H.) Union Leader provides some numbers which people interested in maintaining freedom of ownership of firearms should keep available to support their positions. Here is what Loeb writes:

Here in New Hampshire, there is not much agitation by the anti-gun nuts against guns. However, in other parts of the country, the more radical Leftist areas, there is.

One of the great lies that the anti-gun people put out is to say the 24,000 deaths a year are caused by guns.

It is, therefore, very interesting to view the reports of the National Safety Council for the years 1976, 1977 and 1978. They tell an entirely different story.

In 1976, 47,038 people were killed in motor vehicle accidents, whereas only 2,059 people were killed due to firearms.

In 1977, 49,510 deaths were caused by motor vehicle accidents as opposed to 1,982 due to firearms.

In 1978, the figure was 51,500 for motor vehicle accidents and 1,800 for firearms.

The second biggest cause of accidental deaths were falls: 14,136 in 1976; 13,773 in 1977, and 13,800 in 1978.

The next largest cause of accidental deaths was drowning: 6,827 in 1976; 7,126 in 1977, and 6,900 in 1978.

Fires and burns caused by fires followed closely: 6,338 in 1976; 6,357 in 1977, and 6,300 in 1978.

Choking on some kind of food or object: 3,033 in 1976; 3,037 in 1977, and 2,900 in 1978.

Poison (solid or liquid): 4,161 in 1976; 3,374 in 1977, and 3,400 in 1978.

Poison by gas fumes: 1,569 in 1976; 1,596 in 1977, and 1,700 in 1978.

Next to the last two figures were firearms: 2,059 in 1976; 1,982 in 1977 and 1,800 in 1978.

This translates, when divided by 100,000 population, to: 21.9 per hundred thousand for motor vehicle deaths in 1976; 22.9 in 1977 and 23.6 in 1978. Falls, 6.6 in 1976, 6.4 in 1977 and 6.3 in 1978.

Drowning 3.2 in 1976, 3.3 in 1977 and 3.2 in 1978.

Fires and burns 3.0 in 1976, 2.9 in 1977 and 2.9 in 1978.

Choking on some food or foreign object was consistent with 1.4 in 1976, 1.5 in 1977 and 1.3 in 1978.

Poison by solid or liquid was 1.9 in 1976, 1.6 in 1977 and 1.6 in 1978.

Firearms was 1.0 in 1976, 0.9 in 1977, and 0.8 in 1978.

Finally, poison by gas was 0.7 in 1976, 0.7 in 1977 and 0.8 in 1978.

These figures put out by a completely impartial, authoritative organization reveal that firearms are way down the line as causes of accidental deaths. However, facts never mean anything to people who want to frighten their audiences by lying to them in order to persuade them to their viewpoint.

Ain't It The Truth?!

The difference between idealism and realism in today's society is pointed out in this item from a publication of the Wisconsin school boards organization:

"Typical of the budget cuts many school boards are making is the decision by some of them to abandon towel service for physical education students and athletics. While seemingly of minor significance, such action could have widespread implications for the future.

"Parents who successfully cope with the challenge of providing towels for their offspring might gain enough self-reliance to serve them breakfast at home. As parents become more confident in their own abilities, they might also provide transportation and insurance, and driver training, and perhaps even pack their lunches and oversee the routine medical care offered by the school nurse.

"As the movement snowballs, schools would eventually be in the position of having nothing to do but educate the students. That, of course, is the idealist viewpoint; the realist would predict that the state will mandate towel service."

Bottomless Bucket

The leaky bucket theory of government now has a corollary axiom — the bottomless bucket, according to the U.S. chamber of commerce.

Under the leaky bucket theory, it is taken for granted that all tasks assigned or taken over by the federal government automatically will cost more due to waste, inefficiency or fraud.

One of the more notorious evidences of this theory is a study made several years ago of the former department of health, education and welfare (HEW), which showed that fraud, abuse and waste in its programs cost taxpayers $6.3 to $7.4 billion a year.

Now it develops that government leakages occur not only when the government spends money but when it gives it away. According to Oklahoma officials, federal grants totaling $1 million for a technical education program were turned down because it would have cost $3 to administer every $1 sent from Washington.

The state's regents of higher education concluded they could not afford to spend approximately 80 per cent of the money on paperwork and other compliance requirements. One of the conditions would have required the state to do followup studies on the 27,000 students who take part in the program each year, as well as followups on their employers.

Congress should gradually reduce federal spending, which now is approximately 22 per cent of national income, to a more reasonable 20 per cent in two years, the chamber says. The less the government ladles out in buckets the less it costs taxpayers in leakage.

Borrowed Nonsense:

"It's not that I'm an underachiever," the student rationalized about his report card. "Let's just say that my teachers are overexpectors."

EPILEPSY

Many people don't know the facts about epilepsy: It is not a disease. It is not contagious. It is not inherited.

Literature and history have managed to make epilepsy—a rather common condition—a source of myth and misunderstanding.

Alexander the Great, Alfred Nobel, Dostoyevski suffered from it, as do two million Americans today—one out of a hundred.

Among the common myths about epilepsy is what causes it. It may be caused by anything that injures the brain—accidents, infections, tumors, birth injuries. But it's not genetically inherited and it's not contagious. Thus, it is not a disease, but a condition: a symptom of disturbed electrical activity in the brain.

If a person's brain is damaged, some of the 12 billion nerve cells may malfunction, disrupting the normally smooth-running pattern of electrical activity. The damaged cells "overload."

The result of this temporary overload is a seizure which causes some body activities to go awry. There's a sudden loss or disturbance of consciousness. The types of seizures range from convulsions to momentary lapses of attention.

There's no pain with the seizure, and usually no long-term after-effects. Many people who've had seizures, especially mild ones, are unaware they've had one.

Because damaged brain cells cannot be repaired, there's no cure for epilepsy. Some people—notably children—do appear to outgrow it. About 80 percent of epileptic seizures can be controlled partially or totally by medication, so many people with epilepsy remain virtually seizure-free for a lifetime.

An interesting, easy-to-read booklet on epilepsy, "Breaking Down the Walls of Misunderstanding," is available free by sending a stamped, self-addressed, long business envelope to "Epilepsy," Department 383NA, Abbott Laboratories, Abbott Park, North Chicago, IL 60064.
